Why
Will people pay rent when houses and lots can be purchased on such easy terms as are offered by the undesigned. Come and inspect our work and see for yourselves how we construct our houses. Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. I am offering good building lots, and will build solid brick houses, nine-inch walls, strapped and lathed, two stories, for less money than you can buy frame or veneered buildings. We cordially invite those who anticipate renting or buying to inspect our work and prove for themselves that our houses are not merely built to sell. Every house I've sold gives first-class satisfaction, and I am determined that every house I build shall be a standing testimony to honest building. HON. MR. ROSS' ADDRESS.

In reference to a recent letter addressed to Mr. Carnegie by Mr. Stratton, in which the latter expressed a desire that the campaign meetings should be conducted separately, it may be mentioned that Hon. G. W. Ross, who will speak in the Opera House on Friday evening, personally, prefers discussion, and at his request Mr. Stratton waives the position taken in the letter referred to, and forwarded to Mr. Carnegie a copy of the following letter this morning. It is to be hoped that Mr. Carnegie will avail himself of the offer thus presented.—

NOVEMBER 24th.

John Carnegie, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—As the Hon. Mr. Ross has expressed a desire that you be allowed a hearing at my meeting on Friday evening, I beg to invite you to same, and I am willing to make the following arrangement: Chair to be taken at 7.30; an address by myself; when you will be allowed one hour to state your views; after which Mr. Ross will speak. Hoping that you will see your way to be present and take part, I am

Yours truly,
J. R. STRATTON.

Since writing the above the following reply was received from Mr. Carnegie:

STERBOROUGH, Nov. 24th, 1886.

J. R. Stratton, Esq.:

DEAR SIR,—I am in receipt of yours of this day's date inviting me to yours and Mr. Ross's meeting on Friday evening, and in reply I beg to say that it is my intention to accept the same.

Yours truly,
JOHN CARNEGIE.

MORE CANDIDATES IN THE FIELD.

West Northumberland, Kingston, Welland, North Perth and South Waterloo.

COBOURG, Nov. 23.—The Reformers of West Northumberland to-day selected C. C. Field, Mayor of Cobourg, as their candidate for the Local Legislature.

KINGSTON, Nov. 23.—John L. Whiting, Mayor, was to-day nominated in the Reform interest, and Jas. H. Metcalfe, the sitting member, in the Conservative interest for the Local Legislature for this city.

WELLAND, Nov. 23.—At a reform meeting held in Crowland to-day Col. J. F. Morin, M.P.P., was re-nominated as a candidate for Welland County.

STRATFORD, Nov. 23.—The Conservative convention for North Perth met to day. S. R. Hesson, the sitting member, was re-nominated as candidate for the House of Commons, as was also Geo. Hess, M.P.P., for the Legislative Assembly.

GALT, Nov. 23.—At the South Waterloo Conservative convention held at Preston today, Thomas Cowan of Galt was nominated for the Dominion House, and F. Holwell of Petersburg for the Local House. Both nominations were accepted.

Lord Lansdowne's Tenants.

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—In explanation of the cable despatch that the Governor-General's tenants in Ireland had refused to pay their rent it is stated that Lord Lansdowne's estates are situated mostly in Kerry, and upon his recent visit, finding the tenants in poor condition, he voluntarily made a reduction below judicial rents of 20 to 25 per cent. Lord Lansdowne, however, has other small estates in different parts of Ireland, and on some of these reductions were made, and on others not, as they were not considered necessary, the tenantry being quite able to pay the judicial rents. If a refusal to pay has taken place at all it will be on one of these small estates, where the tenants hearing of the reductions made elsewhere, have concluded that they were being unjustly dealt with.

Battenburg's Boy.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Princess Beatrice, wife of Prince Henry of Battenburg, and youngest daughter of Queen Victoria, has given birth to a son. Both the mother and son are doing well. Lord Randolph Churchill was the minister in attendance at the accouchment.

A great scare was caused throughout the West End this afternoon by the firing of cannon in St. James' Park to celebrate the birth of the Queen's new grandchild. A dense fog was prevailing at the time, and for a while the detonations were believed to be those of some dynamite attack.

Hamilton Reformers Organizing.

HAMILTON, Nov. 23.—The Hamilton Reform Association held a rousing meeting last night. T. H. Macpherson was elected President, the other officers being: Vice-Presidents, J. S. Lillis, Adam Laidlaw, Ald. Jas. Mathews and Andrew Leitch; Secretary, G. F. Jelfs; Treasurer, David McLellan. Mr. Awrey and Mr. Gibson spoke.

The name of the old man accidentally killed at Oaklands Jersey Farm yesterday was Marriotts, and not Lobb, as published. Deceased lived in this city.

Rebellion in Afghanistan.

BOMBAY, Nov. 23.—A party of merchants from Ghuznee report that the Ghilzais have beaten the Ameer of Afghanistan's troops, and also say that the rebellion is still rapidly spreading under the influence of religious fanatics who lead the insurgents. Many of the Ameer's troops are also joining the rebels owing to the honorable reception given to the members of the British-Afghan Boundary Commission by the Ameer, which gave rise to a suspicion that he intended to yield to British occupation.

Reduction of Rents Demanded.

KAULBARS CENSURED

THE BUDGET COMMITTEE PRESSED TO AMEND ITS REPORT.

BERLIN, Nov. 23.—It is stated that under pressure from the German and Polish members of the Austrian delegation, the Budget Committee's report has been amended so as to contain a censure of Gen. Kaulbars and to make less emphatic the passage referring to the peaceful character of the relations between Austria and Russia.

The entire press of Germany express delight over the report of the Government's refusal to assume protection of the Russians in Bulgaria on the occasion of Kaulbars' departure.

It is officially denied here that the German consul at Sofia refused to take the Russians remaining in Bulgaria, after Kaulbars' departure, under German protection, when requested to do so by the retiring agent. The official denial states that what happened was this: The Russian Government asked Germany if the official who remained at Sofia in charge of the Russian archives might, in case of necessity, ask the German consul to protect the Russian subjects, and Germany replied: "Yes."

Italy for Peace on the Berlin Treaty.

ROME, Nov. 23.—In a green book just issued by the Government it is shown that Count Derobelant, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has sent a circular letter to each of the powers, assuring all that Italy is desirous of European concert to maintain peace on the basis of the Berlin treaty and the independence of the Balkan states.

Unworthy the Agent of a Great Power.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A despatch from Berlin says Count Herbert Bismarck had a long interview to-day with Count Schouvaloff, Russian Ambassador at Berlin, in the course of which the latter complained bitterly of the tone adopted by the official German Press towards General Kaulbars. It is reported Count Herbert replied warmly that General Kaulbars' proceedings in Bulgaria were unworthy the agent of a great power.

Kaulbars at Constantinople.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 23.—General Kaulbars visited the Grand Vizier and the Minister of Foreign Affairs to-day. The Turkish Ambassador to Russia has received orders to remain here for the present.

NINE THOUSAND MEN KILLED.

Bloody Engagement Between Portuguese and Natives in Southeastern Africa.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Advices from Durban, Nov. 3rd, state that a general and apparently successful revolt is in progress among the natives against Portuguese authority in Southeast Africa.

An American missionary, Rev. Mr. Wilcox, has arrived in Durban from the Portuguese settlement on the East coast above the Transvaal. He reports as follows: The natives at Inhambian, a Portuguese port 200 miles above Delagoa Bay, rose up against Portuguese taxation and murdered the collector. On October 23 a battle was fought between 8000 Portuguese and friendly natives on one side and 30,000 hostile natives on the other. The Portuguese were defeated and routed, and the loss in killed on both sides is estimated at 9000 men.

Mr. Wilcox says the Governor of Mozambique has gone into the country to endeavor to suppress the revolt and save the port of Inhambian from falling into the hands of the insurgents. The town was barricaded when the missionary last heard from it, and the women and children had been removed to ships lying in the roadstead. The entire country round about the town had already been abandoned by the Portuguese, and arrangements had been made to remove the population of Inhambian to sea if the hostile natives attacked the town in force.

Dr. Parker Opposed to Disestablishment.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Rev. Jos. Parker, D.D., pastor of the City Temple, publishes a letter opposing the inclusion in the Liberal party platform of a plank favoring disestablishment. He says that to advocate disestablishment just now would be suicide for the Liberals. All the English aristocracy to a man would join the Conservatives. Until the whole country is educated to the fact that disestablishment to the church is the same as emancipation to the slave, disestablishment will be impossible.

French Deputies Reduce Cabinet Credits.

PARIS, Nov. 23.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day voted in favor of a reduction of 625,000 francs in the expenditure of central administration; a reduction of 150,000 francs in payments to the finance ministry. The Chamber referred the question of other reductions to the consideration of M. Sadi-Carnot, the Minister of Finance. After several divisions it was decided to discuss amendments reducing other credits demanded by the Government. The attitude of the Chamber toward the Government has created a sensation. Reports are current that several members of the cabinet are about to resign, and that four under secretaries have already tendered their resignations.

The Adams-Coleridge Scandal.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Mildred Adams has instituted an action for slander against her father, Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, because of his hints in justifying his conduct towards her husband, Charles W. Adams, that the latter had managed to induce her to assume improper relations with him before the marriage in order to secure her hand and fortune.

Snow Storms in Austria.

VIENNA, Nov. 23.—There have been heavy snow storms in Upper Austria. Upon the Schneeberg range the snow is six feet deep. Minister Von Catherin, the secretary of Archduke Charles Louis, was lost in a mountain pass for forty-eight hours. When found he was at the point of death, but he has since recovered.

McQuade's Jury Cannot Agree.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The jury in the case of McQuade, charged with accepting a bribe in the matter of the Broadway Railway franchise, came into court after a twenty-hour session and reported that they were unable to agree. The Recorder sent them back till 11 o'clock to-night. At 9 o'clock to-night the jury again reported that they were unable to agree. They were then locked up for the night.

The President Preparing His Message.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—All the members of the Cabinet were present at the meeting to-day except Secretary Manning. The session was devoted entirely to the consideration of the President's message. It is understood that the message will be much shorter than the one submitted to Congress last year. Secretary Manning remained at his house to-day working upon his annual report.

A Brutal Attack.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 23.—Harry McGinnis and F. A. Brown, livery stable employes, quarrelled about a pair of boots. While McGinnis was washing a carriage Brown sneaked up behind him and struck him with a pickaxe, burying the point five inches in McGinnis' back. The latter will die.

Coopers on Strike at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 23.—About one thousand coopers are out on a strike here, demanding an advance in the scale of wages of from 10 to 25 per cent. The outlook promises a long lock out.

She Wouldn't Be a Nun.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., Nov. 23.—Mary Hunt, a pretty brunette, 21 years of age, who was an inmate of St. Joseph's Convent, has disappeared. She had been in the convent a year, and six months ago took the white veil. A relative in Hoboken died recently, leaving her $50000, and this, it is said, has something to do with her disappearance. Her relatives say they know nothing of her whereabouts.

DR. WEIR ARRESTED.

The Ossoda Physician Taken Night of the Grave Charges Against Him.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Last month Dr. Weir disappeared from Ossoda, Mich., where he ran a private hospital, Mabel Clark, aged 20, having made the statement that while under the doctor's care he had repeatedly violated her person. The girl died two or three days later, and a coroner's jury returned a verdict that her death resulted from injuries inflicted by Weir. The town was indignant, especially the ladies, and $2000 was offered as a reward for the arrest of Weir.

From letters Weir wrote to Ossoda under the name of R. Anderson, the Ossoda authorities learned that he was in this city and notified the Sheriff and police to that effect, giving at the same time a description of him. In the meantime Weir, who had been hanging around the Fifth Ward a good part of his time playing pool and gaining a reputation for himself as a teller of Dutch and other stories, took a train for the west on Nov. 11, and that was the last heard of him until last night, when he stepped off the evening train from the west at Richmond-street depot and towards night found himself in his London East haunts. He dropped into Appleton's Hotel and got a drink. While walking from there to Westbrook's he was spotted by P. C. Nickle, who was on that beat. Nickle followed Weir into the hotel and calling him out informed him that he was wanted on a charge of murder. Weir took the matter very coolly. He remarked there had been some fuss about a prominent who had died after being taken from the hospital, but the case could not be serious. He was locked in the cells all night and this morning remanded till Monday.

Weir is an old London boy, having been raised in London Township, and is a brother of Police Constable Weir of the city force. He had about $600 in his possession when arrested. Mr. E. Meredith, Q.C., has been retained by the accused, and he will not go back to Michigan without a stubborn fight.

Boston's Wholesale Embezzler.

BOSTON, Nov. 23.—This morning William Read, treasurer of the South Boston Horse Railroad Company, was arrested on a charge of embezzling $160,000 in cash and $160,000 in an over issue of stock of the company. It is charged that the embezzlement has been going on five or six years.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE DAILY EXAMINER.

Our readers will, no doubt, be surprised and, we are sure, pleased to receive this issue of the DAILY EXAMINER in an enlarged form—it being the third enlargement during the year and a half of its publication. Peterborough is the acknowledged banner town of the Province, and this latest enlargement of the DAILY EXAMINER has been decided on by its publisher, Mr. Stratton, in order that the town might have a daily journal worthy, in size and excellence, of the livest and most progressive town in the Dominion. The expense of conducting so large a daily journal is considerable, but the publisher feels that he can count upon the liberal support of public-spirited citizens, who will not allow an enterprise, undertaken largely for the credit of the town, to be without substantial encouragement, and material evidences of appreciation.

THE HAPPY FAMILY.

The Conservative family at present cannot be said to resemble the birds who in their little nests agree. The cabinet is not in a state of angelic harmony and there is decided kicking here and there in the ranks. The respectable Conservatives of Ottawa are trying to heave over to the whales, that political Jonah, Mr. McIntosh, the estimation contract broker, etc. The latter resists and both he and a Mr. Perley are in the field as candidates. The "Boy," Beatty is out for one of the Toronto's and there is a disposition to also throw him overboard, and he too resists and says he is not a felon and won't be made a martyr of. There's trouble in the camp all around. In his present sore strait Mr. Meredith has not an organ of the first class that lifts up a word in his favour. Now is certainly his time of need and it would be thought that the Conservative journals would rally to his aid and extend him some comfort, but they all appear to have agreed to let him severely alone. The two chief government organs are at lively logger heads. Sir John has ostensibly repudiated the Mail and now the Ottawa citizen says that the Mail "in its new role of an organ, turned by cranks for the delectation of cranks, is trying like blind and mad Samson of old, with its right hand of race bigotry, and its left hand of creed intolerance, to pull down the main pillars of the goodly temple of Confederation." This is a very bad state of things to exist at the beginning of an election campaign and gives very poor augury of success.

FACTS VERSUS FANCIES.

HON. MR. THOMPSON, Minister of Justice, in his stumping speech at Walkerton made the boast that the Canadian Pacific Railway, built at an expense of some hundred millions of dollars, enabled Canadians to get their tea four cents per pound cheaper. But he failed to point out that the N. P. had reduced (or failed to keep from falling) the price of wheat from $1.04 a bushel in 1878 to to 75c. or 78c. in 1886. The farmers of the country burdened themselves with taxes under belief of the false assurances of Sir John Macdonald that high taxes alone would raise the price of farm produce. It has signally failed to do so. On the other hand the price is still lower, while the rate of taxation is enormous. This year the rate of taxation will, with all the increase of population, amount to $7 per head, or $35 dollars for the average family of five, while in 1878 the rate of taxation was only $4.45 per head, or $22.25 per family. Therefore the farmer to-day, with the average family of five, pays $12.75 more taxes than he would have done in Mr. Mackenzie's last year, while the price he gets for his wheat is 28 cents less per bushel. Suppose a farmer has 200 bushels of wheat to sell, he gets now $56 less than in 1878. Add to this the $12.75 more of taxes he has to pay now than in 1878, and the farmer finds himself $68.75 worse off in the years' operations under the N. P., which was to make him rich, than under the tariff of Mr. Mackenzie's time. Apply these facts to Minister Thompson's tea story, and it will at once be seen that a bushel of wheat under N. P. prices will buy less tea than a bushel of wheat under the Mackenzie regime. Minister Thompson may seek to bamboozle the farmers, but they are too sensible to be caught with such transparent chaff.

THE English king who never smiled after the death of his favorite son would not have done for a candidate for the Local Legislature. He would have to smile for about a month every fourth year, even if his face were wrapped in gloom and glumness the other forty-seven months.

Literary Notices.

THE ART INTERCHANGE of Nov. 6th, 1886, is a most charming number. The chief attraction is a study in color of YELLOW ROSES; this shows a gracefully grouped spray of Marechal Niel roses with some green leaves, and also others of a delicate red. This very beautiful study will not only commend itself to amateurs, but also to those who like to beautify their homes by placing prettily framed bits of color on their walls. Among designs in black and white is a beautifully arranged pattern of wild roses for embroidering or painting a sofa cushion; this is exceedingly simple, but when carried out is very rich in effect. The issue also contains two suggestions for Christmas cards, one showing a full length figure, trumpet in hand, blowing the "glad tidings;" a background of stars adding to the attractiveness of the design, as does also a beautifully composed border; the second card is a small panel enclosed in a larger one, the smaller one showing a gracefully drawn female head against a charming decoratively arranged background; this little panel is framed with holly leaves and bells, making in all a very ornamental card.

A very beautiful initial letter, "B" is the fourth of an exceedingly excellent series. Against a charmingly composed background is shown the head of a female figure carrying a musical instrument; this letter can be carried out in embroidery, painting, carving or printing with equally good effect.

The first four of a series of designs for decorating tiles for mantel-piece facings are also given; not only are these very gracefully composed, but they are so simple that even a tyro can work them. The individual tiles can be used by themselves effectively, and the bird designs applied to embroidery if desired. A highly decorative cup and saucer design, one of a series of six, and an excellent design of Hamburg grapes for a fruit plate are also included in this number.

The text includes articles and notes on the following subjects: Fixative for charcoal; giving the appearance of old bronze; composing for relief ornament; mineral colors for red and white currants; leatherette plaques; when to use lavender and clove oils; the proper acknowledgement of an invitation to a wedding; drapery for a bay window; Christmas gift for a literary woman; painting on Rolling Cloth; suggestions for a rough-plank house in Florida; invitation for fortieth anniversary of marriage; decorative arrangement for natural Jacqueminot roses; etiquette of dinners; New York, Boston and Philadelphia art notes and reviews. The price of this issue, with colored supplement included, is twenty cents. Published at $3.00 per year, by WM. WHITLOCK, 37 and 39 West 22d Street, N. Y.

THE Mail points out, as an evidence of prosperity brought about by the N. P., that the Cape Breton coal mines "were unable to fill orders for want of tonnage." The N. P. has so handicapped ship-building that we haven't enough ships to handle the out-put of our little coal mines. In straining to make a point in favor of the N. P., the organ furnishes evidence of the injury it has inflicted upon Canadian maritime interests.

But having inaugurated this

in PETERBOROUGH, I must bow to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

The day of the dinner party marked an epoch in Sydney's life.

For the first time in all her experience she could look in the glass and see herself prettily dressed, with a gold bracelet on her arm. If we consider how men (in one way) and milliners (in another) profit by it, vanity is surely to be reckoned, not among the vices, but among the virtues of the sex. Will any woman who speaks the truth hesitate to acknowledge that her first sensation of gratified vanity rank among the most exquisite and most enduring pleasures that she has ever felt? Sydney locked her door and exhibited herself to herself—in the front view, the side view, and the back view (over the shoulder) with eyes that sparkled and cheeks that glowed in a delicious confusion of pride and astonishment. She practiced bowing to strangers in her new dress; she practiced shaking hands gracefully with her bracelet well in view. Suddenly she stood still before the glass and became serious and thoughtful. Kind and dear Mr. Linley was in her mind now. While she was asking herself anxiously what he would think of her, Kitty—arranged in her new finery, as vain and as happy as her governess—drummed with both fists outside the door and announced at the top of her voice that it was time to go downstairs. Sydney's agitation at the prospect of meeting the ladies in the drawing-room added a charm of its own to the flush that her exercises before the glass had left on her face. Shyly following instead of leading her little companion into the room, she presented such a charming appearance of youth and beauty that the ladies stopped in their talk to look at her. Some few admired Kitty's governess with generous interest; the greater number doubted Mrs. Linley's prudence in engaging a girl so very pretty and so very young. Little by little Sydney's manner—simple, modest, shrinking from observation—pleaded in her favor even with the ladies who had been prejudiced against her at the outset. When Mrs. Linley presented her to her guests the most beautiful woman among them (Mrs. MacEdwin) made room for her on the sofa, and with perfect tact and kindness set the stranger at her ease. When the gentlemen came in from the dinner table Sydney was composed enough to admire the brilliant scene and to wonder again, as she had wondered already, what Mr. Linley would say to her new dress.

Mr. Linley certainly did notice her—at a distance.

He looked at her with a momentary fervor of interest and admiration, which made Sydney (so gratefully and so guiltlessly attached to him) tremble with pleasure; he even stepped forward as if to approach her, checked himself, and went back again among his guests. Now in one part of the room, and now in another, she saw him speaking to them. The one neglected person whom he never even looked at again was the poor girl to whom his approval was the breath of her life. Had she ever felt as unhappy as she felt now? No, not even at her aunt's school.

Friendly Mrs. MacEdwin touched her arm. "My dear, you are losing your pretty color. Are you overcome by the heat? Shall I take you into the next room?"

Sydney expressed her sincere sense of the lady's kindness. Her commonplace excuse was a true excuse—she had a headache, and she asked leave to retire to her room.

Approaching the door, she found herself face to face with Mr. Linley. He had just been giving directions to one of the servants, and was re-entering the drawing-room. She stopped, trembling and cold; but, in the very intensity of her wretchedness, she found courage enough to speak to him.

"You seem to avoid me, Mr. Linley," she began, speaking with an air of formal respect and keeping her eyes on the ground. "I hope——" she hesitated and desperately looked at him—"I hope I haven't done anything to offend you?"

In her knowledge of him up to that miserable evening he constantly spoke to her with a smile. She had never yet seen him so serious and so inattentive as he was now. His eyes, wandering round the room, rested on Mrs. Linley—brilliant and beautiful, and laughing gayly. Why was he looking at his wife with plain signs of embarrassment in his face? Sydney piteously persisted in repeating her innocent question: "I hope I haven't done anything to offend you?"

He seemed to be still reluctant to notice her—on the one occasion of all others when she was looking her best! But he answered at last.

"My dear child, it is impossible that you should offend me; you have misunderstood and mistaken me. Don't suppose—pray don't suppose that I am changed or can ever be changed toward you." He emphasized the kind intention which those words revealed by giving her his hand.

But the next moment he drew back. There was no disguising it, he drew back as if he wished to get away from her. She noticed that his lips were firmly closed and his eyebrows knitted in a frown; he looked like a man who was forcing himself to submit to some hard necessity that he hated or feared.

He had denied in the plainest and kindest terms that he was changed toward her. Was that not enough? It was nothing like enough. The facts were there to speak for themselves; he was an altered man; anxiety, sorrow, remorse—one or the other seemed to have got possession of him. Judging by Mrs. Linley's gayety of manner, his wife could not possibly have been taken into his confidence.

What did it mean? Oh, the useless, hopeless question! And yet, again and again she asked herself: What did it mean?

In bewildered wretchedness she lingered on the way to her room and stopped at the end of a corridor.

On her right hand a broad flight of old oak stairs led to the bed-chambers of the second floor of the house. On her left hand an open door showed the stone steps which descended to the terrace and the garden. The moonlight lay in all its loveliness on the flower-beds and the grass and tempted her to pause and admire it. A prospect of sleepless solicitude was the one prospect before her that Sydney could see if she retired to rest. The cool night air came freshly up the vaulted tunnel in which the steps were set; the moonlit garden offered its solace to the girl's sore heart. No curious women-servants appeared on the stairs that led to the bed-chambers. No inquisitive eyes could look at her from the windows of the ground floor—a solitude abandoned to the curiosity of tourists. Sydney took her hat and cloak from the stand in a recess at the side of the door, and went into the garden.

VIII.

The dinner party had come to an end; the neighbors had taken their departure; and the ladies at Mount Morven had retired for the night.

On the way to her room Mrs. Presty knocked at her daughter's door. "I want to speak to you, Catherine. Are you in bed?"

"No, mamma. Come in."

Robed in a dressing-gown of delicately mingled white and blue, and luxuriously accommodated on the softest pillows that could be placed in an arm-chair, Mrs. Linley was meditating on the events of the evening. "This has been the most successful party we have ever given," she said to her mother. "And did you notice how charmingly pretty Miss Westerfield looked in her new dress?"

"It's about that girl I want to speak to you," Mrs. Presty answered, severely. "I had a higher opinion of her when she first came here than I have now."

Mrs. Linley pointed to an open door communicating with a second and smaller bedchamber. "Not quite so loud," she answered, "or you may wake Kitty. What has Miss Westerfield done to forfeit your good opinion?"

Discreet Mrs. Presty asked leave to return to the subject at a future opportunity.

"I will merely allude now," she said, "to a change for the worse in your governess, which you might have noticed when she left the drawing-room this evening. She had a word or two with Herbert at the door, and she left him looking as black as thunder."

Mrs. Linley laid herself back on her pillows and burst out laughing. "Black as thunder? Poor little Sydney, what a ridiculous description of her! I beg your pardon, mamma; don't be offended."

"On the contrary, my dear, I am agreeably surprised. Your poor father—a man of remarkable judgment on most subjects—never thought much of your intelligence. He appears to have been wrong; you have evidently inherited some of my sense of humor. However, that is not what I wanted to say; I am the bearer of good news. When we find it necessary to get rid of Miss Westerfield——"

Mrs. Linley's indignation expressed itself by a look which, for the moment at least, reduced her mother to silence. Always equal to the occasion, however, Mrs. Presty's face assumed an expression of innocent amazement which would have produced a round of applause on the stage. "What have I said to make you angry?" she inquired. "Surely, my dear, you and your husband are very extraordinary people."

From its wonderful power over this terrible fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

He left on the 1:30 Grand Junction R'y for Campbellford, where he will address a public meeting of the electors this evening. No 2.

Here is a little item that will interest the citizens of Peterborough, town and county, to a man. It isn't gossip, or scandal—it is a plain, practical fact, for their guidance and benefit. The third store south of Hunter street, on the west side of George street, will in future be known as No. 2. Mr. M. Sullivan, the enterprising proprietor, has in this connection decided to give startling bargains in dry goods of all kinds. His prices will astonish you. To every lady making a cash purchase of $5, will be presented a pair of first class kid gloves free. Ladies, go to No. 2 for your dry goods. Read his advertisement in another column.

Dissolution of Partnership.

An advertisement in another column will inform the reader that Messrs. Flaherty & Clark, merchant tailors and clothiers, who have for two years carried on and worked up a fine trade in their lines, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Flaherty retires to take an interest in a similar business in Belleville, it is hoped with much success, of which there is no doubt if he applies the same diligence, knowledge of the business and courteous treatment of customers which marked his business career in Peterborough. Mr. G. C. Clark continues the Peterborough business, and will throw new energy into it and make his neat establishment on George street, worthy in every way of extended patronage.

Justin McCarthy.

Our readers are reminded that Mr. Justin McCarthy, M.P., for Londonderry, Ireland, will deliver an address on the "Cause of Ireland" in Bradburn's Opera House, on Thursday evening, Nov. 25th. This distinguished gentleman has delivered several addresses to large and enthusiastic audiences in Canada, and the result has justified the highest expectations in regard of the eloquence, grasp of subject, elegant diction and persuasive oratory. No [illegible] visited this continent who can give a more comprehensive view, more interesting detail, and more intelligent declaration of the principles of success of the "Cause of Ireland." Thursday night, November 25th in Bradburn's Opera House. Dr. O'Sullivan will occupy the chair. Admission 75 and 50 cents. First of half and seats reserved at [illegible]

Mr. Hoover's Concert.

A magnificent Concert Listened to by a Light Audience.

It is to be regretted that the "miserable" weather of last night prevented a larger attendance at the initial concert of Mr. A. F. Hoover, given in Bradburn's Opera House, for the public, who did not attend missed a musical entertainment of surpassing excellence, the superior of which has, it is safe to say, never been presented here. A judiciously balanced programme, every number of which was of merit, was given with most satisfactory promptness and fidelity and the audience present was more than delighted The first number was one of Chopin's polonaises, rendered in a very brilliant and perfect manner by Mr. Hoover, who is a finished pianist of unusual ability. He appeared to even better advantage in the "Rondo Capriccio" of Mendelssohn, in the second part. In response to a recall he gave in very fine form, Mendelssohn's "Spring Song." Mr. Thomas Dunn's singing of "The Gay Hussar" a stirring song, to which he did full justice, was a delightful surprise to those who had heard him before. He is making rapid improvement and he acquitted himself on this occasion with the highest credit. He was enthusiastically recalled, and again delighted his hearers. While it is a matter of congratulation, it is also a matter of surprise that a provincial town should hold a baritone of such excellence. In his second number, "Thy Sentinel Am I," Mr. Dunn again took the house by storm, and an uproarious encore brought him out in another splendid song. The Schubert duet by the Misses Leoll was excellently done, and was worthy, in finished execution and tasteful rendition, of the hearty applause it received. The next step in the crescendo of excellence and enjoyment that seemed to mark the programme, was the violin solo of Herr Sonnischen, late of Hamburg. He possesses great power over his versatile instrument, and moment by moment the hearer does not know which to admire most, his free and delicate bowing, his marvellous fingering, or the wonderful variety and delicacy of tones he extracts from the strings by their combination. He held his hearers under a spell, and when a pizzicato rush down the finger-board indicated the finale, the pent up delight found expression in wild applause. He was down on the programme for two numbers, "Souvenir de Haydn" and "Fantasie Militaire," and on both occasions he was recalled. The second part opened with a pianoforte duet, beautifully rendered by Miss Clurtoe and Mr. Hoover. But the chief charm of the evening was the singing of Mrs. Caldwell. Her first number, "Carnival de Venice," was given with such exquisite sweetness that she was recalled, and delighted her hearers with "Talking in my Sleep." The second number was the familiar "Cuckoo" song of Emmett. No words can do justice to giving an idea of the exquisite sweetness of her singing. To attempt a criticism of it would almost seem sacrilege. Nothing but hearing Mrs. Caldwell can giveany idea of her singing. The "Cuckoo" song, earned her a rapturous encore and she responded with a classical selection. Altogether the concert as to musical enjoyment was a splendid efforts, and it is a pity that Mr. Hoover's success did not meet with more liberal encouragement. He desires to acknowledge the kindness of the Musical Society in postponing their regular meeting to attend his concert.

The New Officer.

Adjutant Bolton Makes His Debut in Peterborough – A Rousing Salvation "Farewell"—Eighteen Souls Saved.

The Salvationists marched through the drenching rain last night to show the people that their religious fervor could not be dampened, and afterwards held a rousing meeting at the barracks, which was nearly filled with an eager audience. The eastern contingent was present, led by Major Woyette, who conducted the meeting.

In opening the Major said:—"The Salvation Army is always changing about, and springing up in new places—just like a mushroom bed. The more you plucked and cut them down, the thicker and more extensively they sprang up. (Laughter and amens.) We are now sending 26 officers down east, and there are 10 more coming down shortly, and probably still more later on. The Salvation Army didn't like the changes very much themselves, but it was their nature to be constantly on the move. Several new divisions have recently been opened out at Chatham, Peterborough, Quebec, two further east, and they would probably open out two more in the east shortly. Then they were going to give the devil the warmest time he ever had in Canada. (Loud hallelujahs). They found that there were already several soldiers in the North-west—and it is a queer place, indeed, where you don't see them. (Yes, amen.) Just at the time the officers at headquarters were praying for aid, these soldiers in the North-west must have been writing the letter which was received at Toronto two days afterward. The letter said: "We have just come out from England—nine of us. We are all saved, and have the cornet, the drum, the cymbals—a brass band straight. What we want now is for you to send us some officers, and they shall share with us whatever we have. If you please, what train will they come on, so we can meet them." On Saturday, Dec. 4th, Sunday and Monday, the contingent is going to farewell from Toronto. On Saturday, Dec. 4th, there are coming to Peterborough (laughter)—that was to say, people from Nova Scotia. A lot of officers, in charge of Captain Archibald, from Nova Scotia, who were nicknamed Blue Noses, will be here on Saturday night, 4th Dec., and hold a big meeting.

The members of the eastern contingent, comprising Adjutant McCarthy, who takes charge of Ottawa division; Adjutant Van Allen, who takes charge of Montreal division; Capts. Ford, Carpenter and Osborne; Lieutenant Hartley, who goes to Newfoundland; and Mrs. Osborne, gave their testimonies Major Margetts then introduced Adjutant Bolton, the new divisional officer for Peterborough, recommending him to the soldiers and public as one who would do his duty manfully and fearlessly.

Adjutant Bolton, a fine looking young man, with a voice like rolling thunder, came forward and was greeted with a hallelujah volley. He had been laboring about nine months in London division. When he got orders to come to Peterborough, he said hallelujah. He was going wherever the Lord sent him. He counted it to stand up in the Salvation Army and tell poor sinners that Jesus was ready to save them. He asked the prayers of all who loved God.

Major Margetts brought the meeting to a close with a short prayer meeting, preceding it with a most vivid description of the uncertainty of life.

The departing officers left this forenoon for Belleville, Kingston and other places, and will finally go to Ottawa, whence they are distributed to their respective divisions.

JUSTIN McCARTHY—Nov. 25th.

THE Mail kindly publishes the speech of a retired politician made in opposition to the Scott Act, twelve years ago. It is a great act of self-denial that the Mail refrains from re-publishing its former diatribes against temperance, the Scott Act, prohibition, etc. But, does the organ think it has a sole right to be "converted" for political purposes?

Reviewing the Troops.

General Middleton and Staff Review the 57th Batt.—Unveiling the Fountain.

On the 6:42 C. P. R. express last night arrived General Middleton, Capt. Wise, A. D. C., Lieut-Col. Villiers, D. A. G., and District Paymaster King. They were escorted to the Oriental in carriages, and were this morning shown the sights of the town. Last night Lieut-Col. Villiers and Major King attended the drill, and the payrolls were made out. This afternoon at 2 o'clock the review of the volunteers took place before General Middleton and staff, followed by the unveiling of the Brown Memorial fountain, which ceremony is being performed as to-day's issue goes to press. To-night the visitors will be entertained at supper by the officers of the Battalion and Cavalry troop.

"Such Little Baby."

Between six and seven o'clock last evening some members of the family of Mr. Joseph Brault, corner of King and Aylmer streets, heard an infant crying. An investigation was at once started, which resulted in the discovery of of a two-months-old baby boy snugly tucked away in one of the beds upstairs. It is quite certain that the infant was placed there after five o'clock, but no one was seen entering or leaving the house at all suspiciously. The little fellow was nicely dressed, and beside him was a change of clothing and a bottle of milk. The police and Mayor were informed of the discovery, and the latter made arrangements for the care of the little waif in its new home until its mother or friends can be found.

A Prominent Man.

The cause of education in this country has lost one of its oldest and most highly esteemed workers by the death of Dr. Tassie, of Peterborough, who passed away on Sunday last. For more than a quarter of a century he conducted one of the most successful of the higher schools in Canada, and his fame as a teacher was wide-spread. He was born in Dublin, May 10, 1815, and spent his boyhood in study in his native city. In 1834 he came with his father's family to Upper Canada, and taught and continued his studies at Oakville and Hamilton until 1853, when he took charge of the Galt Grammar School, which some years later became a Collegiate Institute. Under his skilful management the school acquired a more than national reputation, and boys were sent to it from every part of Canada and from nearly every State of the Union. A very large number of Toronto and Hamilton boys especially were constantly in attendance. The school was noted for the excellence of discipline and the thoroughness of its training, and its pupils were always amongst the most successful of the matriculants at the Provincial University. A few years ago Dr. Tassie severed his connection with the Galt school, and for a time taught a private school in Toronto. He was subsequently appointed head master of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, which position he held at the time of his death. He was at one time a member of the Senate of the University of Toronto, from which institution he graduated in 1855. In 1871, Queen's College, Kingston, conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws, a distinction rarely granted by that institution. The tidings of his death will be heard with sorrow by many to whom he was well known, and especially by the thousands of his former pupils who are scattered throughout Canada and the United States.

JUSTIN McCARTHY—Nov. 25th.

President Arthur's Obsequies.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—At 8.30 this morning a casket containing ex-President Arthur's remains, covered with palmetto leaves, sprays of violets and wreaths of white roses, was placed in a draped hearse. As the casket came in view of the people in the street every head was bowed reverently. There was no display of pomp or ceremony. The mourners filled twenty-five carriages but over a hundred carriages filled with friends unable to gain admission to the house followed the cortege to the church. All along the line were immense throngs of people. The exterior of the church was elaborately decorated. At the portal of the church the casket was met by a surpliced choir and clergy. As the casket was borne into the church the choir formed in two files and the clergymen passed between them. There was no oration after the services. The funeral escort of military and sailors fell into line and the band played a funeral dirge while the coffin was borne to the hearse. The procession then started to the Grand Central depot. The train bearing the remains reached Albany at 1.22 o'clock. The remains were taken to the Rural Cemetery, to which they were followed by the Common Council, Grant Club and other delegations.

Jewish Bequests to Berlin.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—A Jewish merchant named Anschel, alias Reichenheim, has bequeathed 150,000 marks to the city of Berlin, for the benefit of teachers, widows, and orphans. Consul Behrendt, also a Jew, has bequeathed to the city 300,000 marks.

Meeting of the National League.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—The Board of Directors of the National League Baseball Association held their annual meeting to-day and awarded the championship of 1886 to the Chicago club, N. E. Young was re-elected Secretary for the seventeenth consecutive time. Herman Doscher, expelled by the Detroit club in 1883 for financial irregularities, was reinstated. Upon the unanimous request of the Directors the charges made by the Chicago club against Capt. A. A. Irwin of Philadelphia were withdrawn on condition that rules to prevent a recurrence of the trouble will be adopted. The rumors that it was the intention of the Pittsburg Baseball Club to apply for admission to the League were confirmed by the unanimous admission of the club. W. A. Nimick and A. K. Scanbrett were admitted to the Association as representatives of the Pittsburg team. The playing rules suggested by the Joint Committee were read and accepted by the League. It is rumored that the St. Louis club tendered its resignation as a member of the League and the resignation was accepted. The disposition of the players has, it is said, been left to a committee of three—Spalding, Soden and Mearns—and they have decided that the players shall be divided between the Kansas Cities and the Washingtons.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts effected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. eod w41tf

Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. We cordially invite those who anticipate renting or buying to inspect our work and prove for themselves that our houses are not merely built to sell. Every house I've sold gives first-class satisfaction, and I am determined that every house I build shall be a standing testimony to honest building. THE PLOT AGAINST DAVITT.

Patrick Egan Says There Are Good Grounds For the Report—Egan's Meanness.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 24.—Mr. Egan, ex-president of the Irish National League, was interviewed to-day regarding the rumored conspiracy to assassinate Michael Davitt. He said he believed there were good grounds for the rumor, and that if evidence were wanted on the subject it would be found by reading between the lines of a despatch from New York, which appeared in the papers of yesterday morning, villifying Mr. Davitt's character. That despatch Mr. Egan said, was made up of a tissue of untruths. For example, it states that Mr. Davitt was badly received throughout the West, including Nebraska. "Everyone here knows," said Mr. Egan, "that no public man ever received a more cordial welcome, or left behind him a better impression in Nebraska than Michael Davitt."

Mr. Egan says that while O'Donovan Rossa may not be personally mixed up in the plot, the conspirators are not very far removed from him. The difference between Finerty and Davitt Mr. Egan regards as simply an honest divergence of opinion between good men as to policy and methods, but the attack of O'Donovan Rossa he characterizes as mean and contemptible. He says Rossa's only exploits for a considerable time have been to force off empty threats and fire off blank cartridges at England and to pelt wind at sensible, level-headed Irish nationalists.

NO ROMANCE ABOUT IT.

The Young Nun Who Quit a Convent at Jersey City.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The sensational articles published in the papers about the alleged disappearance of Sister Mary Francis, whose worldly name is Mary Hunt, from the Convent of the Sisters of Peace of St. Joseph, Jersey City, were exploded to-day at that institution. It was alleged that some of the reasons for the withdrawal of the sister from the convent were that there was a handsome young man in the case, and that her uncle, John O'Donnell, had recently died, leaving her a handsome little fortune. She is about 22 years old, rather tall and not considered handsome. She entered the sisterhood a year ago, and had still two years to remain before taking her final vows. The fortune is a myth. About two months ago she appeared to be dissatisfied with the religious life that she was leading and so informed the sisters. She remained until Wednesday last, when she informed the sisters that she intended to leave the convent, and they offered no objection to her going to her relatives, with whom she now is. Miss Hunt did not receive a farthing from her dead uncle, and the dashing young man is entirely unknown. Any of the sisters in the convent can leave whenever they please.

More Trouble on the Southern Pacific.

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 24.—For several days past trouble has existed between the train men of the Southern Pacific Company, Atlantic system, and the railway officials. Last Saturday night a committee of brakemen visited New Orleans to present their grievances and arbitrate with the managers of the company regarding wages. The railway authorities, in order to definitely settle the big strike of last winter, entered into an agreement with the brakemen, which the latter claim is not now being enforced, and assert that unless the matter is soon rectified they will again strike. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have also appointed a committee to visit the Crescent City and arbitrate the difficulties existing between them and the company.

The Dagger at a Dance.

PETERSBURG, Va., Nov. 24.—The details of a most unfortunate affair in Mecklenburg County reached here this evening. On the farm of a lady residing a short distance from Clarksville there had collected a goodly number of young colored men and women to enjoy a dance. Everything passed off pleasantly until towards the close of the entertainment, when Lizzie Williams, one of the women in attendance, became offended at some remark made by some of the other guests. It led to a difficulty, which resulted in Lizzie stabbing three of the female attendants, inflicting wounds that will probably prove fatal. She was placed in jail.

Sculping in the Sweet Grass Hills.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—Correspondence between the Canadian and United States authorities confirms the report of a recent Indian massacre in the Northwest. A band of Gros Ventres Indians passed Fort Assiniboia, south of the boundary line, and on exhibiting six scalps were detained by the American troops, and upon being pressed gave an account of the fight which had taken place. They then took the military to Sweet Grass Hills, where the scalping was done. The scene being located in Canadian territory the American troops could not cross the line. The Canadian Mounted Police were ordered to make a search for the bodies, and they, [illegible] were reported by the Gros Ventres in the Sweet Grass Hills.

THE FRENCH BUDGET.

BIG REDUCTIONS MADE BY THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day M. Rouvier stated that the Budget Committee had accepted the proposed reductions in the budget, but he strongly blamed the Government for rejecting them when they were first suggested.

Prime Minister DeFreycinet said he regretted to hear M. Rouvier use language which was intended to excite the Chambers against the Government. He relied upon the adhesion of all true Republicans. He did not believe those who would vote against the credit, aimed at the overthrow of the ministry, but thought they simply desired to retrench expenses. [Applause.]

The debate on the budget was then resumed.

M. Sadi-Carnot, Minister of Finance, refused to agree to a reduction of 600,000 francs on the credit for the Finance Ministry. A division was taken and the reduction was approved by a vote of 411 against 90.

The result was announced amid the most intense excitement.

The Deputies agreed to consider a reduction of 12,000,000 francs in the commission of the Treasurer-General, and 500,000 francs in the commission of private collectors of revenue.

M. Faure proposed the discharge of 219 officials in order to effect a saving of 400,000 francs.

M. Sadi-Carnot and M. De Freycinet opposed the motion on the ground that the objects ought only to be obtained by the production of a special bill.

The bill was rejected by a vote of 385 to 114.

KAULBARS AT CONSTANTINOPLE.

He and the British Ambassador Interchange Courtesies—Indignant Russian Officers.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 24.—Gen. Kaulbars will instruct M. Nelidoff, Russian Ambassador here, in all the details of the Bulgarian situation and will guide him in regard to the election of a new Prince of Bulgaria. Nelidoff has not yet received authority from his government to close the question of an eventual Russian occupation of Bulgaria. The Turkish Government continues to send war material to Adrianapolis and to strengthen the fortifications of the Dardanelles.

Gen. Kaulbars to-day called upon Sir Wm. White, the British ambassador, and the latter subsequently returned the visit. M. Nelidoff has asked permission to present Gen. Kaulbars to the Sultan privately.

It is reported that the Turkish Council has adopted the program of Gen. Kaulbars and will insist that the Bulgarian regency resign, that the Sobranje be dissolved, that a new Sobranje be elected, and that the Prince of Mingrelia be nominated for the throne, the alternative being the occupation of Bulgaria. The program still awaits the Sultan's approval.

Notes.

The Russian cruiser Zalryaka has arrived at Odessa with Capt. Nabokoff and other leaders of the recent revolt at Bourgas.

The fact that Baron de Staal, the Russian ambassador, is about to leave London for a prolonged holiday, is regarded there as a pacific sign.

The President of the Sobranje, in an interview at Sofia, spoke with confidence of the future of Bulgaria. He said the deputation to the European courts will also endeavor to negotiate a loan.

The Russians stationed at Odessa comment angrily on the humiliating end of General Kaulbar's mission in Bulgaria. One general declared that the bitterest reflection of all is that Russia should be threatened with impunity by such a power as Austria.

Salisbury's Reply to the Socialists.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Lord Salisbury, replying to the memorial which the Socialists left at his residence Sunday, says the proposals contained therein, and which would involve extensive legislative changes, would without doubt be duly considered by Parliament if they were laid before it. "I myself, however," he adds, "am unable to adopt or support them, as I am convinced that the proposals, if effected, would cause additional distress and suffering far exceeding what prevails at present."

A Chicago Crook Sentenced in England.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The trial of Harris, alias Orson, Smith, Skinner and other names, arrested on Oct. 9 on a charge of defrauding Herries, Farquhar & Co., bankers, of £200 by means of a forged letter of credit from a Chicago bank, resulted in the prisoner's conviction and sentence to five years penal servitude. The real name of the man is Skinner. He is a lawyer, and was formerly a prominent practitioner in Chicago.

The Tenants Will Not Settle.

DUBLIN, Nov. 24.—At Ballyhannis to-day three hundred tenants on the Moore O'Farrell estate marched to the agent's office and demanded that their rents be reduced 25 per cent. The agent refusing to grant a reduction the tenants left in a body without paying. In some cases where five years' rent was due the agent accepted the rent for one year and gave a clear receipt.

Skilled Iron Workers as K. of L.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 24.—The Knights of Labor have begun an important movement among skilled iron workers, by organizing an assembly of skilled workmen at the Elba Iron and Bolt Works. The assembly is composed of heaters and rollers, but it is the intention to admit puddlers in a few days. All the men enrolled are members of the Amalgamated Association, and intend to remain so. This is the beginning of a general movement for the enrolment of skilled iron and steel workers as K. of L.

A Convict Falls Heir to a Fortune.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 24.—Jesse Billings, a convict at the Jeffersonville, Ind., penitentiary was pardoned this morning by Governor Gray. Billings was sent up last April from Daviess county for two years, having been convicted of forgery. Since his incarceration an aunt of his died, leaving him a fortune of more than $100,000, which he will now have an opportunity to enjoy.

The Roumanian Succession.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The King of Roumania has applied to Emperor William to arbitrate the claims to the succession to the Roumanian throne of Princes Ferdinand and Karlantin Von Hohensollern-Sigmaringen. The choice of the Hohensollern family leans toward Prince Karlantin of Saxe-Weimar.

Cholera in the Argentine Republic.

BUENOS AYRES, Nov. 24.—Twenty fresh cases of cholera have been reported in this city. The disease has spread to Ensenada, Cordova and San Nicolas.

Pathetic but Previous.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The Cologne Gazette to-day contains a pathetic appeal to Germans to bear in mind the urgent need to preserve the strength of the army in face of the dangers that menace Germany in the east and west. The article has been badly received in Berlin as unwarranted by the present condition of affairs and causing unnecessary fright.

The Liability of Passengers.

MONTREAL, Nov. 22.—Two civil actions against Sharpe & McKinnon were taken to-day, the first for $16,167 by P. Mullen, and the second for $16,375 by J. E. Mullen.

Political Crisis in Peru.

LIMA, Nov. 22.—A ministerial crisis was brought about Saturday by the resignation of the President of the Council of Ministers. [illegible] to the Chamber of Deputies, which led to the

THE CHARGES AGAINST DR. WEIR.

He Claims the Case is a Put-up Job—No Extradition for Hope.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Dr. Weir, held on a charge of murdering Mabel Clark while under his care at Oscoda, Mich., spoke to a reporter about himself and the case: "I am 40 years old. I was born in London Township. I am married, but have no children. I graduated in medicine on the other side, where I have been practising with great success. Some time ago I was a drinker, but now I am a temperate man. I belong to the Presbyterian Church. I am well known in and about London, and have many friends and relatives residing in and about the city. I have never been in jail before. The case in reference to Mabel Clark is a straight, put-up-job to blackmail me from the commencement. She came to my hospital (the Lake Shore, which I established) for treatment for consumption. She was very far gone. I did not exert myself to cure her, but tried all in my power to alleviate her distress. She told me she had led a bad, immoral life, and was sorry for it, but was afraid to die, and entreated me to do all I could to save her. I used her very carefully and treated her with the greatest skill and care possible. I am confident that I and my many friends can completely disprove the charges laid against me. I arrived in London a few days before Mabel Clark died. I came to London for the benefit of my health. On November 10 I went to Chatham to buy a horse and see some friends. I returned last night, and here I am. In Oscoda I have many friends that will stand by me and help to disprove this charge with which they have maligned my character."

Mabel Clark's friends and the people of Oscoda say that she was an exceptionally virtuous young girl, about 20 years old, a seamstress by occupation, and as to her personal characteristics, she was noted for her charity and thoughtfulness to those more unfortunate than herself.

DETROIT, Nov. 24.—The Sheriff of Iosco County telegraphed United States District Attorney Black this morning to learn what could be done in regard to the extradition of Dr. Wier. Col. Black advised in reply that the extradition treaty did not include the crime of rape, and any attempt to bring Dr. Weir to the States on that charge will have to be abandoned.

Rev. The counsel for the condemned Chicago Anarchists say the evidence shows that none of defendants knew that a bomb was to be thrown. The question is whether defendants are to be convicted as accessories to a crime they did not know was to be committed and in which the really guilty party is as unknown to them as to the public.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1886.

THE COMING VICTORY.

Hon. Mr. Mowat has passed through three general election contests victoriously within the past fourteen years, and the indications are that the coming contest will result in adding another victory to the list. That at any rate is the feeling of the press generally, and the views of the press, when not influenced by local hopefulness, are to be received with respect.

The Manitoba Sun, an independent journal, says:

Mr. Mowat's government will go into the fight with many advantages. In the first place, the Reformers are better organized than their opponents; in the second place, the grounds of attack against the government are few, and the Opposition almost disspirited by a long series of unsuccessful campaigns; in the third place, the Reformers will have the confidence born of many successes. That, under the circumstances, the government will be sustained by a considerable majority, there is little doubt.

The Sherbrooke Examiner, published in Quebec, remarks:

There is no reasonable ground to doubt that Mr. Mowat will carry the province again by a substantial majority. He has achieved more laurels, perhaps, during his present tenure of office by his triumphant checkmates of Sir John than during the whole of his previous honorable career. His vindication of provincial rights alone entitles him to the confidence of the community.

The St. John, N.B., Globe assures its readers that "Mr. Mowat will go to the country with the fullest assurance of success."

The Montreal Post, a supporter of the Conservative party at the recent provincial elections in Quebec, thus speaks:

Present appearances indicate that the Liberals will carry Ontario with an increased majority, for the country is alarmed at the recklessness and corruption of the Tories."

The Montreal Witness, referring to the result of the pending provincial elections speaks of a Liberal "provincial victory," but throughout the province there is not one Conservative journal rash enough to indulge the hope that "Mowat will go." The Ontario Conservatives are disheartened and disorganised, and fighting a hopeless battle does not tend to make them enthusiastic. The only danger of defeat to the Liberal cause in Ontario, lies in over-confidence. Let there be confidence, but let be no cessation of hard and persistent work from now till December 28th, and then all hopeful auguries of success will be realised in victory.

OLIVER MOWAT.

There is no public man in Ontario who is better known or more highly esteemed than Oliver Mowat. His record is a lengthened and honorable one. He dwells and has dwelt among his own people. As boy, and youth, and man he has gone out and in among us, and now when he gets far on to his three score years and ten, he never was more generally trusted, honored, and even loved than he is to-day. He has been tested in every possible manner, and he has stood the test in every instance. The very charges which have been brought against him speak strongly in his favor, and his friends and admirers love him only the more warmly and trust him only the more absolutely because of the "enemies he has made' and the so-called sins which he has committed.

Even his political opponents are fain to acknowledge that Mr. Mowat's private personal record is stainless. Scandal never has made itself busy with his reputation, and no friend or supporter has ever had to blush for conduct on his part which could neither be denied nor commended. His private ways, like his public career, can be investigated with the minutest care, without any fear that his admirers will be shocked or his opponents gratified. The most monstrous stories have not only been circulated but believed about not a few Canadian public men, simply because all felt that whether true or false such things were in every way likely, and, in the circumstances, perfectly natural. To Mr. Mowat, and let us add to some others, a perfectly opposite rule has been applied. Such stories have never been associated with his name, for the simple reason that their manifest incongruity would have been too great, and the utter absence of anything in them like verisimilitude was too manifest. Indeed, so much has this been the case, that the very absence of what are sometimes called the "minor sins" has been made an excuse for reproach, and by not a few who are themselves strangely constituted, has been almost exaggerated into a crime. But Mr. Mowat's fellow-countrymen like him all the better that he has never proceeded to any such excess of riot, but has in all the social relationships of life shown himself a pattern which the young could copy without danger, and which the high-minded, the honorable, and the pure could commend without any mental reservation, and endorse without any twinge of conscience or any shadow of self-reproach.

Indeed, the secret of Mr. Mowat's success as a public man lies quite as much in his stainless personal character as in his intellectual power and political astuteness. Nobody would, of course, say that the former, unsupported by the latter, would ever have carried him to his present position or kept him there. It has, however, been a mighty factor in his success, and has given him a hold upon the respect and confidence of the community which his intellectual powers, great as these are, would of themselves never have secured. Some small wit-crackers—if we mistake not, Mr. W. R. Meredith among the rest—have tried to make themselves merry at Mr. Mowat's expense by twitting him as a "Christian politician." But many a true word before this has been spoken in irony, and the verdict of all Canada has incontestibly proved that this was one of these. What Mr. Mowat's opponents meant to be an insult has been adopted as a truth, and has been transformed into a compliment. They hoped to commit murder by the sneer. They have succeeded only in managing something very like suicide. Things have not yet come to such a pass in Canada that "Christian" should be a term of reproach; and Mr. Mowat's whole life has proved that its application to himself is anything but a misnomer.—Toronto Globe.

"We have, says the Brockville Recorder, to congratulate the Liberals of West Peterborough on the fact that Mr. Geo. A Cox has consented to contest the constituency for a seat in the House of Commons. There are few more honorable, upright and successful business men in Canada to-day than Mr. Cox and when such are willing to serve they should be enthusiastically elected."

An Insurrection Quelled.

Drill was held by the 57th Batt. in the shed Tuesday night with closed doors, all civilians being excluded. A stout old farmer, followed by his four stalwart sons, mustered into the "camp" to get a "squint at the solgers." On being requested to leave, his patriotic ire was aroused, and in tones of swelling indignation he refused to budge. This first symptom of rebellion and invasion had to be crushed, and the caretaker undertook to do it. Calling his forces together, the bugle sounded the charge, and with one feel swoop he threw himself at the foe, who, stationing his four sons as pickets so as to prevent a flank attack, prepared to receive the shock. It came. The contending forces met in hand-to-hand conflict, in which the caretaker was evidently getting worsted, when a reserve came up in the shape of his son. But the reserve ran foul of one of the outstanding forces, and never reached the main body. The position was critical. The ruralists would certainly have overcome their antagonists but for a most unlooked-for event. Suddenly the whole bloody (?) field swarmed with redcoats, who flew to the rescue. The pickets were driven in, and, fighting back to back, the invaders were holding their own despite the overwhelming force arrayed against them, when an officer appeared and drew off the besiegers. The insurrectionists then saw the error of their ways and surrendered on condition that an undisturbed exit be allowed them through the door. And thus was a determined insurrection "nipped in the bud."

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41tf

Britain and the Vatican.

ROME, Nov. 23.—Archbishop Smith of St. Andrew's is visiting Rome on business relating to the affairs of the Scotch dioceses. He had a long conference to-day with the Pope respecting the best means to bring about a renewal of the diplomatic relations between England and the Vatican. It is reported that a special Apostolic Legate will be sent to England with this object in view.

Always Prompt in Action.

This is just what every sufferer wants—prompt action, and rapid relief from pain. The grandest discovery of the age, the great pain cure, is Polson's Nerviline—prompt, powerful, pleasant to the taste, and yet so pure, that it may be given to the youngest infant. Try a 10 cent sample bottle, which you can purchase at any drug store. Nerviline, the great, sure, and prompt pain cure. The large bottles are only 25c. 6dw47

There is no one remedy offered to suffering humanity whose use is so universally and frequently required as Hagyard's Yellow Oil, for rheumatism, neuralgia, colds, sore throat, deafness, croup, lumbago, and aches, pains, lameness and soreness of all kinds, when internally and externally used. 2w46d

The Right Way.

The only proper way to cure a cough is to loosen the tough mucous or phlegm that clogs the bronchial pipes. This is why Hagyards Pectoral Balsam is the most successful remedy for coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles. 2w46d

Imitation

Is sometimes called the sincere form of flattery. This may account for the number of imitations of the original and only positive corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. All such fail to possess equal merit, so when purchasing get the genuine "Putnam's." Safe, sure and painless. All druggists. 6dw47

GOUGH'S LADDER TO FAME.

One Price and Square Dealing to All!

This week, the public will receive the benefit of an extraordinary LOW PURCHASE of SEASONABLE OVERCOATS and SUITS, and any intending purchaser will miss it, if they do not call and examine them. We are determined to be the Poor Man's Friend, and if in fulfilling this mission, we break the back bone of those High Price Clothiers, I am sorry, as I wish them no harm. But having inaugurated this in PETERBOROUGH, I must bow to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. Always keep in mind, that the man who does as he ADVERTISES, and Refunds the Money if Goods are not Satisfactory, is GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN.

LOW PRICE AND ONE PRICE SYSTEM

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Some will have it that the Scott Act is a failure; others protest that it is not. This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of come from such places as Toronto, Rochester, Chicago and Winnipeg to get their wants supplied from our manufacture, and are thereby the gainers. We sell better goods at retail prices than can be bought at wholesale. Highest prices paid for raw furs.

R. W. MUNCASTER.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

"Do you mean to tell me, mamma, that you have said to Herbert what you said just now to me."

"Certainly. I mentioned it to Herbert in the course of the evening. He was excessively rude. He said: 'Tell Mrs. MacEdwin to mind her own business—and set her the example yourself.'"

Mrs. Linley returned her mother's look of amazement without her mother's eye for dramatic effect. "What has Mrs. MacEdwin to do with it?" she asked.

"If you will only let me speak, Catherine, I shall be happy to explain myself. You saw Mrs. MacEdwin talking to me at the party. That good lady's head—a feeble head as all her friends admit—has been completely turned by Miss Westerfield. 'The first duty of a governess' (this foolish woman said to me) 'is to win the affections of her pupils. My governess has entirely failed to make the children like her. A dreadful temper; I have given her notice to leave my service. Look at that sweet girl and your little granddaughter! I declare I could cry when I see how they understand each other and love each other.' I quote our charming friend's nonsense verbatim (as we used to say when we were in parliament in Mr. Ormond's time), for the sake of what it led to. If, by any lucky chance, Miss Westerfield happens to be disengaged in the future Mrs. MacEdwin's house is open to her—at her own time and at her own terms. I promised to speak to you on the subject, and I perform my promise. Think over it; I strongly advise you to think over it."

Even Mrs. Linley's good nature declined to submit to this. "I shall certainly not think over what cannot possibly happen," she said. "Good-night, mamma."

"Good-night, Catherine. Your temper doesn't seem to improve as you get older. Perhaps the excitement of the party has been too much for your nerves. Try to get some sleep before Herbert comes up from the smoking-room and disturbs you."

Mrs. Linley refused even to let this pass unanswered. "Herbert is too considerate to disturb me when his friends keep him up late," she said. "On these occasions, as you may see for yourself, he has a bed in his dressing-room."

Mrs. Presty passed through the dressing-room on her way out. "A very comfortable-looking bed," she remarked, in a tone intended to reach her daughter's ears. "I wonder Herbert ever leaves it."

The way to her own bed-chamber led her by the door of Sydney's room. She suddenly stopped; the door was not shut. This was in itself a suspicious circumstance. Young or old, ladies are not in the habit of sleeping with their bedroom doors ajar. A strict sense of duty led Mrs. Presty to listen outside. No sound like the breathing of a person asleep was to be heard. A strict sense of duty conducted Mrs. Presty next into the room and even encouraged her to approach the bed on tip-toe. The bed was empty; the clothes had not been disturbed since it had been made in the morning!

The old lady stepped out into the corridor in a state of excitement which greatly improved her personal appearance. She looked almost young again as she mentally reviewed the list of vices and crimes which a governess might commit who had retired before 11 o'clock and who was not in her bedroom at 12. On further reflection it appeared to be barely possible that Miss Westerfield might be preparing her pupil's exercises for the next day. Mrs. Presty descended to the school-room on the first floor.

No. Here again there was nothing to see but an empty room.

Where was Miss Westerfield?

Was it within the limits of probability that she had been bold enough to join the party in the smoking-room? The bare idea was absurd.

In another minute, nevertheless, Mrs. Presty was at the door listening. The men's voices were loud; they were talking politics. She peered through the key-hole; the smokers had, beyond all doubt, been left to themselves. If the house had not been full of guests Mrs. Presty would now have raised an alarm. As things were the fear of a possible scandal, which the family might have reason to regret, forced her to act with caution. Meditating in the retirement of her own room, she arrived at a wise and wary decision. Opening her door by a few inches, she placed a chair behind the opening, in a position which commanded a view of Sydney's room. Wherever the governess might be, her return to her bed-chamber before the servants were astir in the morning was a chance to be counted on. The night-lamp in the corridor was well a-light; and a venerable person, animated by a sense of duty, was a person naturally superior to the seductions of sleep. Before taking the final precaution of extinguishing her candle Mrs. Presty touched up her complexion and resolutely turned her back on her nightcap. "This is a case in which I must keep up my dignity," she decided, as she took her place in the chair.

One man in the smoking-room appeared to be thoroughly weary of talking politics. That man was the master of the house.

Randal noticed the worn, preoccupied look in his brother's face, and determined to break up the meeting. The opportunity for which he was waiting occurred in another minute. He was asked as a moderate politician to decide between two guests, both members of parliament, who were fast drifting into mere contradiction of each other's second-hand opinions. In plain terms they stated the matter in dispute: "Which of our political parties deserves the confidence of the English people?" In plain terms, on his side, Randal answered: "The party that lowers the taxes." Those words acted on the discussion like water on a fire. As members of parliament the two contending politicians were naturally innocent of the slightest interest in the people or taxes; they received the new idea submitted to them in helpless silence. Friends who were listening began to laugh. The oldest man present nodded at his watch. In five minutes more the lights were out and the smoking-room was deserted.

Linley was the last to retire—fevered by the combined influences of smoke and noise. His mind, oppressed all through the evening, was as ill at ease as ever. Lingering, wakeful and irritable, in the corridor (just as Sydney had lingered before him), he, too, stopped at the open door and admired the peaceful beauty of the garden.

The sleepy servant appointed to attend in the smoking-room asked if he should close the door. Linley answered: "Go to bed and leave it to me." Still lingering at the top of the steps, he was surprised by the resplendent radiance of the moon. The lovely veil of the back, thrown into deep light by the moon, was drawn over the garden. Linley's mind was soothed by the sight. He descended the steps and walked out on the lawn.

IX.

With slow steps Linley crossed the lawn; his mind gloomily absorbed in thoughts which had never before forced on his easy nature—thoughts heavily laden with a burden of self-reproach.

Arrived at the limits of the lawn, two paths opened before him. One led into a quaintly contrived, cultivated on the plan of the old gardens at Versailles, and called the French garden. The other path led to a grassy walk, winding its way capriciously through a thick shrubbery. Careless in what direction he turned his steps, Linley entered the shrubbery because it happened to be nearest to him.

Except at certain points, where the moonlight found its way through open spaces in the verdure, the grassy path which he was now following wound onward in shadow. How far he had advanced he had not noticed when he heard a momentary rustling of leaves at some little distance in advance of him. The faint breeze had died away; the movement among the leaves had been no doubt produced by the creeping or the flying of some creature of the night. Looking up at the moment when he was disturbed by this trifling incident he noticed a bright patch of moonlight ahead as he advanced to a new turn in the path.

The instant afterward he was startled by the appearance of a figure emerging into the moonlight from the farther end of the shrubbery and rapidly approaching him. He was near enough to see that it was the figure of a woman. Was it one of the female servants hurrying back to the house after an interview with a sweetheart? In his black evening dress he was, in all probability, completely hidden by the deep shadow in which he stood. Would he be less likely to frighten the woman if he called to her than if he allowed her to come close up to him in the dark? He decided on calling to her.

"Who is out so late?" he asked.

A cry of alarm answered him. The figure stood still for a moment, and then turned back as if to escape him by flight.

"Don't be frightened," he said. "Surely you know my voice?"

The figure stood still again. He showed himself in the moonlight, and discovered—Sydney Westerfield.

"You!" he exclaimed.

She trembled; the words in which she answered him were words in fragments.

General Middleton and staff left on the 11.30 train to day for Ottawa.

Mr. Justin McCarthy, M. P., who lectures to-night on the "Cause of Ireland," is registered at the Grand Central.

Mr. Barton Earle has recovered from the effects of his accident, and resumed his duties at the Collegiate Institute yesterday.

Mr. J. W. Henderson, of Toronto, Inspector for the north of Scotland Mortgage Association, was in town yesterday. He is a brother of Mr. R. Henderson, at the C.P.R Station.

The Kingston Whig of Wednesday contains an excellent portrait of Mr. Michael Flanagan, city clerk of Kingston, and father-in-law of Dr. O'Sullivan, town, together with a column and a half biographical notice. He is described as the oldest, active city clerk in the Dominion. The incorporation of Kingston as a city took place in 1846 and Mr. Flanagan previously (on the 14th of April 1845) made clerk, was confirmed in the position in accordance with the provisions of Baldwin's new Municipal Act. In 1857 confederation was celebrated in Kingston with great eclat. Mr. Flanagan acted as secretary and refusing to accept any remuneration, received in recognition of his services a beautiful gold watch and chain. In 1871 his portrait painted at the expense of the citizens was presented Mr. Flanagan, and it now hangs in the city hall facing those of the numerous mayors he has served under.

IN HONOUR OF A HERO!

The Brown Memorial Fountain Unveiled.

Review of the 57th Battalion by General Middleton—A Good Turn-out of Volunteers—A Big Day in Military Circles.

When intelligence was received on the 12th of May, 1885, that the gallant Captain Brown, of Bolton's scouts, had fallen a victim to the rebels' bullets at Batoche, the town was enveloped in general sorrow and regret, and in order to give a tangible proof of the esteem in which the late Captain was held, subscriptions were at once taken up for a memorial drinking fountain. The fund swelled rapidly and in a short time sufficient had been raised to warrant the proceeding with the work. The contract was given Mr. T. E. Burgess, who has done his work well, faithfully executing the elegant and artistic designs prepared by Mr. John E. Belcher, C.E. and to-day the fountain stands in the Central Park, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." It was completed about two months ago, but the inscriptions and polished brass mountings were placed in position this week. It becoming known that General Sir Frederick Middleton, who led Canada's citizen soldiery to victory in the Northwest, would make a formal inspection of the 57th Batt., it was arranged to have the memorial unveiled on the same occasion by that illustrious personage. General Middleton's consent having been gained, everything was prepared for the ceremony, and yesterday afternoon about four o'clock the Brown memorial fountain was formally unveiled. Previous to this the took place on the Central Park, and though much inconvenience was caused by the numerous trees and the too stubborn curiosity of the immense crowd assembled to catch a glimpse of the "Gin'ral, God bless 'im," the troops did fairly well. The day was rather cold to be comfortable, but after being sent around the park on the "double" to stirring music by the Battalion Band, the boys commenced to warm to their work. They were put through severe tests in all kinds of drill, and as a body did themselves credit, No. 2 Company winning words of special commendation from Lieut.-Col. Villiers for their proficiency. The parade was closely watched by General Middleton, mounted on his fiery charger, and accompanied by his aide-de-camp, Gen. Wise. Finally the volunteers were drawn up in the form of a square as nearly as possible in rear of the memorial, but they were unable to entirely surround the fountain, the eager populace refusing to be driven from the front. On the platform surrounding the memorial were General Middleton, Gen. Wise, Lieut.-Col. Villiers, Stewart and Roland Brown (relatives of the deceased Captain), John Burnham, Esq., M. P., Rev's Wilson and Bradshaw, Captains Stapleton and Burke, half a dozen troopers wearing North-west medals; Richard Cooke, a member of French's band of scouts; the Mayor and committee appointed by the Town Council to receive the monument—Councillors Rutherford, McClelland, Cahill, McNaughton, Kelly, Davidson and McNeil; ladies—Mrs. Col. Haultain, Mrs. Macklin, Mrs. J. Z. Rogers, Mrs. Capt. Birdsall, Mrs. R. E. Birdsall, Miss Dennistoun, and the Misses Burnett. Had Lady Middleton accompanied the General to town, as was expected, she would have been the guest of Mrs. Macklin. Keen disappointment was felt at her absence. The proceedings were begun by Lieut.-Col. Rogers reading the following address to General Middleton and the Mayor:

Major General Sir Frederick Middleton, K C. M. G., C. B.

MR. MAYOR, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—The object of our meeting together this day is to do honor to the memory of Captain Edward Templeton Brown, who gave his life as a sacrifice for his country, and in his name to do honor to the Canadian volunteers engaged in the suppression of the late rebellion. When in the spring of 1885, the telegraph flashed eastward the news that the traitor Riel had a second time stirred up an insurrection, that he had exceeded his former crime, by inciting to murder and rapine the lawless and uncontrollable Indian Tribes that helpless women and children were at the mercy of savages, the hot blood stirred in every true son of Canada. In such an emergency it was to the volunteers we had to look, not to a paid force of professional soldiers. Our young men, whose yearly drilling had been sneered at by some as a sort of boyish holiday parade, just such men as are being inspected this day, were suddenly found to be our only bulwark. Their ready response, the toilsome marches, the hardships borne without murmuring, the eagerness to get forward, the coolness and bravery when face to face with the foe, the gallantry of the final struggle, are now all matters of history, and well may we be proud, that on this, the first occasion when our citizen soldiers, unaided by regular troops, were to meet the enemy, they proved themselves worthy of the race to which they belonged. Well, too, for them was it, and well for us that at such a crisis, we had at the head of the Canadian Militia the gallant soldier whose personal courage was a model for his men, whose skill and judgement knew how to make the most of the material at his command, who combined that prudence which neither risked defeat, nor needlessly risked useful lives, with the generalship, which when the proper time had come could strike the decisive blow. Who so fitting a person to unveil a monument to him we desire to honor, as the brave commander who was as a father to his men, whose name will always be gratefully associated with our dearly bought victory? I therefore ask you, General Middleton, to unveil this tribute to the memory of Captain Brown, one of the heroes of Batoche.

At this point General Middleton advanced and pulled the rope which held the covering (a Union Jack) in place, and after a little trouble the drapery fell away and disclosed the fountain to view. The reading of the address was then continued.

And now, Mr. Mayor, it remains for me as chairman of the committee to hand over to you as chief officer of the town, this Drinking Fountain which has just been unveiled. Edward Templeton Brown was a native of our country. His family and friends are in our midst. A few years ago he left us with the good wishes of all who knew him on account of his many genial and endearing qualities, to carve out for himself a home in the great Northwest. And although he was not at the time of his death connected with the local force, he had been initiated in military life as a member of Number One Company of the 57th Battalion. This early training, coupled with his natural ability, stood him in good stead when his country required his services. At the first news of the outbreak he joined Colonel Boulton's Scouts and that officer showed his estimation of him by promoting him on the field to the command of a troop. Not in any spirit of thoughtlessness did he enlist, but as a duty to his country, and with the solemn conviction that he was giving up all, even to life itself, for her sake.

He escaped unharmed from the deadly fight at Fish Creek and the first two days of Batoche. On the day of the memorable charge, just as victory was assured, he fell at the head of his men. Peterborough does well to honor such a soldier! And in honoring him we honor the whole force engaged in the suppression of the rebellion. The men standing here wearing Her Majesty's medal, remind me that the 57th sent its contingent, and although the company under command of Capt. Burke had not the fortune, like some of the Midlanders, to take part in the fighting, they in the line of duty and obedience to orders, rendered good service elsewhere. One, however of Peterborough's sons we have with us to-day who as a member of another force stood side by side with Capt. Brown at Fish Creek and Batoche—Richard Cook, also an old member of Number One Company, was in the North-west at the time of the rising and threw up a lucrative position to join French's Scouts, providing his own horse and outfit. The terrible wound he received on that first hot day at Batoche, his agony while lying exposed for hours before he was carried off the field amidst a shower of lead by the brave and lamented Captain French, the long months of suffering that followed, with death staring him in the face, the permanent injury he had sustained, ruining all his worldly prospects, entitle him to special mention on this occasion and to special consideration at the hands of the country he has so well served.

The form of this memorial, that of a drinking fountain, furnishing a cool and refreshing stream for the thirsty passer-by, fitly symbolizes the life blood that has been shed and the useful services that have been rendered by her sons for our beloved country. To you, as Mayor of Peterborough, I now hand it over, confident that it will ever be preserved by the town authorities as a sacred trust, to commemorate the bravery of our citizen soldiers, to keep alive the memory of the gallant Captian Brown.

(Signed) H. C. ROGERS,
Chairman.

THE MAYOR replied briefly, accepting on behalf of the town and expressing thanks for the gift, stating that it would be the town's greatest pleasure to see that it was properly cared for in the future.

GENERAL MIDDLETON then briefly addressed the assembly substantially as follows:—"I can assure you it affords me great gratification to have been able to accept your kind invitation I received to unveil this tribute to the memory of Capt. Brown. I did not know him as long or as well as some of you, but I knew him quite well in the North-west. My friend, Colonel Bolton, then Major, offered to raise a corps to join me, which he did in a remarkably short time, and from the time they joined to the time they left they afforded me valuable help. I consider it was largely owing to Major Bolton and his body of scouts that Batoche was won. I was quite convinced that Colonel Bolton had selected men fully worthy of the position, and I found that he had done so. One thing I desire to place on record, was the extreme willingness of Bolton and his scouts on every occasion. I can only say about my part in the Northwest rebellion, however well I might have planned or however well I might have endeavored to do my duty, it would have been useless had I not been backed up by the brave Canadian volunteers. I thank you, gentlemen, for the kind reception you have accorded me."

The proceedings were brought to a close by three cheers each for the Queen and General Middleton, after which the Battalion formed in marching order and paraded down George street, headed by the band. Upon returning to the shed the roll was called and they were disbanded for the day.

HIS OPINION.

General Middleton told an EXAMINER reporter last night that, considering the short time the 57th Battalion have had to drill,—it being about three months since the Rangers were given the privileges of a regularly established city corps—they did well, and when he visited Peterborough again—which he would make it a point to do—probably a year hence, he would expect to see great improvements, as the men showed an aptitude and willingness for drill. He said the 57th Battalion compared favorably with other corps.

THE SUPPER.

Last night at the Oriental Hotel the officers of the 57th Battalion and the cavalry troop and Mayor Stevenson, about 30 in all, entertained General Middleton at supper. Patriotic speeches followed freely from those surrounding the festive board. A recherche repast was done ample justice to, and the assembly broke up at an early hour after a pleasant evening had been spent.

THE MEMORIAL.

The fountain is of Ohio stone, stands about 11 feet high, and is of a beautiful Gothic pattern, designed by Mr. J. E. Belcher, C.E. It cost about $500. The water trickles through a polished brass mouth-piece representing a lion's head. The inscription in front reads:—

Pro Patria.

CAPTAIN EDWARD T. BROWN.

FISH CREEK—1885—BATOCHE.

On the west side or rear is the following:

ERECTED AS A TRIBUTE TO CANADIAN VOLUNTEERS, AND IN MEMORY OF CAPTAIN BROWN,
A NATIVE OF THIS COUNTY, WHO FELL AT BATOCHE, MAY 12, 1885.

At a meeting of the Committee held on Monday afternoon, Col. H. C. Rogers presented the books and accounts in connection with the fund, which on motion of Mr. Hilliard, M.P., were referred to Rev. W. C. Bradshaw to audit. That gentleman subsequently reported that he had examined the the accounts and found them correct. It was moved by Dr. Fife, seconded by E. B. Edwards, that the hearty thanks of the Committee be tendered to Mr. Belcher for his kindness and public spirit in not only furnishing the handsome and suitable design for the memorial erected in honor of Captain Brown, but also in giving his personal attention and superintendence to the carrying out of the work; and that Mr. Belcher be specially invited to be present at the ceremony of unveiling the monument. It appearing that Mr. Burgess, the contractor, had with commendable public spirit undertaken and carried out the work at a sum that involved a considerable loss to himself, it was resolved that the chairman is hereby instructed to pay over to the contractor whatever balance may remain in his hands when all outstanding liabilities are met, together with those subscriptions which may be yet paid in or others which may be obtained. It was also moved by Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, seconded by Dr. Fife, and carried, that the best thanks of the Committee are cordially tendered to Col. H. C. Rogers for the active interest he has shown in securing funds for the erection of the memorial, and for the very able manner in which he has carried the project to a successful issue.

Notes on Yesterday's Review.

The honors were divided between Companies No. 2 an 4 yesterday.

The Union Jack that enveloped the fountain was 40 feet long. It came from Fort Henry, Kingston.

A number of small boys climbed the trees in the park, and during the entire ceremony of unveiling, kept up an incessant chattering like so many monkeys.

The violent struggles of the dense crowd that surrounded the memorial yesterday were fearful to contemplate. It is a wonder some serious accidents did not result.

Mr. H. W. Kent's horse became frightened and unmanageable at the tumult created. It ran away, throwing Mr. Kent to the ground near Dr. Kincaid's residence. His head narrowly missed striking the telegraph pole. The buggy and horses were considerably damaged. Beyond a few severe bruises Mr. Kent was not injured.

The youthful volunteer who went to the drill shed with his uniform and rifle under the protection of an umbrella, has a thing or two to learn even if he has mastered the "goose-step."

At the calling of the roll yesterday after noon, Col. Villiers needed his forage cap. A young man named Fairbairn was despatched on the Colonel's horse for the article, but he scarcely mounted it when the animal, recognising the difference between a veteran and raw material, bolted and threw its rider overhead. The young man held on pluckily to the reins, and Mr. Walker came to his assistance. The latter was thrown against the gas post and his foot stepped upon by the fiery beast, severely bruising it. The horse was finally tamed and became manageable.

Obituary.

The many friends and the public generally will regret to learn of the sudden, though not unexpected, death of Mr. James Frederick Dennistoun, Q. C., which occurred at the family residence, "Castleknock," town, this morning. As is well known Mr. Dennistoun has been for about five years afflicted with pulmonary disease which had advanced to the last stage. This morning at 12.30 o'clock he was attacked with hæmorrhage of the lungs and so violent was the attack that within about three minutes life was extinct. The deceased gentleman was in the 46th year of his age. He was admitted to the bar in 1864, and began the practice of the law in conjunction with his father, now ex-Judge Dennistoun. Shortly after he went to Lindsay and, as a member of the firm of Dennistoun & Hudspeth, worked up a fine practice. On the elevation of his father to the bench in 1868, he returned to Peterborough. He was a member of the law firm of Dennistoun, Fairbairn & Cassels. He next entered into partnership with his brother the late R. H. Dennistoun and in about a year Mr. E. H. D. Hall became a member of the firm. In 1882 deceased retired from the practice of his profession, his duties, as managing director of the Auburn Woollen Mills Company, requiring his sole attention. These duties he discharged till within a short time of his death. Mr. Dennistoun was an able lawyer and advocate, enjoying largely the respect and esteem of his legal confreres. His affable manner and warm social impulses won for him a wide circle of friends and the general high esteem of the people. The funeral takes place from "Castleknock" on Saturday next at 2 p. m.

Will people pay rent when houses and lots can be purchased on such easy terms as are offered by the undersigned. Come and inspect our work and see for yourselves how we construct our houses. Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. I am offering good building lots, and will build solid brick houses, nine-inch walls, stripped and lathed, two stories, for less money than you can buy frame or veneered buildings. We cordially invite those who anticipate renting or buying to inspect our work and prove for themselves that our houses are not merely built to sell. Every house I've sold gives first-class satisfaction, and I am determined that every house I build shall be a standing testimony to honest building. Tens Ever Thus.

Wednesday morning John Obern applied to the Mayor for assistance in reaching his home in Ottawa. He had been working in Manitou, Mich., when he was taken sick. From there he had been despatched by the authorities without a cent in his pocket to Windsor, from there to Chatham, thence to London, Hamilton and Toronto in succession and from Toronto to Peterborough. He was kindly given shelter Tuesday night at Mr. Joseph Brault's hotel. The Mayor at once gave him a pass to Belleville, whence he will propably be sent to Kingston, and from thence will reach his friends in Ottawa, after being pushed "from post to pillar" as he termed it, sick man though he is, for a couple of weeks

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. eodw41tf

A Serious Accident.

Yesterday on George street, a serious accident befel a young man named Smyth. He was climbing a high ladder, when from some unexplained reason he became dizzy and fell to the ground a distance of about 60 feet and though he fell on the hard ground he was not killed but seriously injured. He recovered consciousness on Wednesday morning when he stated that he was going up the ladder in search of high priced clothing, and that he had never heard of Gough's Ladder of Fame and his low prices for ready made clothing. If he had read the papers especially Gough's ad. he never would have met with the accident that nearly cost him his life. Moral: call at the store of Gough the Wonderful Cheap Man, Arcade Buildings Peterborough.

REICHSTAG OPENED.

GERMANY AT PEACE WITH ALL EUROPEAN POWERS.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—The Reichstag was opened to-day by Herr Von Boetticher, Minister of the Interior, who read the speech from the throne in which the Emperor says:

The object of the policy of the Empire, which enjoys peaceful relations with all states, is to exert in favor of the maintenance of concord among all the powers the influence which accrues to Germany from her love of peace, from the universal confidence reposed in the Empire owing to the fact that Germany is not concerned in pending questions and from the Emperor's close friendship with the neighboring courts. The Emperor's speech announces that a measure will be introduced to raise the effective strength of the German army, which he says is justified by the increasing of the armies of neighboring states. The measure he says is indispensable to German security. The resources required will be raised by increasing the matriculatory contributions and applying them to the public credit. The Emperor also mentions a measure to extend workmen's accident insurance. The Government abandons taxation reform until the people more clearly recognize its necessity.

The text of that part of the Emperor's speech relating to the Septennate Bill is as follows: "By the law of May 6, 1880, the peace effective was fixed until March 31, 1888. Our military system, therefore, requires renewing on a legal basis. The army is a guarantee of lasting protection and of the blessings of peace. Although the policy of the Empire is always pacific, Germany, in view of the development of the military establishments of neighboring states, cannot longer defer increasing her defensive force, especially the peace effective. A bill, therefore, will be submitted, providing an increase, to take effect from the beginning of the new financial year. The Emperor, in accord with the Federal Governments, feels confident that the necessity of the demand, which is indispensable in the interests of national security will be recognized with full determination by the whole German people and their representatives."

The pacific tone of the speech has strengthened the bourse. There was large buying to-day of Austrian, Russian and Hungarian securities. It is expected that the Septennate Bill when presented to the Reichstag will be immediately referred to a commission of twenty-one members, thus postponing the critical debate on the measure until January.

ANOTHER BATCH OF CANDIDATES

Nominations in Hamilton, South Norfolk, East Peterboro, East Lambton, etc.

HAMILTON, Nov. 25.—John Burns, a moulder, was to-night selected by the Conservatives to contest the city for the Local Legislature.

LANGTON, Nov. 25.—The Reform Convention of South Norfolk nominated Joseph Jackson for the House of Commons and Wm. Charleton for the Local Legislature.

WATFORD, Nov. 25.—The Conservative convention for East Lambton met to-day to receive Squire Shirley's decision in regard to accepting the nomination. He declined to accept. Dr. U. M. Stanley of Watford was chosen as the nominee.

NEWINGTON, Nov. 25.—The Reform convention of Stormont to-day unanimously nominated Mr. Mack, ex-M.P., of Cornwall, as candidate for the coming local election.

A DELIGHTED TOWN.

The People of Oscoda Hear With Satisfaction the News of Dr. Weir's Arrest.

OSCODA, Mich., Nov. 25.—The news of the arrest of Dr. Weir at London was received here with great satisfaction. Rape not being an extraditable offence Weir will be extradited on the charge of murder. An officer armed with a warrant leaves for London to-day for him. Public indignation at Weir's inhuman act still runs very high. The brutal murder of Mabel Clark has not been forgotten by the law-abiding citizens, and many remarks, such as "Hang him," are frequently heard expressed by cool-headed people. Weir would fare hard should he fall into the hands of any considerable crowd of citizens unguarded by officers. To say the least, Weir is far from safe in Iosco County.

Hamilton News.

HAMILTON, Nov. 25.—The police have arrested John Johnstone as a man who has been doing considerable in the way of sneaking overcoats recently. He was remanded till to-morrow.

The Central Labor Union reaffirm their belief in the establishment of a free library, but seeing a movement on foot to start a Mechanics' Institute they heartily endorse the action and will grant the promoters their hearty support.

The French Canadians of this city have organized La Societe St. Jean Baptiste de Hamilton, with these officers: Rev. Father Carre, Hon. Chaplain; J. B. Latremouille, President; G. Pothier, Vice-President; Alf. Bourgue, Secretary; Chas. Champagne, Assistant-Secretary; Chas. Bourgue, Treasurer; Octave Lahaie, Assistant-Treasurer.

Oil Works at Montreal Burned.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—Fire broke out in the works of the Dominion Oil Company, Parthenias and St. Catherine-streets, this evening. The fire was caused by an employe overturning a lamp, and as the floors were covered with oil the flames spread rapidly, and in a few minutes the building was completely enveloped in smoke and flames. Valuable machinery has been destroyed. Barrels of oil exploded, sounding like thunder. The damage will amount to between $40,000 and $50,000, which is fully covered by insurance.

Sir John at Stratford.

STRATFORD, Nov. 25.—Sir John A. Macdonald and party arrived here from Listowel at 7 o'clock this evening, and were met at the station and escorted by a large torchlight procession to the City Hall, which was crowded to suffocation. Speeches of welcome were delivered by Messrs. Hesson and Hess, the local members, and Hon. Mr. Thompson and Hon. Mr. Foster, Minister of Marine. An address from the North Perth Conservative Association was presented to the Premier, who replied in good style.

Seizure of Oil Paintings at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—Special agents of the Customs have seized a consignment of oil paintings brought here by S. Marensey, London, Eng., to be sold in the auction rooms of Hecks & Co. They were entered as works of art and as such were not subject to duty. Judge Mackay and other connoisseurs state that the paintings cannot be classed as "fine arts," as they are merely daubs. The consignment was invoiced at a value of £1973. S. Marensey is at present down with typhoid fever, but says that the pictures are all genuine and there was no intention to defraud the Customs or anyone else. He has instructed counsel to stop the proceedings until he is able to appear.

Another Montreal Shermam Assigns.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—Richard Smardon, boot and shoe manufacturer of this city assigned to-day. The total direct liabilities are $63,000; indirect liabilities, about $60,000. The assets are about $63,000.

The G. O. M. Thinks Highly of Trevelyan.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Mr. Gladstone, writing to a friend, refers to Mr. Trevelyan as wholly without faction, and says he will rejoice to see him elected to Parliament by the combined sections of the Liberals of Brighton.

John Bright on Free Trade.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—John Bright, in a letter approving of the erection of a statue of Cobden at Lockport, denies that free trade is imperilled. He continues: An American recently asked me if it would be possible to return to protection in England. I replied, it is not impossible, but it will not come until the United States restores slavery.

A Boom in Australia.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 25.—The Government's announcement of important gold discoveries has caused a general revival in the industries of the colony. Owing to the recent panic in New South Wales the largest crop in many years is expected.

FRANCE'S FINANCES.

LIKELY TO CAUSE A MINISTERIAL CRISIS.

PARIS, Nov. 25.—The Chamber of Deputies to-day, by a vote of 288 against 143, adopts motion for a reduction of 1,000,000 francs in military pensions.

La France says the budget imbroglio has led to a Cabinet crisis.

The Chamber also adopted without incident the various reductions previously agreed upon by the Government Committee.

It is stated that the Government will ask for a vote of confidence on Saturday. A rumor is current that M. Aube, Minister of Marine and the Colonies, will resign if the naval pensions are reduced. Premier De Freycinet has postponed the usual diplomatic receptions owing to the ministerial crisis.

A VIOLENT MOB OF STRIKERS.

Non-Union Men at Salem, Mass., Brutally Treated by the Tanners.

SALEM, Mass., Nov. 25.—There was considerable rioting by striking tanners in this city again to-day. Simeon K. Yeaton and Joshua Yeaton, brothers, the former a non-union workman and the latter the proprietor of a non-union boarding house, were pursued on the street by a mob of 500 strikers who followed them to Kelly & Reagan's yard, where the pursued men were protected by two police officers, who closed the gates. The mob tore down the fence and terribly assaulted the Yeaton brothers. Simeon Yeaton then fired his revolver into the mob, the bullet striking John F. Halpine, one of the rioters, in the side. Halpine was taken to the hotel severely wounded, and the Yeatons were finally safely escorted to the police station by the officers.

Later the mob wrecked a street car, smashing it to splinters. They then savagely attacked Andrew Ferguson and Andrew Bowser, non-union men, and they too were terribly beaten. Next the mob visited Foote's boarding house, where two more non-union men were assaulted and badly beaten. By this time a large body of police had arrived on the scene and the mob was despersed. The leaders will be arrested.

CARRIED OUT DEAD.

Chief Weber of Boston Falls Senseless with the Body of a Fireman on His Shoulders.

BOSTON, Nov. 25.—The upper stories of the sash and blind factory of Cutter & Parker, were gutted by fire to-night. A number of firemen were overcome by smoke. Chief Weber stumbled over the body of Wm. Flavel of Hook and Ladder Company No. 8. Notwithstanding his own precarious condition the Chief raised Flavel to his shoulder and carried him to the sidewalk, where Weber dropped senseless. Flavel was already dead. A relief squad then went into the building and were just in time to save the lives of a number of other firemen. These were carried into the open air and then taken to the hospital, where they were resuscitated. Weber's condition is serious.

Snow in Pennsylvania and New York.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 25.—About a foot of snow fell here to-day. Travel on all the street railway lines was abandoned.

WHITEHALL, N.Y., Nov. 25.—A heavy snowstorm raged along Lake Champlain this afternoon. Plattsburg and Port Henry report six inches and still snowing. About twelve inches fell here.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 25.—It has been snowing and raining here since daylight. On the mountains east of here a sleet storm is raging. Telegraph communication is more or less interrupted.

Death of a Windsor Miser.

WINDSOR, Nov. 25.—George Ashby, a miser, died the other day aged 80 years. He was worth about $150,000. Deceased had always showed a great love for money. He would do any honest thing to get it, and when once in his control nothing but the barest necessities of life could make him part with it. He would tramp around for half a day to find where an article could be got one cent cheaper than it was offered in some store. In appearance and dress he looked almost as poor as a beggar. Any person who did not know him would have taken him for a very poor man indeed. In living he was the same, his meals consisting of the commonest food to be had.

The Execution of the Anarchists Stayed.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Nov. 25.—At 11 o'clock this morning Judge Scott granted the supersedeas in the Anarchist's case. The effect of the order for the supersedeas will be to stay the execution at least until the full bench of the Supreme Court has passed upon the question raised for a new trial. It is estimated that in the ordinary course of procedure a hearing and decision cannot be reached for six or eight weeks and that even though the lower court is sustained the sentence cannot be carried out until some time in March or April.

Prince Nicholas Impossible.

SOFIA, Nov. 25.—The Regents in an interview with Gadban Effendi, the Turkish envoy, stated it was impossible to recommend the Sobranje to elect the Prince of Mingrelia to the vacant throne. The cadets of the military school have been disarmed by orders of the commandant. The motive is unknown.

"KILL HER," "KILL HER."

A Parisian Mob's Attack Upon a Girl Wrongfully Suspected of Murder.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—At an early hour this morning reports spread like wildfire in the neighborhood of the Theatre de Opera and the Place Vendome that a frightful crime had just been discovered. A crowd of 500 people assembled before the shop of Mlle. Jamin, No. 7 Rue du Marche-Saint-Honore, where bonnets, laces and haberdashery are sold, shouting, "Kill her! kill her! she has murdered her mother. Cut her heart out! Tear her to pieces!" "What's the matter?" Women and boys shrieked in reply, "This wretch, Mlle. Clementine Jamin, has locked up her own mother in a cupboard and starved her to death."

The mob then rushed at the shop, broke the windows and forced open the door. Just as the door was burst open with a loud crash M. Lalonde, Commissary of Police, and a squad of gendarmes arrived and drove back the crowd. As he opened the door of the dining-room behind the shop we noticed a terrible smell that seemed to come from a cupboard. The commissary opened the doors of the cupboard and we found the dead body of an old lady resting upon a shelf. The body was dressed in the latest fashion, with a corsage of embroidered jet beads, a gold eyeglass and chain about the neck, and a Valenciennes lace cap on the head, with violet ribbons. The hands were crossed on the breast and the eyes were open with a ghastly stare. In the cupboard also was a small stove full of ashes and the embers of coal and wood.

The gendarmes at once arrested Mlle. Clementine, who is a rather pretty and fashionably dressed brunette about 20 years of age. She said, in reply to questions of the Commissary of Police: "Yes, this my mother, but I am entirely innocent. My mother, who is 71 years of age, disappeared on Nov. 14, and then I announced her disappearance at the police station, at the same time depositing at the police station a scrap of paper in my mother's handwriting with the words: 'You won't change. I am going to drown myself.' Commissary Lalonde remembered, in fact, Mlle. Clementine's visit at the Police station on the day alleged. Mlle. Clementine continued:—"A few days ago I noticed a strange smell—of a body already in a far advanced state of decomposition; but not till this morning did I become serious, and opening the cupboard made a ghastly discovery."

Other witnesses gave evidence showing that the old lady had on several occasions threatened her infamous daughter with disinheritance. They were at once made an examination of the body, but found no trace of violence, and pronounced death to have been caused by [illegible]. The Commissary of Police made a [illegible] to the mob, and [illegible]

MR. MOWAT AND THE MUNICIPALITIES.

A Conservative contemporary asserts that "Mr. Mowat continuously and persistently invaded these (municipal) rights on every possible occasion." This is a sweeping charge to make, and it suggests an inference of hostile feelings towards municipal institutions which the facts do not shew Hon. Mr. Mowat to possess. It was to Mr. Mowat that is due the legislation consolidating the various municipal acts, introducing order instead of confusion, and making the benefits arising from the various municipal enactments more easily available for the benefit of people. So complete was the work that Chief Justice Harrison, no mean authority, said, respecting the work referred to, "that these acts were the most complete and perfect code of any kind that he knew of in any country in the world." This high praise applies equally to the subsequent consolidations—of 1878 and 1883. It would require too much space to recapitulate all the legislation procured by the Mowat Administration, with a view of making municipal institutions more perfect and subservicable to the interests of the people. But it might be pointed out how the Mowat Administration have lessened the burdens of the people by way of relieveing them of taxes. The Municipal Loan Fund act of 1873, is a case in point. By this act the sum of 3,447,525 dollars was distributed pro rata among the municipalities. This distribution of the surplus to the municipalities relieved many of them from a crushing burden of debt, and helped others to carry out improvements for which they could never have secured funds by direct taxation. In this way no less a sum than three and a quarter millions of dollars of the surplus distributed to municipalities was used—to build roads and bridges; for educational purposes including school buildings, investments for school purposes, building town buildings, purchase and improvement of cemetries etc, etc. This looks very little like Mr. Mowat "persistently invading" municipal rights. The people of Ontario who pay the taxes will decide that the more of this sort of "invasion" there is, the better. Editorial exuberance of rant over imaginary "invasions" and grievances, stands a poor chance, as against matter of fact treatment that lightens the financial burdens of the taxpayer.

The School Law as Amended.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

As there is considerable fuss-and-feathers over the Roman Catholic Separate School Act, and as your Conservative opponents assert that undue advantages have been granted to Roman Catholics by the amendments allow me to give your readers the clauses of the act bearing on the matter, and false representations will become evident at once.

The school law before the amendments referred to, left owner, tenant or occupant assessed, to determine how his school rate should be applied, and that determination was indicated by his sending a notice to the clerk of the municipality in proper time. There is no change in this respect, except that the notice is not required to be renewed annually (see Section 41 of the Act, Cap. 46). By Sub-section 3, Section 49 of the Act, the Court of Revision is empowered "to try and determine all complaints in regard to persons alleged to be placed upon or omitted from the assessment roll as supporter of a Roman Catholic Separate School." Then the court of vision, that is, the municipal council, can check any tendency to place upon or omit from the roll, names wrongfully upon or left off the roll. The whole matter is, therefore, in the hands of your own councils.

Section 82 of the Act is the great bug-bear to the quietude of this restive hobby of theirs as to Catholic domination. Now, here it is in full:

"In any case when, under the eighteenth section of the Assessment Act, land is assessed against both the owner and occupant, or owner and tenant, then such occupant or tenant shall be deemed and taken to be the person primarily liable for the payment of school rates and for determining whether such rates shall be applied to Public or Separate School purposes, and no agreement between the owner or tenant as to the payment of taxes as between themselves shall be allowed to alter or affect this provision otherwise; and in any case, where as between the owner and tenant or occupant, the owner is not to pay taxes, if by default of the tenant or occupant to pay the same, the owner is compelled to pay any such school rate, he may direct the same to be applied to either Public or Separate Schools."

Now what is there in this clause that any fair, honest man can find fault with? This is the pith of it. If a person, Protestant or Catholic becomes the tenant or occupant of property and it is assessed against the owner and tenant or occupant, and there is no agreement as to which party shall pay the school taxes, then the tenant or occupant shall be deemed to pay the rate and he who pays, shall determine how his school rate shall be applied, but in such a case if the tenant or occupant fails to pay the tax refered to, and the owner (Protestant or Catholic) is compelled to pay the rate, then such owner, Protestant or Catholic, may direct the same to be applied to either public or separate school as he wills.

What is there unjust or unfair to either Protestant or a Catholic in this? Simply nothing. It is a mere phantom of disordered brains. The clause places Protestants and Catholic's on the same footing. And it is added:—No agreement can alter these conditions.

Are these loud mouthed Protestants afraid that their wills may not be potent enough to determine how the taxes on their property shall be applied? That such preposterous assertions about Catholic domination could designedly be made, is proof, positive that they who make them are non compos mintis, or wilfully, perversely wicked.

PROTESTANT.

Peterborough, Nov. 25th 1886.

"THE CAUSE OF IRELAND."

Justin McCarthy's Magnificent Address on the Subject.

A Scholarly and Patriotic Deliverance—Reception of Thanks—Opinions of Prominent Citizens.

Last evening Bradburn's Opera House was crowded to the doors to listen to the address of Mr. Justin McCarthy.

Dr. O'Sullivan, president of the local branch of the Irish National League, was chairman. On the platform besides the speaker of the evening and the chairman were, Very Rev. Vicar-General Laurent, Lindsay; Rev. Father Conway, Rev. F. H. Wallace, B.D., Rev. Father Kailty, Emismere; Rev. I. Tovell, Rev. Father McEvay, Fenelon Falls; Dr. Kincaid, Mr. D. W. Dumble, Mr. Geo. A. Cox, Mr. James Stevenson, Mr. James Stratton, Inspector of schools; Dr. Massie, Keene; Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, P. L. S., and Mr. J. O'Meara.

Dr. O'SULLIVAN said it was his pleasing duty to preside on an occasion when the case of the weak, the needy, the down-trodden, was to be plead. He was pleased to preside over a magnificent audience, representing the worth, intelligence and beauty of Peterborough, with the surrounding country well represented. In presenting Mr. McCarthy he was sure he would be received with the respect and courtesy characteristic of a Peterborough audience. The audience were justly proud of their great educational advantages, but he pointed out that there was a time in Ireland when it was a crime to be educated, yet Ireland had many illustrious sons, and one of these he had the pleasure of introducing in the person of the distinguished Justin McCarthy.

on rising, was greeted with round after round of tumultuous applause. He said:

"Mr. Chairman, ladies and gentlemen, I can hardly tell you how much gratified I feel by the kind and generous reception you have given me to-night—how much I am pleased and delighted with the too-complimentary but very eloquent words in which your chairman has introduced me to your favorable notice. I come here, as you know, to say something to you about the national cause of Ireland. I should hardly like to say that I came to plead for the cause, because I don't think that before an audience in this city of Peterborough there can be occasion to plead so simple, so straightforward a cause, allied and combined as it is in so many ways with the spirit and the habits of Canadian people. (Applause.)

WHAT IS THE NATIONAL CAUSE of Ireland? What is it that the Irish people, speaking through their Parliamentary representatives in the English House of Commons; what is it that they demand for Ireland as a satisfaction of National power? What we ask for Ireland is exactly that power of self-government which is, I may say, the right of every Province of this great Dominion and every State in the neighboring American republic, and which you here would not part with, I am convinced, for any possible consideration. We want for Ireland that she may have just the same power of managing her own affairs that you here possess—that every one of your communities possess in this great Dominion of Canada. (Applause.) That is the sum and substance of our demand for Ireland. That is what we ask, and with nothing short of that can or could we possibly be contented. (Applause.) I can hardly, therefore, believe that there is anywhere a Canadian audience which is not in sympathy, to begin with, with the principle of the demand for

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND.

(Applause.) The Canadian who is not in sympathy with that demand would be a traitor to the very principle which makes this Canadian Dominion great, and strong, and prosperous, and united. (Applause.) We ask for Ireland that within the circle of the seas which wash her shores she shall have a right to manage her own domestic and local affairs, according to the best of Irish intelligence, according to the will and determination of the majority of Irishmen, and that her power to manage her national business shall not be superseded or overruled by any body of men sitting in Westminster. (Applause.) We ask for no undue advantages, but to bear whatever is our own share of the expense in the general management of the affairs of the empire at large. Is there anything unreasonable, anything opposed to common sense, in the demand we make on behalf of the Irish people? No, there is nothing which does not fairly and justly challenge the sympathy and the support of every community in the world. Now I want to tell you how we have to ask for this

RIGHT OF SELF-GOVERNMENT.

Remember, what we are asking for is not an innovation, but a restoration. We don't ask to have an Irish Parliament for the first time created to manage our own affairs. We ask to have an Irish Parliament restored, which, during many centuries, did manage the local affairs of Ireland. Englishmen were under the impression that the union which brought England and Ireland together under one common Parliament was almost dated from the time of the flood, and it surprises them to learn that the act of union was, as it were, only a matter of the day before yesterday. Ireland always had an Irish Parliament from her first connection with England, and that Parliament kept advancing in dependence and in general development exactly as the English parliament kept advancing, only in one or two instances the parliament at Dublin was 30 years ahead of the English parliament. (Applause.) Well, then, how did we in Ireland come to lose our national power? I'll tell you the story. The Irish parliament was not in one sense a representative parliament. It was dependent to a great extent on the will, the arbitrary interference, and even the caprice of a sovereign, just as the English parliament was. Ireland had then, as it has now, a population, 5 out of every six of which belonged to the Catholic faith. Yet the Irish parliament was governed by an exclusively Protestant body. The law forbade a Catholic member to sit in parliament, or a Catholic to vote. This parliament went to work to EMANCIPATE THEIR BRETHERN.

It is to their honor that, being composed as it was exclusively of Protestants, the Irish parliament resolved to emancipate the Roman Catholic citizens. Well, they carried their work so far as to succeed in passing a measure which admitted the Irish Catholics to vote and stand for parliament on the same terms as their Protestant brethren. But the moment they made that resolve known, that moment their extinction was resolved upon by the English king and his parliament. About this time there was an association formed in Ireland, which has since become historical and famous, as the Society of United Irishmen. It was a body chiefly composed of Protestant gentlemen, chiefly formed and manned in the northern and Protestant province of Ulster. It held its first meeting in the northern and Protestant city of Belfast, and its one object was the loyal and patriotic purpose of assisting the Irish parliament in bringing about the emancipation. (Applause.) Now there was in Ireland about that time a certain viceroy whose name still lives in the grateful memory of all Irish people—Lord Fitzwilliam—who threw his whole heart and soul into the emancipation movement, and gave the Irish parliament every assistance; and for doing this he was recalled to England under most humiliating circumstances. When Lord Fitzwilliam was recalled the Irish people lost faith in all manner of constitutional agitation—they thought it hopeless to try to get justice from the King or his ministers. Despairing of any help from London, a rising in arms was urged, and the took place. I want you to get in your minds

But having inaugurated this

in PETERBOROUGH, I must hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Some will have it that the Scott Act is a failure; others protest that it is not. This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of come from such places as Toronto, Rochester, Chicago and Winnipeg to get their wants supplied from our manufacture, and are thereby the gainers. We sell better goods at retail prices than can be bought at wholesale. Highest prices paid for raw furs.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

"The garden was so quiet and pretty—I thought there would be no harm—please let me go back—I'm afraid I shall be shut out—"

She tried to pass him. "My poor child," he said, "what is there to be frightened about? I have been tempted out by the lovely night, like you. Take my arm. It is so close in here among the trees. If we go back to the lawn the air will come to you freely."

She took his arm; he could feel her heart throbbing against it. Kindly silent, he led her back to the open space. Some garden chairs were placed here and there; he suggested that she should rest for awhile.

"I'm afraid I shall be shut out," she repeated. "Pray let me get back."

He yielded at once to the wish that she expressed. "You must let me take you back," he exclaimed. "They are all asleep at the house by this time. No! no! don't be frightened again. I have got the key of the door. The moment I have opened it you shall go in by yourself."

She looked at him gratefully. "You are not offended with me now, Mr. Linley," she said. "You are like your kind self again."

They ascended the steps which led to the door. Linley took the key from his pocket. It acted perfectly in drawing back the lock, but the door, when he pushed it, resisted him. He put his shoulder against it, and exerted his strength, helped by his weight. The door remained immovable.

Had one of the servants—sitting up later than usual after the party, and not aware that Mr. Linley had gone into the garden—noticed the door, and carefully fastened the bolts on the inner side? That was exactly what had happened.

There was nothing for it but to submit to circumstances. Linley led the way down the steps again. "We are shut out," he said.

Sydney listened in silent dismay. He seemed to be merely amused; he treated their common misfortune as lightly as if it had been a joke.

"There's nothing so very terrible in our situation," he reminded her. "The servants' offices will be opened between 6 and 7 o'clock; the weather is perfect; and the summer house in the French garden has one easy-chair in it to my certain knowledge, in which you may rest and sleep. I'm sure you must be tired—let me take you there."

She drew back and looked up at the house.

"Can't we make them hear us?" she asked.

"Quite impossible. Besides——" He was about to remind her of the evil construction which might be placed on their appearance in company, returning from the garden at an advanced hour of the night; but her innocence pleaded with him to be silent. He only said: "You forget that we all sleep at the top of our old castle. There is no knocker to the door and no bell that rings up-stairs. Come to the summer house. In an hour or two more we shall see the sun rise."

She took his arm in silence. They reached the French garden without another word having passed between them.

The summer house had been designed, in harmony with the French taste of the last century, from a classical model. It was a rough copy in wood of the temple of Vesta at Rome. Opening the door for his companion, Linley paused before he followed her in. A girl brought up by a careful mother would have understood and appreciated his hesitation; she would have concealed any little feeling of embarrassment that might have troubled her at the moment, and would have asked him to come back and let her know when the rising of the sun began. Neglected by her mother, worse than neglected by her aunt, Sydney's fearless ignorance put a question which would have lowered the poor girl cruelly in the estimation of a stranger. "Are you going to leave me here by myself?" she asked. "Why don't you come in?"

Linley thought of his visit to the school, and remembered the detestable mistress. He excused Sydney; he felt for her. She held the door open for him. Sure of himself, he entered the summer house.

As a mark of respect on her part, she offered the arm-chair to him; it was the one cogniortable seat in the neglected place. He insisted that she should take it; and, searching the summer house, found a wooden stool for himself. The small circular room received but little of the dim outer light—they were near each other—they were silent. Sydney burst suddenly into a nervous little laugh.

"Why do you laugh?" he asked, good-humoredly.

"It seems so strange, Mr. Linley, for us to be out here." In the moment when she made that reply her merriment vanished; she looked out sadly, through the open door, at the stillness of the night. "What should I have done," she wondered, "if I had been shut out of the house by myself?" Her eyes rested on him timidly; there was some thought in her which she shrank from expressing. She only said: "I wish I knew how to be worthy of your kindness."

Her voice moved him. that she was struggling with strong emotion. In one respect men are all alike; they hate to see a woman in tears. Linley treated her like a child; he smiled, and patted her on the shoulder. "Nonsense," he said, gayly. "There is no merit in being kind to my good little governess."

She took that comforting hand—it was a harmless impulse that she was unable to resist—she bent over it and kissed it gratefully. He drew his hand away from her as if the soft touch of her lips had been fire that burned it. "Oh," she cried, "have I done wrong?"

"No, my dear—no, no."

There was an embarrassment in his manner, the unavoidable result of his fear of himself if he faltered in the resolute exercise of self-restraint which was perfectly incomprehensible to Sydney. He moved his seat back a little, so as to place himself farther away. Something in that action, at that time, shocked and humiliated her. Completely misunderstanding him, she thought he was reminding her of the distance that separated them in social rank. Oh, the shame of it! the shame of it! Would other governesses have fallen a liberty with their master? A fit of hysterical sobbing burst its way through her last reserves of self-control; she started to her feet and ran out of the summer house.

Alarmed and distressed, he followed her instantly.

She was leaning against the pedestal of a statue in the garden, panting, shuddering, a sight to touch the heart of a far less sensitive man than the man with whom approached her. "Sydney!" he said. "Dear little Sydney!" She tried to speak to him in return. Breath and strength failed her together; she lifted her hand, vainly grasping at the broad pedestal behind her; she would have fallen if he had not caught her in his arms. Her head sank faintly backward on his breast. He looked at the poor little fluttering thing caught to travel him in the lonely midnight.

Again and again he had honorably restrained himself—he was human; he was a man—in one mad moment it was done, body passionately done—he kissed her.

For the first time in her maiden life a man's lips touched her lips. All that had been perplexing and strange, all that had been innocently wonderful to herself in the feeling that linked Sydney to her first friend, was a mystery no more. Love lifted its veil. Nature revealed its secrets in the one supreme moment of that kiss. She threw her arms around his neck with a low cry of delight—and returned his kiss.

"Sydney," he whispered, "I love you!"

She heard him in rapturous silence. Her kiss had answered for her.

At that crisis in their lives they were saved by an accident; a poor little common accident that happens every day. The spring in the bracelet that Sydney wore gave way as she held him to her; the bright trinket fell on the grass at her feet. The man never noticed it. The woman saw her pretty ornament as it dropped from her arm—saw, and remembered Mrs. Linley's gift.

Cold and pale—with horror of herself confessed in the action, simple as it was—she drew back from him in dead silence.

He was astounded. In tones that trembled with agitation he said to her: "Are you ill?"

"Shameless and wicked," she answered. "Not ill." She pointed to the bracelet on the grass. "Take it up; I am not fit to touch it. Look on the inner side."

He remembered the inscription: "To Sydney Westerfield with Catherine Linley's love." His head sank on his breast; he understood her at last. "You despise me," he said; "and I deserve it."

"No; I despise myself. I have lived among vile people, and I am vile like them."

She moved a few steps away with a heavy sigh. "Kitty!" she said to herself. "Poor little Kitty!"

He followed her. "Why are you thinking of the child," he asked, "at such a time as this?"

She replied without returning or looking round; distrust of herself had inspired her with terror of Linley from the time when the bracelet had dropped on the grass.

"I can make but one atonement," she said. "We must see each other no more. I must say good-by to Kitty—I must go. Help me to submit to my hard lot; I must go."

He set her no example of resignation; he shrank from the prospect that she presented to him. "Where are you to go if you leave us?" he asked.

"Away from England! The farther away from you the better for both of us. Help me with your interest; have me sent to the new world in the west with other emigrants. Give me something to look forward to that is not shame and despair. Let me do something that is innocent and good—I may find a trace of my poor lost brother. Oh, let me go! Let me go!"

Her resolution shamed him. He rose to her level in spite of himself.

"I dare not tell you that you are wrong," he said. "I only ask you to wait a little till we are calmer before you speak of the future again." He pointed to the summer house. "Go in, my poor girl. Rest and compose yourself while I try to think."

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in New York State, costing me $40. Nothing would retain my hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down. It holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child saw; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. Just the Thing.

Mr. T. Bradburn has had the concert room of the Opera House renovated, painted, papered, seated with 200 chairs, and an electric light placed in. A platform is also to be erected at the north end. This will be a most comfortable and convenient place for holding small concerts or entertainments, and will meet a long felt want.

Evangelistic Services.

The first of evangelistic services under Alex. Marshall was held in the mission room, over China Hall, last night. The address was powerful and searching. Another service will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the same place. It is hoped that many will avail themselves of an opportunity of hearing the gospel plainly and truthfully preached without money and without price.

The Lakefield Meeting.

A very large and intelligent meeting of the electors of Lakefield and vicinity assembled last night, which was addressed by Messrs. Stratton and Blezard and the Hon. G. W. Ross. The latter gentleman gave a masterly exposition of public provincial affairs, and the hearty reception accorded him showed that he and his cause had the sympathy of the large gathering in so unanimous a manner as to warrant the strongest hopes of the triumphal return of the Liberal candidates at the coming elections.

that the King of England and his ministers were the rebels against the country, for they broke through every principle of constitution and law, when they deprived of office a victory simply because he took part in a patriotic movement. There was an immense amount of bloodshed, and when the rebellion was broken up the King and his ministers resolved to carry out the extinction of the Irish Parliament. Now, the problem they had to solve was this. They had to induce by some means or other the majority of the members of the Irish House of Commons to vote in favor of this Act of Union—in other words, in favor of the extinction of the legislative independence of their country. True, there was an Irish House of Lords, but it was a good deal like other Houses of Lords. But their difficulty was with the Commons, and they sent over a Viceroy, commissioned to use any means he thought fit in order to get a majority to pass the Act. Lord Cornwallis went to work. He at every opportunity. Now, I don't ask you to take my account of Lord Cornwallis' work. Happily we have better evidence, stronger and fuller testimony as to the nature of the work he was sent to do—the testimony of Lord Cornwallis himself, who wrote over and over again how he detested and loathed the work he had to do, how he sickened at the bribery and corruption he was obliged to carry on. He carried his point in spite of the protests of the best minds in Ireland and some of the most statesmanlike minds in England. He was opposed to the last by one whose name has some historical significance—Sir John Parnell (Cheers). Lord Plunkett poured forth his warning to the bigoted king and his subservient ministers—There is one way and one way alone of extinguishing forever the demand for Irish legislative independence, and that one way is the extinguishing of the lives of every man and woman of Irish birth and tradition, who cherishes love of his country, who has some feeling for the past wrongs and some hope in the future condition of his country. (Applause). Get rid of the

at home and abroad, sweep them off the face of the earth, and then, and not until then, will you have heard of the last of the demand for Irish national independence. (Applause). Well then, did the country accept the Act of Union or acknowledge it even by the negative consent of silence? No, never, the entire people never ceased to raise their voices against it. In three or four years an attempt was made by Robert Emmett for the purpose of restoring the independence of the country, and since that event we have had insurrection after insurrection—constitutional agitation after constitutional agitation. Now, I mention to you these facts because they are of the utmost importance in considering the cause which Ireland has at heart. I call your attention to the fact that Ireland was never consulted about the making of the Act of Union and has never ceased to enter her protests against it. I want to tell you how this new parliamentry agitation sprang up which brought the Irish parliamentary question within what Mr. Gladstone would call "a measurable distance of success." The Irish people began to lose faith in anything to be done by agitation on the floor of the House of Commons. They saw that movement led by the great fail because he was sinking in years and ill health when he began the work, and later on the movement of Isaac Butt failed for the same cause, and I want to tell you one little chapter of Irish history Both before and since the act of union, it has been the policy of certain English ministers to gain over as many Irish representatives as possible to the side of English government—to get them away into office and thus wean them from the cause of Ireland. Some thirty years ago there sprang up in the House of Commons a little band of Irishmen who began to agitate for the restoration of the Irish parliament, by gaining for themselves high positions. The Irish people did not take much stock in the movement. But this little band of self-styled patriots carried on their policy and succeeded in getting places in the English government. These men were linked together in a variety of financial and political speculations and schemes; they founded numerous institutions for the good of Ireland. The first of these four men turned out to be a forger, the second, his brother, ended the same way, the third, who had been made a collector of income taxes, fled the country with a large amount of the funds of the fourth, against whom no accusation could be made, since he could not be placed in the docket as a criminal, was placed on the Irish bench as a judge. (Laughter.) This helped to destroy the faith of Irishmen in parliamentary agitation. You know, all history tells us, that when a people who believe they have a grievance, lose faith in open and public agitation on the platform and in their parliament, they are very near to the treason and

and it was from the possibility of secret conspiracy that some of the Irish members of parliament of a recent date, determined, if they could, to rescue their country. They formed a new band of parliamentary agitators of a different kind, and began to rouse the spirit of the Irish people again to the belief in parliamentary agitation. They determined to hold aloof from the two great parties in England and to speak for Ireland alone, to bring the cause of Ireland before the House at every hour of the day, in session and out of session, by day and night, week after week, and session after session, until the House of Commons, out of very weariness, would be compelled to listen to them; and I think the results have shown that if any events could justify a policy, our policy has been justified. (Applause.) Our leader showed his manifest ability and capacity. He was little known, even in Ireland, but he was a descendent of Sir John Parnell, and bore his name. (Cheers.) Our policy in the beginning we called a policy of activity; our critics and enemies termed it a policy of obstruction. But we were not frightened—to use an American slang phrase, we didn't "scare worth a cent." (Laughter.) They might call it a policy of obstruction, of construction, or instruction, and we would not be abashed if they called it a policy of destruction. That was the policy we adopted, and we carried it out. (Applause.) We were accused of making the disturbances of out what the Yankees might term

'PURE CUSSEDNESS.'

(Laughter.) We began to discover in ourselves what we would fondly have called eloquence, but what our opponents preferred to call the "gift of gab." (Laughter.) Now, Irishmen are by nature, as you all know, diffident and retiring, but still when they are compelled to put themselves forward and speak, they do manage to have a good deal to say for themselves, and we said a good deal in this instance. I don't know that the House of Commons always listened to us, but we kept on talking just the same. We took a good many divisions. A division in the House of Commons occupies 15 or 20 minutes, and when a division was called, we 7 or 8 walked out into the lobby on one side, and the whole House on the other. (Prolonged laughter.) And we had one with us who, though a landlord, a Protestant, and an officer in the army, had the courage to assist us; and he, not being an orator, thought he was bound to keep up our spirits by all manners of jokes and jests. His favorite plan was to get at the head of the 7 or 8 of us who filed out one side of the House, and, seeming suddenly to be stricken with terror, would cry out, "Back, boys, back; don't keep crowding us on in that way. There is room enough for us all; we will all get through in time. Faith, don't crush us against the door." (Prolonged applause.) I thought of him not long ago, when, if he had been there, he would have found enough Home Rulers there to give him a chance of being crushed against the door. That was the night when the division was taken by Mr. Gladstone's so large a party of 7 or 8, but of 311, led by the greatest orator of the age. (Tumultuous applause). I want to know whether any modern history has so high an example of so splendid an advance made under such unpromising means? What had happened in the meantime—the Reform bill, which gave the right to the majority of the people to record their votes in the Irish elections, was passed and when that came, we felt little doubt of our ultimate success. (Cheers.) And the English, Scotch and Welsh people were aroused to a knowledge of our purpose and sympathy with our demand. We converted to our side the whole mass of the English working democracy, in town and country, we brought over to our side all that was radical in the Radical party—all that was liberal in the Liberal party. The Home Rule measure was defeated in England alone, by a majority of the votes, but not of the voters." The speaker then described the means by which rich propertied landlords could have a vote in each county in which they had estates, and as the elections were spread over a term of 5 or 7 weeks, they had plenty of time to vote all round. It was once told him that a single man had recorded

FIFTY VOTES AGAINST HOME RULE.

Mr. McCarthy went on to say that no great reform could be effected by one effort. But the cause of Home Rule was as sure to triumph as the sun was sure to rise. (Cheers). The Reform bill enfranchised large numbers Home Rule with rare exceptions had swept Ireland. (Cheers.) In Ulster itself the Home Rule party had a majority of representatives. Ulster was not as an unit in opposition to Home Rule. If the question were left to the majority that majority would declare in its favour. (Cheers.) Some of the warmest supporters of Parnell were Ulster men. (Cheers.) There were only two members of the speaker's family and both represented Ulster constituencies. In the south of Ireland, where Catholic's were six to one, Ulster Protestants had been selected as members. The speaker although a Catholic could not represent an Ulster riding except by Protestant votes. Home Rule was

NOT A SECTARIAN MOVEMENT.

The Home Rule party had successively elected three Protestants as leaders—Isaac Butt, an Episcopalian Protestant; Wm Shaw, an Ulster Presbyterian; and Charles Stewart Parnell, an ultra Episcopalian. (Cheers.) On the ground that Ireland was a common country, Protestants had been appealed to, and they had nobly responded. Parnell voiced the sentiments of the Home Rule party when he said "Ireland cannot spare one Irishmen from the service of the country." Irishmen both at home and abroad deserved credit for the success of the Home Rule movement. The material assistance rendered by the latter had helped to wage the warfare. The cause could not have made head against the landlords without help from compatriots in every part of the world. The success of the Home Rulers was to come. The speaker was free to say, though they would welcome Home Rule from any source, that they would be proud that Gladstone should crown the edifice. (Cheers.) Ireland would accept no meagre scheme of four provincial legislatures. From whatever source Home Rule came, as come it must, history would be just to those who had struggled for it. When an Irish Parliament was again established on College Green in Dublin, two names would be inscribed on the tablet commemorating that event—the names of William Ewart Gladstone and Charles Stewart Parnell. (Tremendous cheering again and again renewed, during which the speaker took his seat.)

VOTE OF THANKS.

Dr. KINCAID, in moving a vote of thanks to the speaker, said the motion came with good grace from an Ulster Protestant like himself. He was one of the oldest Home Rulers in Peterborough. He recognised Mr. McCarthy's assistance in bringing Home Rule to its present position. He had captured Derry in Ireland, and he had captured the Derry of Canada (Kingston) the other day. (Cheers.)

Dr. MASSIE, of Keene, seconded the address in a few remarks, in which he emphasised the duty of patriotism, and asserted that no true patriot would deny to another the live loyalty to his country possessed by himself. He asserted in reply to the argument that Ireland should not be trusted with Home Rule, that if she were trusted she would prove herself worthy of the trust. (Cheers.)

Mr. GEO. A. COX, who was received with hearty cheers, said it would be presumption to say anything in addition to the splendid address they had listened to. He would say that he was fully in accord with the position the speaker had taken upon the cause he had so eloquently advocated. He was pleased to give his hearty support to the resolution moved by Dr. Kincaid.

Mr. JAS. STEVENSON felt that the popular ignorance upon the subject of Home Rule had been enlightened by the excellent address of Mr. McCarthy, whose "History of Our Own Times" he had read with such deep interest. He was friendly to Home Rule, and was pleased to support the motion.

Mr. D. W. DUMBLE expressed his extreme gratification at the chaste, clear and beautiful lecture of the evening. The withholding of justice to Ireland so long was a disgrace to England. He had objected to Gladstone's bill because it denied to Irishmen a share in the legislation of the empire. He believed that Home Rule would make Ireland loyal to the empire. (Cheers.)

Mr. JAMES STRATTON, Inspector of Schools, said he had heard the representative of Armagh in the Opera House on a recent occasion, but was more impressed with his eloquence than the force of his arguments. He was a loyal subject of the empire, but in favour of Home Rule gladly supported the motion.

REV. FATHER CONWAY referred to the impartially and justice to his opponents that characterized the speaker. No one reading his historical works or hearing his speeches, would know from any bias therein that he was a Catholic. Irishmen in Canada who enjoyed the blessings of liberty, should not rest till their oppressed native land enjoyed the same measure of liberty. Ireland would be satisfied with nothing less. (Cheers.)

REV. I. TOVELL reminded the audience that at a recent meeting addressed by anti Home Rulers, a resolution in favor of home rule had been passed. He now believed that when English opinion became educated upon the subject, she would be willing to grant the justice of Home Rule to Ireland. He was especially impressed with the spirit of Mr. McCarthy's speech. He addressed the reason of his audiences, and made no appeal to prejudices.

THE CHAIRMAN then put the resolution which was enthusiastically carried by a standing vote, and cheers for the Queen, Mr. McCarthy and the Chairman brought the meeting to a close.

Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. LEAGUE IN DANGER.

RUMORS OF MEASURES TO BE TAKEN AGAINST IT.

DUBLIN, Nov. 26.—Sir Michael Hicks-Beach and Gen. Buller have returned to Dublin. They attended a meeting of the Privy Council yesterday, at which important measures were decided upon. The Marquis of Londonderry, Lord-Lieutenant, who had intended to go to England, has postponed his departure. It is rumored that vigorous measures will be taken against the National League; that some of the meetings of that body will be prohibited, and perhaps the agitators arrested.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chief Secretary for Ireland, has been busily engaged at Dublin Castle conferring with the legal and military authorities. The city is agitated by rumors of the wildest character relating to the Government's intentions.

A great meeting of Nationalists called to assemble in the suburbs of Irishtown on Sunday will, it is thought, be prohibited. The officials of the Irish National League do not appear to be disturbed. They are all pursuing their avocations in the ordinary way and all of them say they have no idea of what the Government has decided to do, if it has decided upon anything.

The Irish Times (Conservative) says the Government has resolved to promptly suppress all anti-rent and other illegal combinations; to curtail the license of the press; to forcibly suppress intimidation; to enforce the laws governing the processes for the collection of debts; to proclaim all meetings called for certain purposes and to arrest certain prominent agitators of the anti-rent policy. The Times also says it is reported that troops have been sent to the different points in the country where action against the anti-rent agitators is meant.

John Dillon has been summoned to appear in court Monday and show cause why a criminal information should not be sworn out against him for publicly advising tenants to subvert eviction rather than pay rent.

The Government has proclaimed the National League meeting, called to assemble at Sligo. This action, coupled with the prosecution of John Dillon, is causing the most intense excitement throughout Ireland.

The Nationalists have decided to hold meetings in different parts of Sligo, Galway and Tipperary in order to evade the Government's prohibition.

The Dublin Telegraph says that orders have been sent to Athlone to keep 100 cavalry and 200 infantry in readiness for duty. It is rumored that the object is to arrest the trustees appointed under the United Ireland plan, to whose charge the rents of local tenants have been committed.

John Dillon has been summoned to appear in court on Tuesday next, the charges against him being that his language at the meeting held at Longford on November 7 led to an assault upon a bailiff and resistance to the execution of decrees; that at the Murroe meeting on Monday last he made a speech calculated to intimidate. The affidavits on which the summons was issued were lodged by the police inspectors and stenographers who were present at the meetings referred to. The citation calls upon Dillon to find sureties for his good behavior, in default of which he will be committed to jail.

Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien attended a meeting of Lord Dillon's tenants to-night. They urged the tenants to firmly resist all attempts to compel them to pay unjust rents. Mr. Dillon had arranged to speak at other meetings and it is expected that he will continue to fill all his engagements before he returns to Dublin. On his return he will probably give bail for trial and thus compel the Government to prove the illegality of his action at the Longford and Murroe meetings.

The Government has ordered that all the taverns in Sligo be closed on Sunday. The National League meeting was prohibited because the magistracy believed that it was intended to intimidate jurors at the coming assizes. The military is called on to disperse all gatherings. The Nationalists are excited over this state of things, and say they will give the speakers a banquet in lieu of holding a meeting.

After the meeting of Lord Dillon's tenants to-night Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien remained until a late hour, receiving deposits from the tenants in consequence of Lord Dillon's refusal to grant a reduction of 25 per cent. It is rumored that United Ireland has been warned.

The Limerick branch of the National League at a meeting to-day adopted a resolution, in which they deprecate assisting in the Queen's jubilee, and advise Irish mayors to refuse proffers of knighthood until Home Rule has been granted to Ireland.

They will Not Flinch.

LINCOLN, Neb. Nov. 26.—President John Fitzgerald of the Irish National League of America has received the following cablegram from the Secretary of the league in Ireland:

The Government in prosecuting John Dillon, M.P., and proclaiming public meetings, admits its inability to govern Ireland without coercion. We will not flinch. TIMOTHY HARRINGTON.

Disasters at Sea.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Nov. 26.—The brig Toronto of Windsor, N.S., went ashore at Watch Hill in a gale last night; crew saved.

BIDDEFORD, Me., Nov. 26.—The schooner L. D. Wentworth of Bangor, loaded with coal, went ashore on Folly Island this afternoon. The captain and crew were saved. The vessel and cargo are a total loss.

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 26.—The British bark Drumadoon, loaded with 1700 bales of cotton, was burned to-day. The crew narrowly escaped with their lives.

Knights of Labor Boycotting Brewers.

DETROIT, Nov. 26.—The Trades' Council and District Assembly of the Knights of Labor, representing 7000 members, have put a boycott on the beer brewed by the Voight, Kling, Stroh, Gobel and Hauck Brewing Companies, the object being to break up the Brewers' Association, which has been engaged in a long war with the Brewers' Union. The brewers talk of arresting some of the most prominent instigators of the boycott for conspiracy.

The Republicans of Spain.

MADRID, Nov. 26.—At a meeting of prominent Republicans held here yesterday a resolution condemning the recent military revolts was rejected. It was decided to urge Ruiz Zorilla to return to Spain and it was resolved that the party should participate in the coming elections.

A SOCIETY SCANDAL.

LADY COLIN CAMPBELL'S SUIT FOR ABSOLUTE DIVORCE.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The action for divorce brought by Lady Colin Campbell against her husband, Lord Colin Campbell, fifth son of the Duke of Argyle, came up for hearing today. The court-room was so crowded that the officials had to barricade the corridors to prevent the crowding from becoming dangerous. Lady Campbell, her sister and their mother were the first persons directly interested in the action to enter the court. They sat together beside the plaintiff's solicitor, Chas. Russell, Q.C. Lord Colin Campbell entered soon afterwards and sat near the plaintiff and at the same table, there being interposed between the litigants none but their respective counsel.

Mr. Russell, in opening the case for Lady Campbell, said that his client petitioned for a decree of absolute divorce from Lord Colin Campbell on the grounds of cruelty and adultery. Lady Campbell, the plaintiff's lawyer continued, was formerly Miss Blood and was a respectable and attractive person. She was sought in marriage by the defendant and became engaged to him in 1880. The marriage was delayed at His Lordship's request until July, 1881. When the ceremony had been performed the couple went away on a "melancholy honeymoon," the groom being attended all the time by an hospital nurse. In fact Lord Campbell was attended by this nurse from his engagement to Miss Blood down to the date of the termination of their married life in 1883. He was, declared the lawyer, never during the entire period independent of the special nurse's care. This was because His Lordship was afflicted with disease. Of course the plaintiff could not have had any idea of what ailed her betrothed husband. The marriage was not consummated until October, 1881. The case was so very horrible, declared the lawyer, that he would refrain as far as possible from even alluding to its details.

At this point the venerable Duke of Argyle, the defendant's father, entered the court-room and took a seat beside Lord Colin Campbell, near whom the Marquis of Lorne, the defendant's eldest brother, had already taken a seat.

Continuing Mr. Russell said that Dr. Bird, who had attended both Lord and Lady Campbell, would testify to show that the lady's life was well nigh unendurable but that she had tried to do what she deemed the duty required of her and when she became aware of the nature of her husband's malady desired to remain with him as a companion and even to nurse him in order to hide his misery from the world. Finally, however, as it would be shown, the wife found herself absolutely unable to submit to enforced relationship with him and she told her husband so and explained her reason. He replied that she was mistaken about him, and added the statement that it was difficult for him to suppose that she believed anything like what she suspected to be true of him. This solemn disclaimer by her husband, under the circumstances, influenced her. In April, 1883, plaintiff miscarried. Then Lord Colin Campbell suggested that she had had improper relations with their physician, Dr. Bird. When the latter heard of this intimation he insisted on severing all relationship with the family. Upon this defendant withdrew his accusation and requested Dr. Bird to attend Lady Campbell. Lady Campbell thenceforth refused to admit intimacy on the part of defendant, and he threatened her with expulsion from his house if she persisted in her refusal. She did persist and her husband suspended her money allowance. She then applied for judicial separation. To this Sir Colin Campbell made reply denying all her charges. The lady's condition in September, 1883, was so serious that a surgical operation was performed upon her for her relief, and yet, despite the fact that all this physical misery had been communicated to her by him, her husband, during the period of her acutest suffering would cruelly account for her condition by making charges of infidelity against her. In March, 1884, plaintiff obtained a decree of separation. She repaired to her father's house at Laurence and returned to England in the June following. On her way home she and her party stopped in Paris, staying at a hotel. While they were at this hotel the Duke of Marlborough called upon them. This visit was made the occasion by her husband for a charge of adultery. Lord Colin Campbell even went so far as to write to the Paris authorities requesting them to arrest his wife and lodge her in the prison used for the incarceration of prostitutes.

It was difficult to believe, said Mr. Russell, that any man of ordinary instincts could act in this way towards a wife already so injured, "but," added the lawyer, "Lord Colin Campbell's pride had been lowered into the dust." Mr. Russell then detailed the grounds of the charge of adultery, which plaintiff made against defendant. Turning then to a review of the counter charges made by Lord Colin Campbell against plaintiff that she had been guilty of criminal conduct with the Duke of Marlborough, Chief Shaw and others, Mr. Russell said the lady was in a position to successfully meet all these charges. The Duke of Marlborough and Mr. Shaw were old family friends. Lady Campbell and Mrs. Shaw had long been intimate acquaintances. Gen. Butler, one of those with whom the defendant sought to connect plaintiff, was old enough to be her father, and Mrs. Butler was Lady Campbell's dearest friend. Dr. Bird had sought protection for his character by bringing a suit for damages against Lord Colin—in fact Lady Campbell was able to repute every one of the foul charges brought against her.

The first witness called by plaintiff's counsel was Lady Miles. She said she told Lord Campbell in 1883 that Lady Campbell had resolved to refuse to live with him as his wife, and her reasons for such decision, but would continue to maintain the kindest friendly relations towards him and refrain from all mention of her separation in other respects from him. Lord Campbell was shocked at the information. He protested very hard against his wife's decision and said if she would recall it he would let Lady Campbell have her own way for a period of two years and would treat her with affection. Witness subsequently visited Lord and Lady Campbell in London. She found Lady Campbell suffering intense pain and Lord Colin Campbell explained it by saying, "there has been foul play upstairs and Lady Campbell has had a miscarriage." Lady Miles protested that this could not be so and defendant re-affirmed that it was. Lord Campbell accused Dr. Bird of having taken advantage of his position. Dr. Bird denied the accusation and refused to longer attend Lady Campbell unless the accusation was withdrawn. A family council ensued. At this Lord Colin admitted that he had not meant all that he had said, and asked Lady Miles to apologize for him to Dr. Bird. At the same time he complained of the length of time Gen. Butler remained when he called upon Lady Campbell. Witness, continuing, said that at Lord Colin Campbell's request she had consented to be his witness so far as to state that he had not been guilty of ill-usage of his wife, but said she urged defendant not to call her because she knew of his relations with the girl Mary Watson, and felt sure they would transpire under cross-examination. After Lady Campbell had separated from defendant he complained to witness of having been badly treated. She retorted that he ought to think himself lucky because his wife had obtained a mere separation and not a divorce, which she would have got if witness had been called to testify. Concerning Mary Watson, Lady Miles testified that the girl was a housemaid. Witness had found Mary Watson in Lord Colin Campbell's bedroom in a compromising position.

Witness continuing said that when she saw Lord Colin Campbell and Mary Watson together he said: "Mary is a good little thing; she is very fond of me. She has very nice hair; I often take it down and play with it." Witness had seen letters from Mary Watson to defendant signed "Your affectionate Mary." Witness admitted she had heard Lady Campbell say in the presence of her husband that there were a dozen men she liked better than him.

Here a letter was produced written by the witness to defendant advising him to get divorced and then to "take a nice little woman to be a companion and a comfort to him. Witness admitted that she wrote the letter, and said that in reply to it Lord Campbell asked her whether Lady Campbell would require alimony if he allowed her to get divorced from him. To this witness answered that the Blood family would not ask for alimony and would pay Lady Campbell's costs.

The case was at this point adjourned.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—A herd of forty Texas steers became frightened at an Elevated railway train last night and stampeded through the streets in the upper part of the city. DEATH FROM MALPRACTICE.

The Sad Fate of Jennie Phillips—Arrest of a Detroit Doctor.

DETROIT, Nov. 26.—Miss Jennie Phillips, aged 22, died here on Tuesday evening after a two weeks' illness. She admitted to Dr. Richardson, who was called in, that she had undergone an operation. The coroner and police were notified and commenced an investigation.

Minnie Dunn, a friend and confidant of the dead girl, was summoned as a witness, and on being assured that it was useless for her to hold back any information, she told the whole story to the detectives. She says "about two weeks before Jennie Phillips died the latter asked her to accompany her while she had an operation performed. Minnie consenting, they went together to Dr. Cox's office. Dr. Cox," so the girl says, "cautioned them not to say anything about what occurred." This evidence of the Dunn girl is corroborated by that of Mrs. McCauley, the woman who says Jennie told her Dr. Cox performed the operation.

Cox was arrested yesterday and arraigned before Justice Haugh this afternoon and held in $5000 bail with two sureties for examination.

Five or six years ago the girl Phillips came from England with a younger sister named Fanny, who lives near Galt, Ont. Among her effects was a letter from her sister, postmarked "Valens," Canada, signed "Fanny Rintoul."

THE IRON TRADE.

Extraordinary Demand in Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A Pittsburg despatch to the Journal of Commerce says: The extraordinary demand for all kinds of crude and finished iron, pipes, tubes, merchant steel and steel rails is fully maintained throughout Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio, and the inquiries of the past day or two point to a still heavier demand in certain directions. Orders have been given by American consumers for upward of 100,000 tons of raw material of various kinds, including steel rails, slabs and ingots, Bessemer, pig and spiegel, of which about one-half is due now. There will be a heavy demand for steel, Bessemer, pigs and various kinds of foreign material. Prices are very firm throughout the West, and crude iron makers are inclined to withdraw from the market, in view of the strong upward tendency.

A Philadelphia despatch to the same paper says: Early deliveries on bars, plates, sheets, etc., are difficult. The mills are steadily filling up. Heavy deliveries of steel blooms are awaited from the other side. Steel rail mills are overcrowded and are quoting $35.50 to $36 for earliest possible deliveries on small lots. Old rails are $22.50. The outlook is bright.

The Fenian Brotherhood.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—The Fenian Brotherhood, which was in secret convention here for four days, concluded its sessions yesterday. The report of the Secretary stated that the organization was prosperous, and that "work" would soon begin again in England. It is said O'Donovan Rossa resigned his office as executive of the Brotherhood, and that Dr. Hamilton Williams of Green Point, who is credited with having carried from Germany the knives with which Carendish and Burke were cut to pieces in Phœnix Park, was appointed in his place.

This means practically the Kingsclere riding, and will doubtless include the services in the royal colors of the Prince of Wales. Then is seems probable that Barrett will quickly be promoted to the top of his profession.

THE OPERA HOUSE MEETING

A Large and Influential Concourse of Electors.

Speeches by Mr. Stratton, Mr. Carnegie, and Hon. G. W. Ross—A Full and Satisfactory Showing Made of the Record of the Mowat Administration—A Most Orderly and Successful Meeting.

Last evening the largest, most intelligent and most respectable audience ever assembled in Bradburn's Opera House on a political occasion, was gathered, standing room even having been at a premium. Shortly after 7.30 the chairman of the meeting, Mr. Melville Millar, president of the West Riding Reform Association, came upon the stage, accompanied by the speakers of the evening—Mr. Stratton, Hon. G. W. Ross, and Mr. Carnegie—and Messrs. Geo. A. Cox, Commons candidate for West Peterborough, D. W. Dumble, John Bertram, James Edwards, T. G. Hazlitt, A. R. Kidd, warden of the county, Walter Patterson, jr., and Dr. Fife, vice-president of the West Riding Reform Association.

Mr. MILLAR briefly remarked that the electors had met to receive information upon the important matter of how they should cast their votes. He had much pleasure in introducing Mr. Stratton, the candidate for the representation of the West Riding in the Local Legislature.

Mr. STRATTON, on rising, was greeted with loud cheers. He said it afforded him great pleasure in addressing a few words to this large gathering, representing the thrift, intelligence and industry of the town. They were met in the discharge of a high duty and to take counsel upon matters affecting the highest interests of the country. The electors were aware that we were on the eve of a general election contest, and the Mowat Administration were asking for a continuation of the confidence reposed in them during the past fourteen years. They were aware that at a recent convention he (Mr. Stratton) received the unanimous nomination to contest this riding for the Ontario Legislature. He accepted the nomination, not that he desired it, for no matter how successful the issue might be, it would not have a beneficial effect upon his business, but he was urged by his Liberal friends to accept, and he had received, moreover, flattering encouragement from a large number of his Conservative friends, who were prepared to sink party feeling and support the supporter of the capable and efficient Mowat Administration. He, therefore, accepted the nomination and had entered into the contest. And here he was reminded that it had been urged that he was too young for the position, but that objection was gradually growing less every day. (Laughter). He had been charged with the "hideous crime of being a young man." He might not be venerable in years, but hoped to be able to show before the campaign was over that it is not necessary to grow

OLD IN YEARS AND POLITICAL WICKEDNESS

to secure a majority of the support of the independent electors of the West Riding. (Cheers.) The time had come in Canada when young men are taking their proper place in the lists of political action. The Mowat government had considered the young men of the country and had endowed them with the franchise (cheers) a right to which they were entitled. He held that if young men were permitted to have a voice in the affairs of the country there was nothing inconsistent, in having a young man to represent them on the floor of the legislature. (Loud cheers). The speaker remarked that there were a number of young men engaged in business in Peterborough and conducting very successful establishments. How would they like to have the objection raised against them that they were not entitled, because they were young men, to the confidence and patronage of the public. If the speaker had been a young man during the years his opponent had represented this riding and been the miserable failure as a legislator he had, then their charge of his being too young might be urged with some force. After years of

PERSISTENT INQUIRY AND RESEARCH

Mr. Carnegie had been unable to secure one scrap of legitimate objection to the administration of Hon. Mr. Mowat. In view of this fact he has either been recreant to his trust as a representative, or he was unqualified for the position, or the record of the government was above successful attack and thus worthy of a renewal of the people's confidence. He was welcome to sit on either horn of the dilemma he chose. (Cheers.) There was one thing certain, the Mowat administration was worthy of the confidence of the people. He would say with regard to Mr. Carnegie's statement that he was afraid to meet that gentleman on a public platform, and that the Mowat government was so bad that its representative could not support it, that he strongly denied it. He had come to the conclusion that it was most desirable and beneficial to the public interests that campaign meetings should be held separately. He held that the candidates should appear before the electors and explain their position calmly, quietly and judicially, and then allow the electors to consider the facts maturely, and then decide whether they would support or oppose Hon. Mr. Mowat. In canvassing, a number of the workingmen had spoken to him in all kindness respecting the use of what is known as "bull type" in the EXAMINER. It was a personal matter respecting his own business, and he would not refer to the matter only he wished to be set right before the electors. He wanted a fair, square fight in this campaign. If he was beaten it was personally a small matter. This contest was not between Mr. Carnegie and himself, but as to whether the electors wanted the Mowat administration continued or not. He explained that he had arranged to have sent him every day three columns of stereotyped plates of the latest telegraphic news. If he had to pay directly for these telegraphic despatches, he could not afford to give every day as full and complete telegraphic news as the city papers, and which now under this arrangement appeared in the EVENING EXAMINER. In reference to his employees, he had some 27 or 30 in his employ, and he did not know one that was discontented with his position or wages. There was one thing certain, than any printing establishment between Toronto and Kingston. (Cheers.) He was not certain that the charge alluded to, which he understood was originated in the Review office, was done with Mr. Carnegie's knowledge or authority. It would be most inconsistent, for the Review used "ball-type" also in its columns. His (Mr. Stratton's) printers were making more money and were better satisfied than before he began using the "plates." In the matter of joint meetings, during the last campaign Mr. Carnegie was invited, but did not appear personally at any of the meetings. He (Mr. Stratton) would appear before the electors in the riding and explain his position on public questions and leave the electors to judge whether they would give him their support—and through him the Mowat Administration. He wanted every vote polled for him to be polled in support of the Mowat Administration, in whose behalf he had the honor of appearing before them on the present occasion, the thought that when the meeting is over it should have been shown conclusively that Hon. Mr. Mowat has honestly and ably conducted the affairs of this province, and that it is in the interests of this riding and the country to give him another lease of power. After asking a patient and respectful hearing, for Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Stratton resumed his seat amidst loud and prolonged applause.

HE WAS PAYING HIGHER WAGES

Mr. Cox, candidate for the Commons in the Liberal interest, apologized for taking up the time of the meeting in making a personal explanation, but he desired to take this the very first opportunity to contradict unfounded rumours. He congratulated Mr. Stratton on having present at his first meeting the largest and most respectable gathering of electors he had ever seen at a political gathering in Peterborough. The rumours had been industriously circulated that he (Mr. Cox) had acted in opposition to the interests of the working man in cutting down wages, and in introducing competing emigrants, etc. To these rumours he desired to give a flat and most positive contradiction. (Cheers). Since 1863 he had been engaged in building operations in town and during that time he had paid hundreds of thousands of dollars to the working men of the town. During the twenty three years he (Mr. Cox) had paid, he asserted, the full average wages. This was a fact of which he challenged contradiction, and he was willing to forfeit the sum of $5000, for the benefit of the Mechanics Institute, to be devoted to the establishment of night classes for mechanics and for the library of the Mechanics Institute, if any person could successfully show that he had failed to pay the full average within the period mentioned, and he was willing to make Judge Weller, Police Magistrate Dumble and Mr. Hilliard a committee to decide the matter. He hoped that his opponents would do him the justice of ceasing to circulate these rumors, or accept the challenge he had issued; and if they could prove the charges, there would be $5,000 forfeit for the benefit of the workingmen of the town, and if the parties spreading these rumours were as anxious as they pretended to be for the interests of the workingmen, they would have an opportunity of securing $5,000 for their benefit, by proving their charges. (Cheers.) Speaking in reference to the immigrant charge, Mr. Cox pointed out that the Barnardo Home entered into competition with no working man It was supported entirely by English funds, or what might be voluntarily contributed in Canada, which was very little, for he (Mr. Cox) had made it one of the conditions of the establishment of the Home here, that subscriptions were not to be solicited. The institution was open and free to the reception of destitute Canadian children as well as old country children. The children were mostly for adoption by families without children, or for training as servants and farm laborers. The country needed population to people the back districts, and no workmen could be harmed by any possible competition from the children of the Barnardo Home. Mr Cox closed his remarks by calling on the elec-

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefited the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41tf

I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. R. W. MUNCASTER.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

He left her and paced up and down the formal walks in the garden. Away from the maddening fascination of her presence his mind grew clearer. He resisted the temptation to think of her tenderly; he set himself to consider what it would be well to do next.

The moonlight was seen no more. Misty and starless, the dark sky spread its majestic obscurity over the earth. Linley looked wearily toward the eastern heaven. The darkness daunted him; he saw in it the shadow of his own sense of guilt. The gray glimmering of the dawn, the songs of birds as the pure light softly climbed the sky, roused and relieved him. With the first radiant rising of the sun he returned to the summer house.

"Do I disturb you?" he asked, waiting at the door.

"No."

"Will you come out and speak to me?"

She appeared at the door, waiting to hear what he had to say to her.

"I must ask you to submit to a sacrifice of your own feelings," he began. "When I kept away from you in the drawing-room last night—when my strange conduct made you fear that you had offended me—I was trying to remember what I owed to my good wife. I have been thinking of her again. We must spare her a discovery too terrible to be endured while her attention is claimed by the guests who are now in the house. In a week's time they will leave us. Will you consent to keep up appearances? Will you live with us as usual until we are left by ourselves?"

"It shall be done, Mr. Linley. I only ask one favor of you. My worst enemy is my own miserable, wicked heart. Oh, don't you understand me? I am ashamed to look at you!"

He had only to examine his own heart and to know what she meant. "Say no more," he answered, sadly. "We will keep as much away from each other as we can."

She shuddered at that open recognition of the guilty love which united them in spite of their horror of it, and took refuge from him in the summer house. Not a word more passed between them until the unbarring of doors was heard in the stillness of the morning and the smoke began to rise from the kitchen chimney. Then he returned and spoke to her.

"You can get back to the house," he said. "Go up by the front stairs, and you will not meet the servants at this early hour. If they do see you, you have your cloak on; they will think you have been in the garden earlier than usual. As you pass the upper door draw back the bolts quietly, and I can let myself in."

She bent her head in silence. He looked after her as she hastened away from him over the lawn; conscious of admiring her, conscious of more than he dare realise to himself. When she disappeared he turned back to wait where she had been waiting. With his sense of the duty he owed to his wife penitently present to his mind, the memory of that fatal kiss still left its vivid impression on him. "What a scoundrel I am!" he said to himself as he stood alone in the summer-house, looking at the chair which she had just left.

X.

A clever old lady, possessed of the inestimable advantages of worldly experience, must submit nevertheless to the laws of nature. Time and sleep together—powerful agents in the small hours of the morning—had got the better of Mrs. Presty's resolution to keep awake. Free from discovery, Sydney ascended the stairs. Free from discovery, Sydney entered her own room.

Half an hour later Linley opened the door of his drawing-room. His wife was still sleeping. His mother-in-law awoke two hours later, looked at her watch, and discovered that she had lost her opportunity. Other old women, under similar circumstances, might have felt discouraged. This old woman believed in her own suspicions more devoutly than ever. When the breakfast bell rang Sydney found Mrs. Presty in the corridor waiting to say good-morning.

"I wonder what you were doing last night, when you ought to have been in bed?" the old lady began, with a treacherous amiability of manner. "Oh, I am not mistaken! Your door was open, my dear, and I looked in."

"Why did you look in, Mrs. Presty?"

"My young friend, I was naturally anxious about you. I am anxious still. Were you in the house or out of the house?"

"I was walking in the garden," Sydney replied.

"Admiring the moonlight?"

"Yes; admiring the moonlight."

"Alone, of course?" Sydney's friend suggested.

And Sydney took refuge in prevarication. "Why should you doubt it?" she said.

Mrs. Presty wasted no more time in asking questions. She was pleasantly reminded of the words of worldly wisdom which she had addressed to her daughter on the day of Sydney's arrival at Mount Morven. "The good qualities of that unfortunate young creature," she had said, "can not have always resisted the horrid temptations and contaminations about her. Hundreds of times she must have had deceit forced on her; she must have lived through ungovernable fear." Elevated a little higher than ever in her own estimation, Mrs. Presty took Sydney's arm and led her down to breakfast with motherly familiarity. Linley met them at the foot of the stairs. His mother-in-law first stole a look at Sydney, and then shook hands with him cordially. "My dear Herbert, how pale you are! That horrid smoking. You look as if you had been up all night."

Mrs. Linley paid her customary visit to the school-room that morning.

The necessary attention to her guests had left little leisure for the exercise of observation at the breakfast table. The one circumstance which had forced itself on her notice had been the boisterous gayety of her husband. Too essentially honest to practice deception of any kind cleverly, Linley had overacted the part of a man whose mind was entirely at ease. The most unsuspicious woman living, his wife was simply amused. "How he does enjoy society," she thought. "Herbert will be a young man to the end of his life."

In the best possible spirits—still animated by her successful exertions to entertain her friends—Mrs. Linley opened the school-room door briskly. "How are the lessons getting on?" she began, and checked herself with a start. "Kitty!" she exclaimed. "Crying?"

The child ran to her mother with tears in her eyes. "Look at Syd! She sulks, she cries, she won't talk to me. Send for the doctor."

"You tiresome child, I don't want the doctor. I'm not ill."

"There, mamma!" cried Kitty. "She never studied me before to-day."

In other words, here was a complete reversal of the usual order of things in the school-room. Patient Sydney was out of temper; gentle Sydney spoke bitterly to the little friend whom she loved. Mrs. Linley drew a chair to the governess' side and took her hand. The strangely altered girl tore her hand away, and burst into a violent fit of crying. Puzzled and frightened, Kitty (to the best of the child's ability) followed her example. Mrs. Linley took her daughter on her knee and gave Sydney's outbreak of agitation time to subside. There were no feverish appearances in her face; there was no feverish heat in her skin when their hands had touched each other for a moment. In all probability the mischief was nervous mischief, and the outburst of weeping was a hysterical effort at relief.

"I am afraid, my dear, you have had a bad night," Mrs. Linley said.

"Bad? Worse than bad!"

Sydney stopped, looked at her good mistress and friend in terror, and made a confused effort to explain away what she had just said. As sensibly and kindly self-possessed as ever, Mrs. Linley told her that she only wanted rest and quiet. "Let me take you to my room," she proposed. "We will have the sofa moved into the balcony, and you will soon go to sleep in the delicious, warm air. You may put away your books, Kitty; this is a holiday. Come with me, and be petted and spoilt by the ladies in the morning-room."

Neither the governess nor the pupil were worthy of the sympathy so frankly offered to them. Still strangely confused, Sydney made commonplace apologies, and asked leave to go out and walk in the park. Hearing this, Kitty declared that where her governess went she would go, too. Mrs. Linley smoothed her daughter's pretty auburn hair, and said, playfully: "I think I ought to be jealous." To her surprise Sydney looked up as if the words had been addressed to herself. "You mustn't be fonder, my dear, of your governess," Mrs. Linley went on, "than you are of your mother." She kissed the child, and, rising to go, discovered that Sydney had moved to another part of the room. She was standing at the piano, with a page of music in her hand. The page was upside down—and she had placed herself in a position which concealed her face. Slow as Mrs. Linley was to doubt any person (more especially a person who interested her) she left the room with a vague fear of something wrong, and with a conviction that she would do well to consult her husband.

Hearing the door close, Sydney looked round. She and Kitty were alone again; and Kitty was putting away her books, without showing any pleasure at the prospect of a holiday.

Sydney took the child fondly in her arms. "Would you be very sorry," she asked, "if I was obliged to go away, some day, and leave you?" Kitty turned pale with terror at the dreadful prospect which those words presented. "There! there! I am only joking," Sydney said, shocked at the effect which her attempt to suggest the impending separation had produced. "You shall come with me, darling; we will walk in the park together."

Kitty's face brightened directly. She proposed extending their walk to the paddock and feeding the cows. Sydney readily consented. Any amusement was welcome to her which diverted the child's attention from herself.

They had been nearly an hour in the park, and were returning to the house through a clump of trees, when Sydney's companion, running on before her, cried: "Here's papa!" Her first impulse was to draw back behind a tree in the hope of escaping notice. Linley sent Kitty away to gather a nosegay of daisies, and joined Sydney under the trees.

"I have been looking for you everywhere," he said. "My wife——"

Sydney interrupted him. "Discovered already!" she exclaimed.

tors to rally to the support of Mr. Stratton in the coming campaign, and resumed his seat amidst loud applause.

The chairman was glad Mr. Cox had made these explanations. He himself had heard these statements made and he now trusts that the parties circulating them would cease or take steps to prove their charges. He then introduced Mr. Carnegie, for whom he asked a fair and orderly hearing.

MR. CARNEGIE began his remarks by arguing against the holding of campaign meetings separately. He also alluded to the matter of the time for holding the elections, endeavoring to show that the time was unwisely chosen. Refering to Mr. Stratton, the speaker endeavored to show the former's, income etancy, and certainly made a most ludicrous and puerile attempt. He went back to 1884 to read an extract form the EXAMINER respecting Riel, and then to show the inconsistency read a few verses from the same paper more valuable as a literary curiosity than an expression of opinion, and as a clipping from another paper, committed the editor no more than he would be committed to a belief in Atheism, by publishing a report of a Bob Ingersoll lecture. This childish straining after effect marked the remainder of his hoer's speech. He attacked the school book monopoly going over the history of the affair according to his own political bias. The four readers were leaved over and over and most minute and abstruse calculations were indulged in to show this book had a few page more and cost a few cents less than another, he argued that the new readers were dearer than the old although the price of the old series was $1.53 and that of the new $1.35, and that the aggregate increased cost was $6,900. The cost of production of the new series was much below the actual expense, and the profits of the contractors it was alleged were enormous. The alleged monopoly character of the affair was Mr. Carnegie's strong point. He approved of Hon. Mr. Ross, abition of the two series, and authorizing one set, but there, he claimed, should have been more competition. The insinuation was made that the course of the government on the school book question, was to give advantages to a favorite of the government. Mr. Carnegie also referred to the redistribution bill of Mr. Mowat, which he called a "gerrymander." He dealt with the Yorks, Bruce, Simcoes etc., and while he did not show that there was any considerable failure of equalization of population, he attempted to show that the changes gave undue advantage to the supporters of Mr. Mowat, whereas the general result was shown by the elections to have helped the opposition instead of the Government. Reference was made to the Ontario finances, which were declared to be "going to the dogs." The issue of railroad scrip was criticised and the principle denounced of spreading payment over a length of years.

Hon. G. W. Ross on rising was greeted with cheers, he commenced his address by referring to the large attendance present. He had been speaking at considerable length for several nights, and was in hardly as good fighting trim as was Mr. Carnegie. He had been the object of a good deal of attention in the House from the gentleman who until a few days ago was the representative of this riding in Parliament. Mr. Ross made a few remarks upon Mr. Carnegie's Parliamentary connection, following with a humorous reference to the latter's hour of argument. To these the speaker would endeavor to reply in due season. The Riel question he wished to mention first. Mr. Carnegie endeavored to create the impression that the Ontario Parliament was bound as a government to the action of the Dominion Government in regard to the hanging of Riel. As a government the local legislature expressed no opinion on that matter. In order to show how wise a course this was, he would quote Mr. Carnegie, who in 1883, in an address stating the many wonderful things he was going to do—but which he never did do—had the following: "I am opposed to any government using power vested in them for the time being to prevent the free expression of public opinion upon any subject, and especially upon a subject with which they, as a government, had nothing to do." Yet he voted against the Ontario Government because it carried out his policy. It was a wonderful

EXAMPLE OF CONSISTENCY.

They on the Opposition side of the House endeavored to force them to express an opinion. The government acted on the true policy. If it minded its own business it did well; if it carried on the affairs of the province wisely, that was all it was charged to do. The speaker then gave some of the reasons why the Ontario Government should be supported by the people of this country. The Mowat Government had been in power 14 years, and was entitled to their support firstly, because of the liberal manner with which it had dealt with the municipal institutions of this country. There had been no improvements required in municipal institutions for the best interests of Ontario, which it had not done or was willing to do when petitioned by the people. He claimed that Ontario had the most magnificent municipal system in the world, that gave her democratic institutions and home rule. Now, the government that has done most to perfect that system, to build upon the foundations laid by Robert Baldwin in 1849, was the Mowat Government. He was delighted with this his first visit to Peterborough; he had no expectation of seeing so beautiful and prosperous a city. You built up this town, how?

BY YOUR OWN ENERGY, and there is not a man who is not prepared to praise a citizen if in the management of his own private affairs he shows enterprise and push. The Mowat government went to work very early in their history, and in 14 years they had constructed 2,734 miles of railway, and spent over $7,000,000 in aiding railways throughout all parts of the province; $1,500,000 on colonization roads, for the building of bridges, etc.; and yet had a large surplus. When Mr. Carnegie was in the House, and it was proposed to distribute the surplus, his vote said no, the municipalities shall not get that money. He asked the audience if they believed there were any advantages to be derived from those benefits; if they did, they were bound to sustain that government which had given the most signal example of any government in Canada of the local development and improvement of the country. They had done all this without incurring any debt, and had at this moment a surplus of between six and seven million dollars (cheers), whereas the Quebec government was in debt between eight and nine millions. It settled 34,000 acres of land, and had sent the e thousands of settlers, in Muskoka and Algoma. The Ontario government had a distinct policy in agricultural matters. They had spent $940,000 in the drainage of wild lands, which adds to the wealth of the country: or, nearly a quarter of a million acres of swamp lands had been reclaimed by drainage in Ontario. They, the government, had given $840,000 to agricultural societies, in order to promote emulation among the farmers that they might strive to

ATTAIN THE IMPROVED MEANS

of cultivating the soil. The accounts of the Colonial Exhibition in England passed encomiums upon the people of Canada for their public spirit and progressiveness. They had also carried on the agricultural college for a number of years for the express purpose of distributing a scientific knowledge of farming in the rural districts. All believed that a skilful mode of tilling the soil was the most remunerative. The Ontario Government had spent about two and a quarter millions on this institution. Then they had been most careful in aiding public institutions. When Sandfield Macdonald retired from office there were 1,366 persons in the lunatic asylums; to-day there are 5,508, all cared for at the public expense. When the Mowat Administration came into office they required accommodation for this class of subjects, who had no accommodation in private houses or gaols. Sandfield Macdonald spent $171,000 on these institutions; last year the Mowat Government spent $999,000 for similar purposes. The government had noted upon the proposition that it was their duty to relieve distress of this kind—where nature had hidden from the eyes the blessing of light, or from the ears the sweetness of sound—and in making the expenditure of the large sum mentioned, it will be seen that the people in being relieved of the maintenance of these unfortunate people, were relieved from the burden of municipal taxation which their support would involve. It had been said there was a

and that the finances of the province are going to everlasting ruin, and that there is going to be a grand smash-up of the Local Government. Mr. Carnegie had only given one side of the question. Mr. Ross did not say the Mowat Government was perfect, but it was honest. (Applause.) That was more than his friend was prepared to say of some governments he had supported in days gone by. (Cheers.) The best of men—even to the wise Solomon—made mistakes, but a record of 14 years without a single scandal, without a single misappropriation, is worthy of a moment's thought. The speaker asked, on these and other grounds, for a renewal of confidence.

In 14 years the Mowat Government had spent about $800,000 on charitable institutions, and there are hundreds of homes benefitted by them, and so long as the Mowat Government was in power, that would be their policy. (Cheers.) They had a distinct policy in regard to labor matters. He would not be able to discuss this matter at any length, but remarked that he did not like the attempts of some people to create a war between capital and labor. The workingman, if he is honest, is just as good as the millionaire, and they should be friends. (Cheers.) Acting on the principle that it was the duty of the government to protect those who have not within themselves the resources of protection, the government had legislated for the prevention of railway accidents by having the "frogs" filled in, running boards built on top of cars, and overhead bridges raised, in order to prevent accidents to brakemen. In 1883 the Dominion Parliament passed a bill, taking out of the hands of the Ontario Government all control over their own railways, and thus their protective legislation was rendered useless. Take the Factory Act. That was a and was passed in 1884, but the Local Government was not sure of its jurisdiction in the matter. They asked Sir John Macdonald to refer it to the courts for decision, or pass a short bill confirming it; he declined. It comes into force next Wednesday. Its object was to prevent the detention in factories of boys and girls of tender years, who should be at school; to prevent accidents from the too careless protection from machinery; to prevent the possibility of moral contamination by the too frequent intermingling of the sexes.

The policy of the government was to give to the people of the province as much control over her local affairs as is possible and consistent with the interests of the country as a whole. A bill was introduced respecting income franchise a good many years ago; Mr. Carnegie by his vote helped to give it the six months' hoist. They had extended the franchise until to-day, it embraced almost every person of asound mind who was of age, and manhood suffrage was the next step Then last year they did what Mr. Carnegie thinks a wicked thing—they passed the redistribution bill, which was a necessity; they found that were some small constituencies sending members to parliament with a population of far below the average, while others three times as large only sent one member. Cornwall had 9.000 people, and it was doubled up with Stormont, which brought it up to a little over the average, Mr. Carnegie tried to make it appear that this —and he objected to the term—had been passed with a view to defeating the Conservatives in the coming elections. Mr. Ross, to prove the fallacy of this argument, instanced one or two counties mentioned by Mr. Carnegie. South and north Perth were equalized from a desparity of about 12.000 to within about five thousand difference of population without breaking any county lines. East York formerly had 23.000; West York, 18.000; a difference of 5,000. It was arranged so that one has 15,900 and the other 15,700, or a disparity of only 200. East Elgin had a population of 27,000; West Elgin, 14,000—a difference of 13,000. They were redistributed so that the desparity is now only about 3,000. He also satisfactorily explained the adjustment of the Victorias, by which there was no political advantage given to government supporters. The speaker would believe there was some consistency in Mr. Carnegie if he would condemn the gerrymander act of Sir John while denouncing the Ontario Redistribution Act. Then he wanted to say that they had a

"GERRYMANDER ACT"

SOUND FINANCIAL POLICY.

The Provincial Parliament had given in just 14 years nearly forty millions of money to the people. He hoped Mr. Carnegie would search the records and find out the differences between the policies of the two governments. For instance, they gave seven millions for railways, one and a half millions for colonization roads and $1,732,000 for educational purposes. The people of Ontario had taxed themselves to the extent of fifty-five millions of dollars for educational purposes, which he considered to be a high compliment to their intelligence and appreciation of the school system. They had expended on charities over seven millions; on the administration of justice two millions; on Mechanics' Institute a quarter of a million. There is almost all the money they received gone back to the people, in order to relieve them from paying municipal taxes. This has got $226,000, and had it not been given to this county, it would have had to raise the money itself. The speaker also produced figures showing that the cost of maintenance in the asylums per head, was much less under the Mowat administration than under Sandfield Macdonald. They were prepared to challenge their opponents to prove that of the forty millions received, a single dollar had gone or to an undeserving purpose.

The government had a distinct educational policy. The complaint had been made that the Minister of Education had introduced politics into educational matters. He challenged anyone to say that the educational system of Ontario was made subservient to politics. After pointing out the origin, progress and advantages of the present educational system, Mr. Ross referred to the charge that the department had made too many and frequent changes in text books. He proved to the satisfaction of all that the

to say the least of it. In speaking of the alleged school book monopoly, he said attention should be paid more to the quality of the books than to the price and quantity. It did not cost each child half as much for school books as people imagined. The average expense for one year in Hamilton city schools, was 85½ cents to each child. The cost would be about the same here. That was not a startling sum to pay for educating children. Mr. Carnegie's figures made out a very plausible case, but it should be remembered that the quality of the new books was

VASTLY SUPERIOR TO THE OLD ONES.

He was willing to leave it to any fair minded Conservative that the new first reader at 10c. was worth more than the old one at 5c. He made a comparison between the Mail and Review, and because the former cost a little more, could it be said the Review was the better paper? Mr. Ross's books were 14c cheaper than the old ones. He was prepared to say they were better value if they were 50c dearer. These stories of the immense sales, and enormous profits to the publishers, were easily refuted. Mr. Ross gave a masterly exposition of the whole question, but lack of space prevents a detailed reference as it is in this issue. Suffice it to say that every one of Mr. Carnegie's arguments were shown to be misstatements and not strictly accurate. In speaking of the Separate School question, Mr. Ross clearly expounded the law on the subject. The law plainly provides that the one who pays the taxes is the one who shall determine to what school fund his money shall be applied. As to the placing of Catholics on High School boards, he was sure no Protestant could be afraid that his rights could not be protected by 642 Protestants on the boards of the province, against a total of seventy Catholics. The amendment was a simple act of justice to the minority in this province. The speaker concluded with a brief review of the beneficial results of the Administration by Mr. Mowat, and solicited on behalf of Mr. Stratton the hearty support of all fair and liberal minded electors.

The meeting which was most orderly throughout, was brought to a close about 11 o'clock by cheers for each of the speakers.

EXPLANATORY!

Or, a Few Facts for This Week.

An Explicit Fact which we wish the public to understand, and that is, that we are selling a pure All Wool Grey Flannel at 18c. per yard.

An Excitable Fact that we are selling Heavy Tweed Effects for Dresses at 8c. per yard which astonish every lady that has seen them.

An Eventful Fact to be remembered is our Ulster and Mantle Cloths and the prices which we are selling them at.

A Fact of Integrity and that is we keep faith with the public in every article we advertised.

A Fact to be Remembered and that is we don't sell or propose to sell goods at cost, nor do we sell you the best All Wool Flannels at 18c. per yard, we sell you the goods as we advertise them. It would never do to sell Flannels that cost 30c. per yard at 18c.

BLACK SILK—We have the best Black Gro Grain Silk at $1.00 per yard in Canada, and every lady is welcome to compare it with any silk she wishes at 30 per cent higher.

WHY
Will people pay rent when houses and lots can be purchased on such easy terms as are offered by the undesigned. Come and inspect our work and see for yourselves how we construct our houses. Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. I am offering good buildings, and will build solid brick houses, nine-inch walls, stripped and lathed, two stories, for less money than you can buy frame or veneered buildings. We cordially invite those who anticipate renting or buying to inspect our work and prove for themselves that our houses are not merely built to sell. Every house I've sold gives first-class satisfaction, and I am determined that every house I build shall be a standing testimony to honest building. THE CAMPBELL CASE.

THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH AND LADY CAMPBELL.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—In the action for divorce brought by Lady Campbell against Lord Colin Campbell the plaintiff's counsel closed her side of the case to-day. Lady Miles was cross-examined. She said she was not aware that a cabman hearing a letter from the Duke of Marlborough once entered Lady Campbell's bedroom. A cabman might, witness thought, have handed Lady Campbell a letter indoors instead of through a servant, and might have received from her a reply direct, because under the circumstances in which she was placed Lady Campbell might have suspected her servants, especially her husband's nurse, and feared to intrust them with any correspondence.

At this point certain letters written by witness to the defendant were produced, and she was asked if they were hers. She said they were, and added that when she wrote them she thought she was writing to a man of honor and not to such a person as Lord Colin Campbell had turned out to be (sensation), and that she still thought a woman's letters should be considered sacred. (Applause.) Mrs. Duffy, Lord Campbell's nurse, Lady Miles continued, invented the story that Lady Campbell had been prematurely confined. The invention was made to conceal the real nature of Lady Campbell's affliction. Lord Colin Campbell has told witness he was endeavoring to obtain all the information he possibly could against his wife in order to sue her for divorce, and had subsequently told witness that he had failed to obtain any.

Mr. Russell, plaintiff's counsel, corrected his opening statement by adding to it that Lady Campbell when she married defendant brought him a fortune of $30,000. Mr. Russell then gave notice that the plaintiff's case was closed.

Mr. Robert Bannatyne Finlay, Q.C., opened the case for the defence. He said it afforded inexpressible relief to Lord Colin Campbell to have an opportunity to defend himself in an open court from the gross and cruel imputations which had been put upon him, and from the charge of adultery which had been trumped up. The malady from which the defendant suffered was not venereal, although the result of youthful indiscretion. Lady Campbell's mother had been told the nature of the defendant's ailment before the marriage, but she nevertheless urged on the union, saying her daughter was willing to merely act as a nurse to her husband, and even wrote to the Duke of Argyll to press upon him a fulfilment of the engagement. The marriage was authorized by a physician who said it was desirable. During the Easter season of 1882, the Duke of Marlborough, who had been corresponding with her, was often seen in Lady Campbell's company. They visited Leigh Court at the same time and their bedrooms therein adjoined. Doubtless, Mr. Finlay contended, the Duke of Marlborough and Lady Campbell at this time were criminally intimate, if they had not been before. After this Lady Campbell went to Paris, and on this journey was chaperoned by Lady Miles. They remained in Paris one month, the Duke of Marlborough being there also. When Lady Campbell returned from Paris she sent her maid to Switzerland, evidently, the lawyer said, because the maid knew too much. That maid would be called by the defense and would testify. On the 12th of August Lady Campbell went to the Purflet Hotel and remained there with the Duke of Marlborough until the following Monday. Gen. Butler visited Lady Campbell during her husband's absence and used to remain with her as long as three hours at a time. Once, during one of these interviews, some one called to see Lady Campbell. She came out of the room, her hair disarranged, shouted "Not at home," and returned to Gen. Butler. In the meantime Lord Colin Campbell came home unexpectedly, and while he was still in one of the rooms downstairs, Gen. Butler slipped out on tip-toe without meeting the husband. That same evening Lady Campbell was taken ill. Lord Colin Campbell remained in Leigh Court from August, 1882, to February, 1883, and during this time Lady Campbell went to and from London and committed adultery with Dr. Bird. Lord Colin Campbell knew nothing about his wife's bad conduct, but she had a guilty conscience, and she got Solicitor Lewis to write a letter charging Lord Colin Campbell with causing her illness, and refusing to live with him as his wife. Lord Colin Campbell had never heard of such a charge before, and of course refused to agree that they should not live as man and wife.

A GREAT WAR EXPECTED.

An Early Outbreak the Absorbing Topic in Family Circles in Germany.

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—The Cologne Gazette, in a notable article reflecting the views of the people of the Rheinthal, declares that the absorbing topic in family circles in all the Rhine lots and villages is the probability of an early outbreak of hostilities which will shake the continent of Europe to its foundations. The Germans, who are closely acquainted with the national life of France, know that the French are consumed with a morbid desire to despoil Germany.

The public mind is most troubled with the demand for urgency for the army bills, and instead of awaiting a renewal of the national organization in 1888 the Government insists upon including appropriations for an increase of the army in the next budget, thus causing fears that the European system is pregnant with dangers which are near at hand. The pacific declarations in the speech from the throne have failed to remove these feelings.

FRANCE'S POLICY.

De Freycinet Says She Must Not Abdicate Her Position as a Great Power.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—Premier de Freycinet in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, answering M. Delafosse, declared that the maintenance of peace was the Republic's interest and the Government's study. Nevertheless, the Premier continued, France must not entirely abdicate her position as a great power. She must prevent the dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire and must not admit that any power may take possession of Egypt. [Repeated applause.] M. de Freycinet said the Suez Canal question would soon be settled in a satisfactory manner. Referring to colonial matters he said France must confine herself to expanding her present colonial possessions. [Repeated applause.]

THROUGH THE RAPIDS.

GEORGE HASLETT IMPROVES ON THE NIAGARA BARREL ACT.

NIAGARA FALLS, Nov. 28.—George Haslett and Miss Sadie Allen went through the whirlpool rapids this afternoon all safe. The start was made at 3 o'clock from the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canada side. The barrel was a similar one to that Haslett and Potts ran the rapids with last summer. When the barrel containing its human freight reached the maelstrom of the pool it shot right into the centre of the pool and made two or three turns. Leaving the pool it followed the current out towards the Canadian shore and down to the outlet of the pool, where it got into a large eddy where it sailed and bobbed around for half an hour. Some friends were near at hand and yelled out to them when Haslett opened the small door on the top and Frank Lawson threw a rope from shore, which Haslett secured and the barrel was towed ashore. After coming out of the barrel they had to tramp about a mile and a half, climbing over brush and boulders to where they could get to the top of the precipice, Miss Allen experiencing more trouble on the tramp after she got out of the barrel then she did in shooting the rapids. She is a young lady about 18 years old, a very prepossessing brunette.

HAMILTON ITEMS.

A Young Fisherman Drowned—Convicted of Larceny Done in Toronto.

HAMILTON, Nov. 28.—Yesterday Edward and Charles Taafe, fishermen living on the Beach, went upon the lake to draw their nets. The weather was very stormy and after going about two miles they put about for shore, within about one hundred yards of which the boat overturned, throwing the two men into the water. Charles managed to grasp the boat, but Edward set out to swim ashore and sank when but a short distance from the boat. Charles was rescued by persons who witnessed the accident from the shore and afterwards his brother's body was recovered with the aid of nets. Deceased was a son of John Taafe, fireman at the waterworks.

At the Police Court yesterday Jane Garvin, a young married woman, was accused of stealing a quantity of silver spoons, knives, plush, etc., from the residence of Mrs. Fawcett, of Toronto, with whom she has been recently engaged as a servant. The defendant had been given liberty to go to Georgetown to see her child, and brought the goods to this city. Miss Fawcett gave testimony for the prosecution. The woman was pronounced guilty and sentence was reserved.

DAVITT DENOUNCES O'DONOVAN.

He Has a Great Contempt for Rossa and Despises McDermott.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—Michael Davitt said last night with reference to O'Donovan Rossa's talk, and the plot on his life: "Rossa I have the greatest contempt for. He is not a representative of the Irish people, but only of a lot of drunken scoundrels. I consider him to be nothing less than a driveling idiot who is doing much harm to the cause. I will have an opportunity of referring to his character and conduct in New York before I return to Ireland, and I shall do so, but I don't desire to say anything further about it now. I am not a friend of Rossa or any of his faction."

"What about McDermott?"

"He is one of the most infamous men in existence. He was a spy in the pay of the English Government, and invented plots and outrages to convict innocent men, and I know he has threatened to shoot me, but my life will never be taken by such a thorough paced villain."

WHERE IS CLENDENING?

A Question Which is Giving Montreal Detectives Great Concern.

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—Detectives are searching the city for Arthur Clendening, son of Wm. Clendening, proprietor of the Caledonia Foundry, who yesterday filled in a blank check signed by his father for $500 and cashed it at A. W. Ogilvie's. Mr. Clendening has been in the habit of getting this amount in silver from Messrs. Ogilvie to pay the men with, and they thought nothing about it, and only found out the fraud when Clendening's clerk came down for money and produced a proper check. No depositions have been made in the court, but Mr. Clendening has offered the detectives a reward for finding his son.

The Quarantined Cattle at Levis.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—Reports circulated to the effect that cattle in quarantine at Point Levis, Quebec, are allowed to run together, the well with the sick, and that cattle in which pleuro-pneumonia has not yet developed itself, have, after a detention of ninety days, been sent all over the country to propagate the infection with other cattle, is given an unqualified denial by Dr. McEachren, the Government inspector of stock. McEachren says: "Since the discovery in August last of pleuro-pneumonia in McCrea's and Allan's herds, which brought the disease from Scotland, not one single animal has been allowed to enter within the gates of the quarantine, nor has one animal, or anything that came in contact with the animals, been allowed to leave it, not even the clothing of the men who attend any of the herds. Not only so, but all the cattle within half a mile of the quarantine fences have been taken possession of, and not a hoof of them will ever leave the quarantine district alive, disease or no disease."

Montreal's Church Sensation.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—The case of Portras V. Labeau, which has attained so much notoriety in the courts here lately, and in which Portras was fined for irreverence for not kneeling on both knees in the Church of St. Anne, was again before the Court of Appeal yesterday, when judgment was rendered granting an appeal from the decision of the Court of Review, which ordered a new trial.

The Case of Father Lynch.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—Peter Lynch, brother of Father Lynch, gave bail to-day in the case laid against him in the Police Court. Witnesses will be examined in the case next week to corroborate the statement made by Mr. Lynch in the suit against his brother. The case against the reverend gentleman has completely broken down and many of his friends in Cornwall, Catholic and Protestant, will be glad to hear that there is every likelihood of his winning the suit.

Funeral of Erastus Brooks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The funeral services of the late Erastus Brooks occurred this afternoon at the Church of the Ascension, at West Brighton, Staten Island.

A Very Forcible Utterance.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 27.—In a lecture last night Rev. Dr. Stephenson, representative of the British Methodist conference, expressed his fear that the question of Roman Catholic supremacy in Canada could only be ultimately settled by an appeal to force. This ugly fact was forcing itself upon Protestants with greater certainty daily.

The Savings Bank Investigation.

Messrs. Meaney and Clune of New York made addresses. It is said that on his return Mr. O'Brien will be served with a summons similar to that served upon Mr. Dillon.

SCRIPTURE READINGS IN SCHOOLS.

As considerable capital is sought to be made out of the "Scripture Readings for High and Public Schools," authorised by the Ontario Education Department, the following addressed to the public by Rev. Dr. Dewart editor of the Christian Guardian the connexional organ of the Methodist church, will be read with interest:

As many incorrect and misleading statements have been published and circulated respecting the "Scripture Readings" issued by the Education Department of Ontario, a brief presentation of the main facts in the history of the matter, and of the reasons which justify such selections, will be only an act of justice to the representatives of the Protestant Churches, who approved of this way of providing Scriptural readings in the Public Schools. It has been alleged in various forms that these "Scripture Readings" were the scheme or work of Archbishop Lynch, and that their use is equivalent to a rejection of the Bible, which, it is said, has been dishonored and dethroned by this volume. As one of the Protestant Ministers who approved of the publication of such a volume, and who took part in the preparation and revision of these "Scripture Readings," I feel bound, on behalf of myself and the other ministers concerned, to repudiate the that has been put upon the adoption of this method of supplying the demand of the Churches for more religious instruction in schools. Much of what has been written against the "Scripture Readings" I cannot but regard as an attempt to arouse unwarranted prejudice, and to mislead the public mind as to the aim, character, and tendency of the volume under discussion.

A simple statement of the facts of the case, the circumstances that led to the action taken, and the names and character of the gentlemen who approved of this course and helped to carry it out, ought to convince all candid Protestants that there is no ground whatever for the charge that the Bible has been dishonored to gratify Archbishop Lynch and the Roman Catholics.

THE ANGLICAN AND PRESBYTERIAN SYNODS, and some of the Methodist Conferences, passed resolutions recommending more general and regular reading of the Scriptures in the Public Schools; and these bodies appointed deputations to press this request upon the attention of the Ontario Government. The main point urged by them was that, instead of the reading of the Scriptures in the schools being optional, it should be made obligatory. These deputations met as a united committee and agreed upon the resolution which they should present to the Government. Then, as a united body, they held a conference with the Attorney-General. The joint resolution agreed upon closed with these words:—

"And that this Conference press upon the Government the necessity for a return to the Scriptural and moral instruction contained in the first series of National Readers issued by the Education Department for use in the Public Schools of Ontario, or of some similar religious instruction."

THE TEACHERS' PROVINCIAL ASSOCIATION

some time after this recommended "the reading of selected portions of Scripture as a part of the daily school exercise," and to carry out this idea the Association recommended that the Education Department do make "a suitable selection of Scripture readings for the schools under its charge."

In response to these appeals the Minister of Education arranged to have prepared a book of Scripture lessons to be read in all the Public Schools. Having first submitted a copy of the proposed system of lessons to each, he called together the members of the deputations from the churches, and

SUBMITTED THE PROPOSAL TO THEM.

After full consideration of the whole question, this conference of ministers approved of the plan of a volume of Scripture selections as the best method practicable, and appointed a sub-committee of their members to aid in preparing and revising the proposed book of lessons. This sub-committee carefully performed this duty. The book itself is the best evidence of the manner in which the work was done. It has been justly claimed by the sub-committee "that the volume of selections was intended to be thoroughly representative of every portion of the Scriptures, whether of a moral or doctrinal character." The selections have met with general approval, even the Mail congratulated the Minister of Education on having adopted this series of readings for use in the Common Schools, and warmly commended the work. That was before the idea of representing it as a dishonor to the Bible and a blow at Protestantism was thought out.

I want specially to call attention to the fact that not only the sub-committee of revision, whose names have been often mentioned, approved of preparing these Scripture selections, but representing not only the three churches already named, but also Baptist and Congregational ministers, approved of this course, which the public are now asked by certain parties to believe is the adoption of a Roman Catholic policy that rejects and dishonors the Bible.

Here are the names of the members of the joint committee of representatives to whom the proof sheets of the readings were sent, and who, at their meeting, approved of the preparation and publication of a book of Scripture readings:—

THE METHODIST CHURCH.—Rev. Dr. Ross, Rev. Dr. Sutherland, Rev. Dr. Dewart, Rev. S. J. Hunter, Rev. W. S. Blackstock, Rev. E. Roberts, Rev. J. M. Simpson, Mr. John Macdonald, Mr. R. Walker, Mr. Warring Kennedy, and Mr. Justice Ross.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.—Very Rev. Archdeacon Roddy, M.A.; Rev. Provost Body, M.A.; Rev. John Carry, D.D.; Rev. John Langtry, M.A.; Rev. J. P. Lewis, Rev. I. Middleton, B.A.; Rev. J. W. Beck, Rev. A. Sanson, Hon. G. W. Allan, Mr. N. W. Hoyles, B.A.; Mr. C. R. W. Biggar, M.A.; Mr. O. R. Kirkpatrick, Mr. A. McLean Howard, and J. A. Worrell, B.C.L.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Rev. Dr. Laing, Rev. Dr. Gregg, Rev. Principal Grant, Rev. Principal Caven, Rev. H. M. Parsons, Rev. S. Lyle, Rev. W. T. McMullen, Charles Davidson, Mr. J. L. Blaikie, Mr. James McLellan, Q.C.; Mr. H. Cassels, Dr. Macdonald.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—Rev. H. P. Peavis, Rev. John Barton, B.D.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH.—Rev. Dr. Castle.

All these gentlemen were not present at the meeting of the conference that approved of the proposed book, but nearly all the ministers named were there, and I believe the of the different deputations, so that none of them were left in ignorance of what was proposed, or without an opportunity of objecting.

And yet, in the face of these facts respecting the origin, the approval, and objects of the book, the Protestants of Ontario are asked accommodatingly to believe that these Scripture readings were an anti-Protestant movement, designed to dishonor the Bible and banish it from the Public Schools. This could only be true on the supposition that this conference of Protestant ministers was knowingly faithless and disloyal to the Bible, or too stupid to understand the purport and effect of the course of action of which they approved. It will be impossible to persuade the people of Ontario that they were either the one or the other. The Protestant ministers who approved of the proposed readings are certainly as loyal to the Bible and as jealous of its honor as the

MOST BLATANT OF THEIR PARTISAN ASSAILANTS

For myself and the Christian gentlemen with whom I was associated, I fling back the claptrap appeals and partisan misrepresentations, as mean and slanderous aspersions on the character of men who were honestly and intelligently endeavoring to promote a fuller knowledge of the life-giving truths of the Bible among the young of the country.

I confess I have been surprised at the weakness and unfairness of the appeal made against the Bible selections, and the desperate efforts to make the teachers believe that they were slighted and ill-used in the matter. If the Scriptures are to be read in the schools at all, some selections must be made. Only a brief portion of Scripture can be read at any one time. It will not be denied that some portions of Scripture are better adapted to instruct and edify children and youth than others. Somebody must make the selection. Can it be denied that selections chosen in the way these selections were made, are more likely to be chosen judiciously than if the selection is left to the hurried impulse of the moment?

I am glad to learn from a recent statement of the Minister of Education that, since the issue of the Readings, the Scriptures are than formerly. This must be gratifying to every Protestant who is not warped by some perverting influence. The object sought by the Churches is evidently being accomplished. A great step forward has been achieved.

There has been a disingenuous play on the phrase "The Bible in the School," as if it meant only the Old and New Testament bound in one volume and kept within the walls of the schoolhouse. By "The Bible in the School," I understand the truths of the Bible read and taught in the school as part of the daily exercises.

It would intrude too much upon your space for me to reply to the cavilling objections that have been urged in the columns of the Mail against these Scripture Readings. The mere statement of most of these cavillings reveals their essential weakness and unfairness. But I may be permitted to ask:—Is the more extensive readings of the enlightening truths of Holy Scripture in our Ontario schools something that should rouse the opposition of Protestants, as if it were

A CALAMITY TO BE DEPLORED?

Is the form in which the Scriptures are bound more sacred and important than the spiritual truths which enlighten the mind and purify the heart? Does the Church of England dishonor the Bible when she inserts in her prayer-book select lessons to be read in the public services? Does the Bible Society dishonor the Bible when it publishes parts of the Scripture in separate volumes, for reasons of economy and convenience? Were the different books of Scripture dishonored, or robbed of their authority and spiritual power, in the time before they were all bound together in our modern form, in one volume? Does the selection of certain Scriptural lessons by the International Sunday School Committee, and their publication on Separate fly-leaves, dishonor the Bible? Are the Bible truths given in these "Scripture Readings" any less the Word of God, "quick and powerful," because they are published in this form? I am satisfied to leave every honest man to answer these questions for himself.

In view of the facts and arguments which I have hastily named, and others which it would occupy too much space to state here, I do not hesitate to say that, if the other grounds on which it is alleged that Protestantism is in danger in this province, are as weak, as flimsy, and as futile as what has been urged about the "Scripture Readings" in the Public Schools, they are not likely to secure the confidence of candid and intelligent people.

One Price and Square Dealing to All!

This week, the public will receive the benefit of an extraordinary LOW PURCHASE of SEASONABLE OVERCOATS and SUITS, and any intending purchaser will miss it, if they do not call and examine them. We are determined to be the Poor Man's Friend, and if in fulfilling this mission, we break the back bone of those High Price Clothiers, I am sorry, as I wish them no harm. But having inaugurated this in PETERBOROUGH, I must bow to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. Always keep in mind, that the man who does as he ADVERTISES, and Refunds the Money if Goods are not Satisfactory, is GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN.

LOW PRICE AND ONE PRICE SYSTEM

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Some will have it that the Scott Act is a failure; others protest that it is not. This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of

ALARM CLOCKS.

The Handiest thing in the World Can be seen as well in the Dark as the Light.

EVERYBODY should have One.

R. W. MUNCASTER.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

"There is nothing that need alarm you," he replied. "Catherine is too good and too true herself to suspect others easily. She sees a change in you that she doesn't understand—she asks if I have noticed it—and that is all. But her mother has the cunning of the devil. There is a serious reason for controlling yourself."

He spoke so earnestly that he startled her. "Are you angry with me?" she asked.

"Angry! Does the man live who could be angry with you?"

"It might be better for both of us if you were angry with me. I have tried to control myself; I will try again. Oh, if you only knew what I suffer when Mrs. Linley is kind to me!"

He persisted in trying to rouse her to a sense of the danger that threatened them while the visitors remained in the house. "In a few days, Sydney, there will be no more need for the deceit that is now forced on us. Till that time comes, remember—Mrs. Presty suspects us."

Kitty ran back to them, with her hands full of daisies before they could say more.

"There is your nosegay, papa. No, I don't want you to thank me—I want to know what present you are going to give me." Her father's mind was preoccupied; he looked at her absently. The child's sense of her own importance was wounded; she appealed to her governess. "Would you believe it?" she asked. "Papa has forgotten that next Tuesday is my birthday!"

"Very well, Kitty, I must pay the penalty of forgetting. What present would you like to have?"

"I want a doll's perambulator."

"Ha! In my time we were satisfied with a doll."

They all three looked round. Another person had suddenly joined in the talk. There was no mistaking the person's voice. Mrs. Presty appeared among the trees, taking a walk in the park. Had she heard what Linley and the governess had said to each other while Kitty was gathering daisies?

"Quite a domestic scene!" the sly old lady remarked. "Papa, looking like a saint in a picture, with flowers in his hand; papa's spoilt child always wanting something and always getting it; and papa's governess, so dreadly fresh and pretty that I should certainly fall in love with her if I had the advantage of being a man. You have no doubt remarked, Herbert—think I hear the bell; shall we go to lunch?—you have no doubt, I say, remarked what curiously opposite styles Catherine and Miss Westerfield present—so charming, and yet such complete contrasts. I wonder whether they occasionally envy each other's good looks? Does my daughter ever regret that she is not Miss Westerfield? And do you, my dear, sometimes wish you were Mrs. Linley?"

"While we are about it, let me put a third question," Linley interposed. "Are you ever aware of it yourself, Mrs. Presty, when you are talking nonsense?"

He was angry, and he showed it in that feeble reply. Sydney felt the implied insult offered to her in another way. It roused her to the exercise of self-control as nothing had roused her yet. She ignored Mrs. Presty's irony with a composure worthy of Mrs. Presty herself. "Where is the woman," she said, "who would not wish to be as beautiful as Mrs. Linley—and as good?"

"Thank you, my dear, for a compliment to my daughter—a sincere compliment, no doubt. It comes in very neatly and nicely," Mrs. Presty acknowledged, "after my son-in-law's little outbreak of temper. My poor Herbert, when will you understand that I mean no harm? I am an essentially humorous person—my wonderful spirits are always carrying me away. I do assure you, Miss Westerfield, I don't know what worry is. My troubles—deaths in the family, and that sort of things—seem to slip off me in a most remarkable manner. Poor Mr. Ormond used to attribute it to my excellent appetite. Or, no; I think he said my excellent digestion. My second husband would never hear of such an explanation as that. His high ideal of women shrank from allusion to stomachs. He used to speak so nicely (quoting some poet) of the sunshine of my breast. Vague, perhaps," said Mrs. Presty, modestly looking down at the ample prospect of a personal nature which presented itself below her throat, "but so flattering to one's feelings. There's the luncheon bell again, I declare! I'll run on before and tell them you are coming. Some people might say they wished to be punctual. I am truth itself, and I own I don't like being helped to the underside of the fish. Au revoir! Do you remember, Miss Westerfield, when I asked you to repeat 'au revoir' as a specimen of your French? I didn't think much of your accent. Oh! dear me, I didn't think much of your accent."

Kitty looked after her fluent grandmother with eyes that stared respectfully in ingorant admiration. She pulled her father's coattail, and addressed herself gravely to his private ear. "Oh, papa, what noble words grandmamma has!"

XI.

On the evening of Monday in the new week the last of the visitors had left Mount Morren. Mrs. Linley dropped into a chair (in what Randal called, "the heavenly tranquility of the deserted drawing-room"), and owned that the effort of entertaining her guests had completely worn her out. "It's too absurd at my time of life," she said, with a faint smile, "but I am really and truly so tired that I must go to bed before dark, as if I were a child again."

Mrs. Presty—maliciously observant of the governess, sitting silent and apart in a corner—approached her daughter in a hurry, to all appearances with a special object in view. Linley rose at the same moment to say that object might be. "Will you do me a favor, Catherine?" Mrs. Presty began. "I wish to say a word to you in your own room."

"Oh, mamma, have some mercy on me and put it off till to-morrow!"

Mrs. Presty reluctantly consented to the proposal on one condition. "It is understood," she stipulated, "that I am to see you the first thing in the morning?"

Mrs. Linley was ready to accept that condition or any condition which promised her a night of uninterrupted repose. She crossed the room to her husband and took his arm. "In my state of fatigue, Herbert, I shall never get up our steep stairs unless you help me."

As they ascended the stairs together Linley found that his wife had a reason of her own for leaving the drawing-room.

"I am quite weary enough to go to bed," she explained. "But I wanted to speak to you first. It's about Miss Westerfield. (No, no, we needn't stop on the landing). Do you know, I think I have found out what has distressed our little governess so seriously—I mean to startle you?"

"No."

"I am only astonished," Mrs. Linley resigned, "at my own stupidity in not having discovered it before. We must be kinder than ever to the poor girl now; can't you guess why? My dear, how dull you are! Must I remind you that we have had two single men among our visitors. One of them is old, and doesn't matter. But the other—I mean Sir George—is young, handsome, and eligible. I am so sorry for Sydney Westerfield. It's plain to me that she is hopelessly in love with a man who has run through his fortune, and must marry money if he marries at all. I shall speak to Sydney to-morrow, and I hope and trust I shall succeed in winning her confidence. Thank heaven, here we are at my door at last! I can't say more now; I am ready to drop. Good-night, dear; you look tired, too. It's a nice thing to have friends, I know, but oh what a relief it is sometimes to get rid of them!"

She kissed him and let him go.

Left by himself, to compare his wife's innocent mistake with the terrible enlightenment that awaited her, Linley's courage failed him. He leaned on the quaintly carved rail that protected the outer side of the landing, and looked down at the stone hall far below. If the old woodwork (he thought) would only give way under his weight there would be an escape from the coming catastrophe found in an instant.

A timely remembrance of Sydney recalled him to himself. For her sake he was bound to prevent Mrs. Presty's contemplated interview with his wife on the next morning.

Descending the stairs he met his brother in the corridor on the first floor.

"The very man I wanted to see," Randal said. "Tell me, Herbert, what is the matter with that curious old woman?"

"Do you mean Mrs. Presty?"

"Yes. She has just been telling me that our friend Mrs. MacElwin has taken a fancy to Miss Westerfield, and would be only too glad to do us a service of our pretty governess."

"Did Mrs. Presty say that in Miss Westerfield's presence?"

"No. Soon after you and Catherine left the room Miss Westerfield left it too. I dare say I am wrong, for I haven't had time to think of it; but Mrs. Presty's manner suggested to me that she would be glad to see the poor girl out of the house."

"I am going to speak to her, Randal, on that very subject. Is she still in the drawing-room?"

"Yes."

"Did she say anything more to you?"

"I didn't give her the chance; I don't like Mrs. Presty. You look worn and worried, Herbert. Is there anything wrong?"

"If there is, my dear fellow, you will hear of it to-morrow."

Comfortably established in the drawing-room, Mrs. Presty had just opened her favorite newspaper. Her only companion was Linley's black poodle, resting at her feet. On the opening of the door the dog rose, advanced to caress his master, and looked up in Linley's face. If Mrs. Presty's attention had happened to be turned that way she might have seen in the faithful creature's sudden and silent retreat a warning of her son-in-law's humor at that moment. But she was, on the contrary, much interested in her reading, and she deliberately overlooked Linley's appearance. After waiting a little to attract her attention he quietly took the newspaper out of her hand.

"What does this mean?" Mrs. Presty asked.

"It means, ma'am, that I have something to say to you."

"Apparently something that can't be said with common civility? Be as rude as you please; I am well used to it."

Have You Thought About It?

Pain is one of the sure things of life, and it becomes then a most important question to have at hand the quickest and most efficient remedy. Polson's Nerviline cannot fail to cure cramps, toothache, neuralgia, headache and all pain, internal or external. Nerviline is the most perfect combination ever offered to the public for the relief of pain. It will not cost you much to try it, for you can buy at any drug store for 10 cents a trial bottle, which will convince you of its mighty pain relieving power. 6dw48

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the disease make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. eodw41tf

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 29th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $24. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. While in Peterborough he made many friends by his sterling integrity of character. The sermon was taken from the text, Acts 10-36.

A Small Blaze.

Saturday afternoon's fire occurred in a small shed in rear of the Morgan House, which did not properly belong to the stables of the hotel, but which, being built close against the Morgan House out-buildings, placed the latter in a dangerous position. The fire, though quickly subdued, was a hot one while it lasted. The building was owned by Mr. George Brownlee, and occupied by John Cochrane as a storehouse for several reapers, which were destroyed. The building was uninsured; the machines were insured for $600. The close proximity of the blaze created a stampede among the horses under the Morgan House sheds, but fortunately no accidents resulted. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The fire brigade deserves great credit for the prompt manner in which they turned out.

THE LABOUR QUESTION.

An Able Address by T. Phillips Thompson, of Toronto.

He gives a Capital Address on the Subject to a Fair Audience of Workingmen.

Saturday night about 200 workingmen assembled in the Opera House to listen to a lecture on "Capital and Labor," delivered by T. Phillips Thompson, of Toronto, known to literary fame as "Jimmel Briggs." Mr. Thompson's articles in the Toronto News over that signature have become deservedly popular. The chair was taken by Mr Irwin. On the platform were Messrs. F. W. Miller, F. Ferris, and John O'Brien.

The chairman opened the meeting in a few words, stating that the object of the meeting was to aid the cause of the laboring man. It had been thought desirable to bring one here of better brains and speech than themselves to speak to them on the subject. He then introduced the lecturer, T. Phillips Thompson, of Toronto, to the audience.

Mr. THOMPSON on coming forward was loudly applauded. He opened by remarking that they were present to consider the labor question. A great deal of attention was being paid to the labor question in Canada, the United States and Europe, and was holding a high place in men's minds it never did before. He remembered one definition of the question by Henry George, which gave the whole thing in a nutshell. It was this: Supposing a being from another world should be placed for the first time on this earth; his first impression would be that the world was supported by labor. Then, if taken to an aristocratic quarter of a city and shown the fine mansions of the rich, his first thought would be how much labor and trouble had been taken here by these men to build beautiful homes! Then, if taken to the lower portion of the city, his first idea would be that the poor, lowly people did not labor at all, and must be a slovenly lot. And how surprised he would be when told that these poor and evidently lazy people were the ones who had actually done all the work ascribed to the rich men. There must be when such a state of affairs is allowed to exist. When you say a man is not a workingman, you suppose at once that he has a large share of this world's goods and did not have to work for his living. Something wrong again. Mr. Blue, the head of the Ontario Bureau of Statistics, in the course of his researches, has been obliged to come to the conclusion that more than one-half of the value of the toil of the poor people goes to the rich man. It was very often said of employers that they were benefactors to the people because they employed so many men. That was a wrong idea; the capitalist always gets more than a fair share of profit on the labor of his workingmen. A great competition was going on between the masses that have no other means of support than the labor of their hands, and the rich and influential capitalists. This is what the political social Reformers call the iron law of wages—to sink as low as they can the wages of the workingmen. The steamship and railway service had mobilised the laboring classes. The speaker referred to the strikes by which frequently thousands of men were thrown out of employment. Since the land of America has come into possession of private hands, and emigrants have to go so far west for location, it tends to CRUSH THE LABORING CLASSES.

The tendency on this continent is to assimilate to European habits and European wages. He gave statistics to show what influence machinery had upon the low state of labor. It was estimated that 4,000 men with perfected machinery were doing the work it would take 20,000 to do without this machinery. There were two classes of remedies for this. They must consider what labor could do for itself, and what it could do by the ballot and securing protective legislation. Organization lies at the root of all social progress, and that was the strongest means of protection the laboring classes could have. The temperance movement was a fair sample of what organization could do. It had made a smaller start than the labor movement, but it owed to organization the success it had met. Look at any social, benevolent, or political effort, and it would be seen that their chief object was organization. People speak of trades unions in a constrained voice—capitalist newspapers referred to them as something common and low. The speaker referred to Osgoode Hall, which was the centre of the

GREATEST TRADES UNION IN THE COUNTRY

—the law society. And yet lawyers were sometimes found speaking of trades unions as though they were not entitled to common respect. The stock exchanges, dentists, doctors and others were organised in the same way, and if it was good for them, why not for the workingman? All experience shows that between organised and unorganised labor, the former had the best opportunities. The very worst-paid class of laborers were those unorganized. The condition of female labor, especially in the large cities, was deplorable and pitiable. It was often known that these girls committed suicide in order to preserve their virtue, while others were obliged to submit in order to sustain life. Trades unions had done much to furnish a defence against the encroachments of labor. The Knights of Labor aimed to do something more than to regulate the rates between the employer and employee. Very frequently the employer himself is

and cannot afford to accede to the demands of labor. One of the most important planks of the Knights of Labor was co-operation. It aimed at bringing together consumers and producers, and do away with that middle class who made all the profit on the labor. What they wanted to do was to get the laborer to work for himself and not for the capitalist. Mr. Thompson then read some extracts from an English paper, relative to the benefits and increase of the co-operative principle in the old country. It had been an entire success there. The annual business of the co-operative establishments, owned and conducted by the workingmen, was away up in the millions of English pounds. The speaker knew something of the co-operative business. They had a small bakery in Toronto managed by the workmen, which had 340 patrons. The affair was managed by subscribing $5 to a fund which entitled a person to become a member of the society. After all claims on the business have been met and the interest paid on the capital, a dividend is paid the shareholders. Eight per cent was paid on all the capital invested. Co operation encourages the spirit of

THRIFT AND INDUSTRY.

There was a good deal of money wasted by the workingmen, and if there were co-operative stores conducted and properly managed by the workingmen, how easy it would be for them to drop their money into the fund, and thus lay up a store. It is also a source of education and teaches them business principles. The co-operative business was run on the cash principle, and if there was one system more accountable than another for a lot of misery in this world, it was be credit system. The first and fundamental rule of the co-operative system was—cash. More than that, co-operation inculcates self confidence. The workingmen could trust one of themselves, one whom they had known a long time. But after all it is not distributive co-operation that is going to do much good as productive co-operation. He was glad to see that a beginning, small as it was, was being made, and he would like to see the workingmen whenever practicable buy goods made at these co-operative establishments. A co-operative match factory has been started at Woodstock, but a more general movement was being made in the United States. Instead of

FIGHTING CAPITAL BY STRIKES,

if the money wasted was put into these co-operative establishments everything would be better. Mr. Thompson read some figures showing the loss incurred by the numerous strikes which took place last year. The sums were enormous. Another thing to be accomplished is the shortening of the hours of labor. Eight hours was enough for any man to work. If the time was shortened, it would either result in lessening he production or an immediate increase in the men employed, probably the latter, and then all men would be given employment, thus doing away with the large reserve of laborers who, in the time of strike, always flocked to the scene of the trouble and took place of the strikers, thus throwing thousands of men out of employment. In addition to all these things they could do for themselves, there were many things which the Government could, ought and must do, if the labouring classes are true to themselves. A man should not be required to possess just so much property before he can be raised to the position of mayor, reeve or alderman. The speaker referred to Mayor Howland, the best mayor Toronto ever had, who was nearly ousted from office because it was alleged his property qualifications were not right. He also spoke against the requirement of a deposit of $200 before a man can contest a seat in Parliament. These things were to the sons of toil. The speaker was bitter against dressing and all the flummeries which took place at Ottawa before Parliament could be opened. He did not see why it was necessary that a government or a governor-general should be above the people, should dress any richer or have any more pomp or ceremony than the common people. When this high and mighty idea of government was done away with, the people would have a greater voice in the affairs of the country. The speaker scored a good point against the government. It was said that the people controlled the government, and that reminded him of a story. Once a sea captain and his mate had a dispute as to which way the vessel should be directed. The captain told the mate to go forward and look after his part of the vessel, and he (the capt.) who had charge of the rudder, would manage his own end. The mate did so, and the captain steered to suit himself. Presently the mate returned to him and remarked "my end of the boat is at anchor." The mate had dropped the anchor, and thus outwitted his capt. That corresponded with the state of affairs at parliament. The people might want to go a certain way, but those at the head of affairs would be sure to drop anchor and thus render all their efforts useless. Democracy was the FUTURE FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

VERY PREJUDICIAL

Democracy is the power of the people to rule. To make democracy effective, all monopolie must be struck at. He referred to the land question. The landlordism which caused such oppression in Ireland, would surely occur here when the necessary population has accumulated, unless some system is devised to prevent it. It might be a little previous now to mention it, but the question would surely come up by and by. He referred to the sudden increase of the value of land in Toronto, from this same cause. Near every great centre of population, there were numerous land proprietors who owned valuable building sites, which were assessed at far below their value. If these assessments were properly made, it would make a great addition to the public treasury of the people's money. Our land law should also be amended by striking out the landlord's power to distrain for rent. Then the government should give land only to settlers—not to monopolists, colonization societies or such schemers. And the present railway system was about as defective as it could be, because the governments built railways and then allowed monopolists to run them. These capitalists had been allowed to raise and lower prices at their own will, and make arbitrary discorminations between capital and labor. If anybody was taken into consideration in regard to running the railways, the railway employees should have a voice in their management for their own

PROTECTION AND PROFIT.

Then there was the money question. The usurer and monopolist had not only the power to lend money, but the issuing of the people's currency under their control. If there is any money to be made in the issuing of currency, it should go into the public treasury. The speaker protested against the condition of affairs by which the shareholders who never did the least bit of work, in that connection, drew their seven, eight, or ten per cent. dividends every year, while the poor workingman was compelled to labor continuously and pay a high rate of interest on any money he might require? Whenever effort was made to ameliorate the condition of the workingmen, it was met by the cry, "Oh, that's class legislation." Such was not the case. It was, however, popular legislation they wanted and would have, whereby trades unions and societies should be protected. There should be a minimum rate fixed, below which wages should not be allowed to go; there should be compulsory arbitration between employer and employee, which would result in a great saving of money and trouble. A good system of existed in Pennsylvania among the coal miners, where the rate was regulated according to the price to coal. By-and-by the profits to coal could be reduced to a proper level by these means. Bulwer Lytton, the great English author, said, "No reform is final except the reform of mind." That was the truth. The idea that most people have is that nobody except a man of social standing and prestige was fit to occupy high positions. That idea should be abolished, and the sooner the better. The men who are of intellectual and moral worth are the ones who should be elevated. The great obstacle in the way of this reform was that the working classes could not divest themselves of party-ism and religious and national differences. The capitalists never brought up these questions in conducting business, and labouring men will have to imitate their examples, or they will never be able to do anything in the way of organization. Labor reform should come first. The Knights of Labor know no religion, no party, no sect, no race, no creed, no color. The speaker referred to the question of color in the south, and how the Knights of Labor supported their colored brethren there. They must all lines of demarcation which might tend to keep them apart, and recognise all men as being of one class. He referred to Henry George's gallant fight in New York, which was a good moral victory, though a nominal defeat. He hoped in Canada they would follow his example and rally around a grand party of their own. Mr. Thompson spoke in favor of the policy of separation from all other parties as adopted by Parnell, which had been such a success. He thought the time was

ABHOR AND DENOUNCE

RIPE FOR ACTION.

A good many things encouraged the laboring classes to educate the public and themselves on this great question of the day. Educate, agitate and organize—one would be useless without the other; taken together, they would be resistless.

The speaker sat down amidst applause, and a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Thompson. The chairman closed by making a few remarks corroboratory of Mr. Thompson's statements, and the meeting closed with cheers for the Queen and the speaker.

PRINCE OF BULGARIA.

PRINCE NICHOLAS' CHANCES NOT SO BRIGHT AS THEY WERE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A London despatch to the Tribune says: The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Telegraph sends the following: The statement proceeding from Russian sources that all the powers have accepted the candidacy of Prince Nicholas of Mingrelia, and that consequently the Bulgarian question is on the eve of settlement, does not entirely correspond to the facts of the situation. The Czar's new protege is scarcely less obnoxious to the powers than to the Bulgarians themselves, as Russia has just had an opportunity of ascertaining. The English Government has I believe, just given Russia to understand that the election of a new prince being the affair of the Sobranje, they did not feel called upon to express an opinion on the merits of any candidate before election. Russia may have reasons of her own for surmising that England will not systematically oppose the candidacy of the Prince of Mingrelia.

The Austrian Government has intimated that if the Mingrelian Prince were elected by the Sobranje, they would raise no objection, but that they would leave the Bulgarians to follow their own inclination in the matter, without seeking to influence them one way or the other. Apparently the weak position taken up by Austria on this occasion is due to apprehension of seeing a less acceptable candidate than the Prince of Mingrelia put forward by Russia, such, for instance, as the Prince of Montenegro, or Prince Karageorgevitch.

Another Rebellion Proposed.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 29.—At a meeting here yesterday of fugitive members of the Bulgarian revolutionist party, headed by M. Zankoff, it was decided that a new rebellion should be attempted in Bulgaria. The meeting was held at the Hotel Kiradiasi, and was participated in by M. Schakotkine, the Russian consul at Rustchuk. Among the Zankoffites present were MM. Bradereff, Groeff and other officers who had been dismissed from the Bulgarian service because of their connection with the recent uprising. M. Schakotkine promised that the Russian consul at Bucharest would afford the plotters protection in the event of the failure of their undertaking.

PLEURO-PNEUMONIA AT LEVIS.

The Dominion Veterinary Inspector Says it Has Been Stamped Out.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.—Dr. McEachran, the Dominion Veterinary Inspector, will leave for England the end of this week, and while there he will confer with the veterinary officers of the Privy Council on behalf of the Dominion Government, particularly with regard to quarantine matters. He thinks that pleuro-pneumonia has been completely stamped out at Levis, but says the cattle will be kept there for some months yet. As a precaution, the doctor has recommended to the Government the establishment of a ninety days quarantine south of Milk Rock in Alberta, Oak Lake in Saskatchewan and Emerson in Manitoba, as pleuro-pneumonia has existed for several years in Chicago.

OF INTEREST TO CANADIANS.

The Extradition Treaty Drafted—The Fishery Dispute.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—At the British Foreign Office doubts are entertained whether President Cleveland will be in a position to announce in his coming message a solution of the fisheries dispute, and no progress is being made toward a settlement. Lord Iddesleigh is absorbed in the Eastern question and has completely relegated to Minister West all negotiations with the United States. The attitude of the Dominion Government is not favorable to a settlement.

The extradition treaty has been definitely settled upon and the exact terms of the convention drafted by Minister Phelps and Lord Rosebury. The reports that amendments have been made by Canada are incorrect.

SCOTCH AND WELSH HOME RULERS.

Church Disestablishment, Land and Other Reforms Their Aim.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A committee of Welsh Liberal members of Parliament has been formed, with Mr. Richards as President, which aims practically to obtain Home Rule for Wales. The leading planks of their platform are disestablishment and disendowment of the church, land reforms and free education.

The Scotch Home Rulers will hold a conference and mass demonstration at Edinburgh on Jan. 12. Their platform urges that national legislatures be granted to the respective nationalities of the United Kingdom, each legislature to control all local affairs, with an executive responsible only to the national electors.

THE CAMPBELL CASE.

GOES TO SHOW THAT HIS WIFE IS A VERY BAD WOMAN.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—In the Campbell divorce case to-day Mr. Findlay, for the defence, continued the presentation of Lord Colin Campbell's case. If Lady Campbell had believed, the lawyer argued, that her husband had communicated his malady to her, she would have communicated the fact to him, but this she had never done. The judge interrupting said that that argument related entirely to the cruelty alleged in the petition as one of the grounds for divorce, and he said cruelty had been proven in a former trial in which plaintiff had obtained a decree of separation on that ground alone, he must now refuse to allow the allegation contended and should direct the jury to find that defendant had given to plaintiff some kind of disease.

Mr. Finlay, resuming, said all of the plaintiff's allegations in her petition were false and had been read to intimidate and had since been withdrawn, except one charge, the truth or falsity of which could be known only to Lady Campbell herself. The defense however had evidence that would shed a flood of light upon Lord Colin's proceedings in Paris in regard to that charge. Allowance must be made, counsel contended, for Lord Colin's action in asking the Paris police to arrest his wife and look her up in the lazaretto, because at that time the defendant believed his wife was living there in adultery with the Duke of Marlborough. Four persons, Mr. Finlay went on, were accused of having been criminally intimate with the plaintiff. Lady Campbell had written to the Duke of Marlborough as "Dear George." He had taken her home at 2 o'clock in the morning, gone upstairs with her, and remained with her twenty minutes. On one occasion when he came to tea, the servant that took tea up to Lady Campbell found the drawing-room door locked, and a little later found it unlocked, and saw that Lady Campbell's hair was disarranged, her face flushed, and the furniture out of place. On these occasions, counsel contended, the plaintiff had doubtless misbehaved. Lady Campbell's maid would be called and would prove that on more than one occasion, while the plaintiff was living alone, her couch at Leigh Court was occupied by more than one person. A servant and two independent witnesses would testify that the plaintiff had committed acts of infidelity in Parlee Hotel. Dr. Bird and Lady Campbell at one time were constantly together, and whenever he called the plaintiff used to give orders that she was not to be disturbed during his presence. Once a cabman saw Dr. Bird and Lady Campbell, while returning from a charitable concert in the east end, caressing each other in the cab. On this occasion they were driven to Dr. Bird's house and both went in. The cabman remained outside and Lady Campbell stayed so long that he drove away. It would also be shown that when Dr. Bird visited Lady Campbell professionally he would remain for hours at her bedside in a darkened room. Referring to Chief Shaw of the London Fire Brigade, Mr. Finlay said Lady Campbell met the Chief in an unfurnished drawing room in Cadogan-place in 1881 and remained with him an hour, and during 1882 was with him alone in a dining room under conditions which would convince the jury that the plaintiff and Chief Shaw were doing wrong.

The evidence connecting Lady Colin Campbell with Gen. Butler largely referred to the length of time he remained when he called upon the plaintiff. Two shameless women had concocted a story of Lord Colin's criminal intimacy with his wife's maid, Mary Watson. At this point Mr. Finlay denounced with great excitement and passion what he called the "infamous fraud and perjury and the shameless conduct of Lady Miles and Lady Colin Campbell." He accused Lady Miles of prostituting her prayer-book by inserting therein dates of Lord Colin Campbell's alleged wrong doings for the purpose of accumulating data upon which to found the present suit.

Two physicians were called. Both testified that they had examined Mary Watson and had found her pure. Mary Watson herself was then sworn. She is a tall slim girl. She testified that she was a housemaid for Lord Colin Campbell from 1881 till 1883. She denied all of Lady Miles' testimony concerning the alleged intimacy between witness and Lord Colin. The witness often saw the names of the Duke of Marlborough and Chief Shaw on the envelopes of letters she posted for Lady Colin. When the Duke of Marlborough called he used to ring the servants' bell. Witness once showed the Duke into the dining room when he called because her mistress was with Lord Colin in his room. Witness went up and called Lady Colin out, saying the cook wanted to see her. When Lady Colin came out witness told her it was the Duke and not the cook, and Lady Colin said "Thank you, Mary." [Laughter.] Lady Colin, the witness continued, used to receive Capt. Shaw alone. Dr. Bird, on one occasion, took tea with Lady Colin before going with her to a concert. When the carriage arrived witness went to announce it to Lady Colin, and found that she and Dr. Bird had gone to Lady Colin's bedroom, and Lady Colin came to the door, saying, as she did so, "keep your hand on that door, doctor." When asked by Solicitor Lewis if she had ever seen any improper action on the part of Lady Colin, the witness replied that she never had. Witness admitted having written letters to Lord Colin, but asserted that she had never signed them, "Your affectionate Mary," but simply "Mary." The case was then adjourned.

HAMILTON ITEMS.

Committed for Trial for Theft—The Charge Against Peter Mulholland.

HAMILTON, Nov. 29.—Adam McLeod was committed for trial to-day for stealing a coat containing a sum of money from a Sailfleet farmer named Burkholder.

The adjourned case of Peter Mulholland, charged with stealing $10 from a little girl named Gompfert, was further adjourned at the Police Court to-day. The girl said that the money had been left in her keeping by her father, and had been taken from her by Mulholland. She had told various stories, and was seemingly in great dread of her father, who had beaten and choked her on account of the loss of the money, and the Magistrate hardly knew how much reliance to place on her statements under the influence of fear. Mulholland denied the charge.

An Arkansas Case of Missing.

FORT SMITH, Ark. Nov. 29.—Bud STEIT, Vance Barnes, Bill Brown and Frank Moore, charged with robbing a store in Chickasaw county, were expected to arrive here yesterday, but did not appear. It is rumored on good authority that the four mentioned and three other outlaws were taken from the officers by vigilantes near Barneyville and hanged.

A Horrible Crime.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 27.—A Courier Journal special says: As developments are made the Knox County affair grows in horror. It is undoubtedly true that Mrs. Poe and her two lady guests were raped and, with the five children, were murdered and then burned up in the house. The devils who did it are, as yet, unknown and no arrests have been made.

THE COLONIAL EXHIBITION.

It Will Not be Made Permanent for Three Years.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—The Department of Agriculture has sent a circular letter to each exhibitor at the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, which states in effect that the permanent exhibition building will not be opened in London for three years, and that for the present exhibits will have to be removed. Instead of paying the freight on these goods to Canada, the department orders their removal to the exhibition at Adelaide, South Australia.

Anxious About the Army Bill.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Emperor William, in receiving to-day the President and Vice-Presidents of the Reichstag, referred to the work now before the members as of the first importance to the Empire. He hoped the military bill would be passed willingly. Other parliaments showed themselves disposed to meet demands for army expenditures, and Germany had to consider that she is already outstripped by neighboring states. He concluded by expressing his belief that peace would be maintained.

Drowning Accident at London.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Saturday afternoon Freddie, only son of Thomas Mongall, assistant engineer at the waterworks, while playing on the south abutment of the dam fell into the river. Being missed from the house, a search revealed his body resting on the apron part of the dam only a few feet under water. The accident occurred at 5 o'clock. Mr. Mongall has been in the service of the city for some time, and his many friends deeply sympathize with him in his bereavement.

Gladstone's Programme.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Mr. Gladstone declines every request to speak until Parliament reassembles. He has sent letters to several of his late colleagues stating his program for the coming session. He approves of an immediate challenge to the Government to state its Irish policy in the debate upon the address, although he expects that the Unionists will maintain their adherence to the Government.

LAND GRABBING EXTRAORDINARY.

Mexicans Try to Divert the Course of a River to Change Land Boundaries.

EL PASO, TEX., Nov. 29.—A force of more than 100 Mexicans was found at work Saturday on the estate of Judge Leahy at Concordia, four miles below El Paso, excavating a channel to turn the current of the Rio Grande and throw upon the Mexican side of the river a large tract of land now on the American side. After remonstrating in vain Judge Leahy entered a formal protest to the Jefe Politico across the river, and if this failed he will appeal to Washington. The land which the Mexicans are trying to acquire is the result of slow accretions to the American bank. The treaty of 1884 gives such accretions to the country on which side they form.

St. Andrew's Sermon.

Rev. R. F. Torrance Delivers the Annual Sermon to St. Andrew's Society in St. Paul's Church Sunday Night.

TEXT.—Psalm xliv. 1.—"We have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work thou didst in their days, in times of old."

The Hebrew Scripture gives special prominence to the divine element in the history of the Jews, in the light of the working out of the divine plan, and they describe the most important events to the direct agency of the Most High. This was strikingly set forth in the verses with which the Psalm began. In all history there is a divine as well as a human element, and perhaps there is no respect in which the hand of God is more perceptible in history, than in the great men whom, from time to time, he has raised up to perform difficult tasks. It was the preacher's intention to lay before his congregation that night some incidents in Scottish history in which the hand of God could be clearly traced. Christianity was introduced into Scotland at an early period, but did not make much progress until the beginning of the third century, when the reigning monarch embraced the Christian faith. Early in the ninth century a number of men were raised up, eminent for their

DEVOTION TO GOD'S CAUSE,

but the truth had still to contend with the opposing influences of the Roman Catholic religion. In the beginning of the fifteenth century two Scotchmen suffered martyrs' deaths—Patrick Hamilton, who died at the early age of twenty-three, and George Wishart. These men helped to prepare the way for the approaching Reformation—they were the heralds of the approaching dawn. John Knox, the great Scotch Reformer, was born in 1505 at Haddington, where he obtained the rudiments of education, completing his studies at the University of Glasgow. There is some uncertainty connected with his life immediately after the completion of his studies, but it is probable he took orders in the Church of Rome as a secular priest. It was the martyrdom of Wishart which finally led him to profess his adherance to the Protestant faith. Finally Knox and others were captured at the castle of St. Andrew's and taken to Rome, where he worked a number of years as a galley slave until released, when he returned to London. He preached a number of years in England and Germany, and afterwards retired to Geneva. At the request of some of the nobility Knox and began preaching, and was soon proclaimed an outlaw and rebel. Regardless of all danger he went about preaching the gospel, and in the time of Queen Mary an attempt was made to find him guilty of treason, but it failed. On a second occasion Knox was summoned before the Privy Council, and on being told that he must desist from preaching, he replied that he would obey so far as the word of God would permit him. In 1570 he had a stroke of apoplexy, brought on by the immense strain to which he had been subjected, and he died on Nov. 24th, 1572, and was buried in St. Giles' churchyard. Knox was undoubtedly one of the greatest Scotchmen. He was blamed unjustly for his harshness and intolerance, especially to Mary, Queen of Scots. Knox was endowed with the courage of a hero, and did his duty conscientiously and without fear of consequences. Well may Scotland be thankful to God for the gift of John Knox, of all the

RETURNED TO SCOTLAND

LIGHTS OF THE REFORMATION,

no one had a greater work to do or did that work more effectually than Knox. The Reformation had not been long established before King James endeavoured to force episcopacy upon the people. As Knox was employed in the interests of Reformation, so Melville was the instrument employed to resist the encroachments of Episcopacy. Andrew Melville was born at Baldovy, near Montrose, in 1545. Left an orphan when two years of age, his elder brother undertook to bring him up, and gave special attention to his education. On completing his studies at St. Andrew's University, he spent several years on the continent. Returning to Scotland he was first appointed Principal of Glasgow University, and afterwards of St. Andrew's. From this time until the end of his life, he continued to resist the attacks which were being made upon the LIBERTIES OF THE SCOTCH CHURCH.

After being imprisoned in London, he went to Sedan, where he died in 1622. Other names might be mentioned, such as Welsh, Henderson, Rutherford, Guthrie, Blair and Livingston—men who have contributed towards elevating Scotland to the high position we now occupies. The preacher described the progress of education in the land as propegated by the Reformers. The heroism of the Scottish people in resisting the efforts of the English monarchs could not be too greatly admired. He also referred to the firm resistance of the Covenanters to the encroachments of King Charles, and the persecutions to which they were subjected. He closed by stating that his object in preaching the sermon was not merely to glorify Scotland, but to show the practical influences which the blessings enjoyed by Scotland ought to have upon the congregation before him. The speaker concluded by making an earnest entreaty to flee from the wrath to come—"Escape for thy life, tarry not lest ye be consumed." The way is open, safe and sure. That this might be a night of decision with many souls was the preacher's heartfelt prayer.

A large collection was taken up for the fund of St. Andrew's Society. The hymns and anthem by the choir were most appropriate and solemnly rendered.

The Nicholl's Hospital.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

If the Protestant ratepayers are going to do anything towards freeing themselves from the burden of supporting the Nicholl's Hospital they have got to start it now. They only object to establishing this pauper hospital at the town elections now near at hand. Whatever steps are taken to get rid of this hospital must be through the Town Council, and therefore they must take care to elect only such men as will give a positive and distinct pledge to refuse to vote any more money for its support and to take the necessary proceedings to return these premises again to Mrs. Nicholl's. This work is only in its infancy. As years go on, if this hospital is kept up, the taxes of the ratepayers will have to be largely increased, until the burden will become so great as to be altogether unbearable. If the demands upon the people are so great for the first year, what will they be for each succeeding year? The idea of a small town like Peterborough pretending to keep a costly institution of this kind is simply preposterous and ruinous. Even the Toronto hospital, with all its means and with the support of the inhabitants of a great city, has to have an annual grant from Parliament in order to keep it up, when Peterborough, with a Protestant population of not much over five thousand all told, is expected to keep up and support a similar institution out of their own county means, and entirely unaided except by the small endowment of Mrs. Nicholls, the proceeds of which will hardly pay the salary of the matron, saying nothing of the high salaries of some eight or nine servants besides. According to the way the hospital is at present managed, the cost of running it must exceed three thousand dollars a year. Are the Protestant ratepayers prepared to throw away all this money simply to have it to say that Peterborough has a hospital of its own, and can afford to pay three thousand dollars, or more, a year to support the very few patients which the town will send there, who could be just as well treated and cared for at home, as has hitherto been done; and are the poor, over-burdened taxpayers, wishing wishing to rob themselves and their families of their small earnings to edable the favorites of one or two of the trustees to be handsomely provided for their at their expense. And if report is true there are at this present time, and have been, and no doubt will be, a retired gentleman and lady and a family of three children living in ease and comfort in this hospital at the expense of the Protestant taxpayers, many of whom have to rise early and work all day, year in and year out, to earn means of support for themselves and their families, yet who must give of their hard earned money the means of providing a costly home for broken down persons, whom they brought here from a distance and who never contributed one dollar, and never will, towards the taxes of this town. I can tell the ratepayers that if they could know what they ought to know respecting the management of this hospital, they would urge with me that something must be done, and done at once, to put an end to this evil. And the only way of doing this is, as I said before, through the council, and this again can only be accomplished by pledging your councillors to do it. I am informed that there are some eight or nine trustees of this hospital, whose business it certainly is to look closely after its affairs and management; yet that they do nothing and allow their chairman to exercise full control and do as he likes throughout its whole business and management, and that these trustees have never been called together since last April, and that they really know nothing of what is daily going on, leaving everthing to the chairman, who, of course, does as he likes. Now, I ask the Protestant taxpayers of Peterborough if they are willing these things shall go on, and if they are willing to take their money from their own wives and children for the purpose of providing a resting place for broken-down paupers, and to support them in ease and comfort at their expense. A short time will tell.

High Handed Intolerance.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I wish to relate a piece of intolerance which I saw Sunday on my way to church. The Salvation Army was marching out as usual and were in the middle of the street, when a pious old gentleman came along in his carriage, and, to show his Christian kindness, he tried his best to drive into the ranks of the army, and would have injured one of the women soldiers had not one of the men put out his hand and stayed his horse's progress. The old gentleman then drove part of the way along the procession and then broke into their ranks and drove on to church, where, no doubt, he prayed fervently and sincerely, asking God to bless him and forgive all his enemies. The Army took no notice of his violent, unchristian conduct, except to say, as he drove away, bless the Lord, Glory, Hallelujah. If this had happened in a heathen country, I should not have wondered much, but I was surprised to see such unchristian behaviour in the quiet town of Peterborough.

GOUGH'S LADDER TO FAME.

One Price and Square Dealing to All!

This week, the public will receive the benefit of an extraordinary LOW PURCHASE of SEASONABLE OVERCOATS and SUITS, and any intending purchaser will miss it, if they do not call and examine them. We are determined to be the Poor Man's Friend, and if in fulfilling this mission, we break the back bone of those High Price Clothiers, I am sorry, as I wish them no harm. But having inaugurated this in PETERBOROUGH, I must bow to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. Always keep in mind, that the man who does as he ADVERTISES, and Refunds the Money if Goods are not Satisfactory, is GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN.

LOW PRICE AND ONE PRICE SYSTEM

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Some will have it that the Scott Act is a failure; others protest that it is not. This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of

R. W. MUNCASTER.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

"Since you have lived at Mount Morven," he proceeded, "I think you have found me, on the whole, an easy man to get on with. At the same time, when I do make up my mind to be master in my own house I am master."

Mrs. Presty crossed her hands placidly on her lap, and asked: "Master of what?"

"Master of your suspicions of Miss Westerfield. You are free, of course, to think of her and of me as you please. What I forbid is the expression of your thoughts—either by way of hints to my brother or officious communications with my wife. Don't suppose that I am afraid of the truth. Mrs. Linley shall know more than you think for, and shall know it to-morrow; not from you, but from Me."

Mrs. Presty shook her head compassionately. "My good sir, surely you know me too well to think that I am to be disposed of in that easy way? Must I remind you that your wife's mother has 'the cunning of the devil?'"

Linley recognised his own words. "So you were listening among the trees?" he said.

"Yes, I was listening; and I have only to regret that I didn't hear more. Let us return to our subject. I don't trust my daughter's interests—my much-injured daughter's interests—in your hands. They are not clean hands, Mr. Linley. I have a duty to do, and I shall do it to-morrow."

"No, Mrs. Presty, you won't do it to-morrow."

"Who will prevent me?"

"I shall prevent you."

"In what way, if you please?"

"I don't think it necessary for answer that question. My servants will have their instructions; and I shall see myself that my orders are obeyed."

"Thank you; I begin to understand; I am to be turned out of the house. Very well. We shall see what my daughter says to that."

"You know as well as I do, Mrs. Presty, that if your daughter is forced to choose between us she will decide for her husband. You have the night before you for consideration. I have no more to say."

Among Mrs. Presty's merits it is only just to reckon a capacity for making up her mind rapidly under stress of circumstances. Before Linley had opened the door, on his way out, he was called back.

"I am shocked to trouble you again," Mrs. Presty said, "but I don't propose to interfere with my night's rest by thinking about you. My position is perfectly clear to me without wasting time in consideration. When a man so completely forgets what is due to the weaker sex as to threaten a woman, the woman has no alternative but to submit. You are aware that I had arranged to see my daughter to-morrow morning. I yield to brute force, sir. Tell your wife that I shall not keep my appointment. Are you satisfied?"

"Quite satisfied," Linley said, and left the room.

His mother-in-law looked after him with a smile of supreme contempt.

"You fool!"

Only two words, and yet there seemed to be some hidden meaning in them which gently tickled Mrs. Presty in the region assigned by phrenologists to the sense of self-esteem.

XII.

Waiting for Sydney to come into the bedroom as usual and wish her good-night Kitty was astonished by the appearance of her grandmother, entering on tiptoe from the corridor, with a small paper parcel in her hand.

"Whisper!" said Mrs. Presty, pointing to the open door of communication with Mrs. Linley's room. "This is your birthday present. You mustn't look at it till you wake to-morrow morning." She pushed the parcel under the pillow, and, instead of saying good-night, took a chair and sat down.

"May I show my present," Kitty asked, "when I go to mamma in the morning?"

The present hidden under the paper wrapper was a sixpenny picture-book. Kitty's grandmother disapproved of spending money lavishly on birthday gifts to children. "Show it, of course, and take the greatest care of it," Mrs. Presty answered, gravely. "But tell me one thing, my dear, wouldn't you like to see all your presents early in the morning, like mine?"

Still smarting under the recollection of her interview with her son-in-law, Mrs. Presty had certain ends to gain in putting this idea into the child's head. It was her special object to raise domestic obstacles to a private interview between the husband and wife during the earlier hours of the day. If the gifts usually presented after the nursery dinner were produced on this occasion after breakfast there would be a period of delay before any confidential conversation could take place between Mr. and Mrs. Linley. In this interval Mrs. Presty saw her opportunity of setting Linley's authority at defiance by rousing the first jealous suspicion in the mind of his wife.

Innocent little Kitty became her grandmother's accomplice in the spoil. "I shall ask mamma to let me have my presents at breakfast time," she announced.

"And kind mamma will say yes," Mrs. Presty chimed in. "We will breakfast early, my precious child. Good-night."

Kitty was half asleep when her governess entered the room afterward, much later than usual. "I thought you had forgotten me," she said, yawning and stretching out her plump little arms.

Sydney's heart ached when she thought of the separation that was to come with the next day. Her despair forced its way to expression in words. "I wish I could forget you," she answered, in reckless wretchedness.

The child was still too drowsy to hear plainly. "What did you say?" she asked. Sydney gently lifted her in the bed and kissed her again and again. Kitty's sleepy eyes opened in surprise. "How cold your hands are!" she said; "and how often you kiss me. I am going to make a joke, Syd. Which is it you are going to say to me—good-night or good-by?"

Sydney laid her down again on the pillow, gave her a last kiss, and ran out of the room.

In the corridor she heard Linley's voice on the lower floor. He was asking one of the servants if Miss Westerfield was in the house or in the garden. Her first impulse was to advance to the stairs and to answer his question. In a moment more the remembrance of Mrs. Linley checked her. She went back to her bedchamber.

The presents that she had received since her arrival at Mount Morven were all laid out so that they could be easily seen by any person entering the room after she had left [illegible] the table [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

They Got the Gloves.

A large number of ladies have already availed themselves of the inducement to purchase $5 worth of goods, in the shape of a handsome pair of first class gloves, given by Mr. M. Sullivan, at "No. 3." A large stock of the very best and most stylish dress goods and trimmings, and all goods usually found in a first-class dry goods store, was placed before them for selection. As you go down the west side of George street, keep a sharp look-out for the "new wrinkle" in window dressing, and you can't miss the place.

Keeps on Growing.

The Peterborough EXAMINER, says the Ottawa Free Press, gives practical evidence of its progressive popularity by coming out in an enlarged form. In the news department the EXAMINER is rapidly working its way to the front rank among the leading daily journals of Ontario, and besides being carefully and intelligently edited, is a model of typographical neatness. The EXAMINER'S growth has been a healthy one. Its latest forward step in the highway of prosperity is the third it has taken in that direction within a single year. The EXAMINER is edited by Mr. Stratton, the able local candidate in the Liberal interest.

Turn to the Right.

Few people seem to be aware that on the foot pavements, as for vehicles on our streets, the rule for persons meeting each other is for both to steer to the right. There is a by-law regulating this matter, and anybody may step and insist on his opponent going to the right.

Shanty News.

A correspondent of the Minden Echo from Mr. John Dwyer's shanty, Anson, gives the following: On Saturday of last week Mr. George Long, of Peterborough, skidded 431 logs in eight hours. This is considered the biggest day's skidding ever done in this county, and if it can be beat the boys would like to hear from the champion

The 57th Battalion.

At a meeting of the officers of the 57th Battalion last night, it was decided to drill next Monday evening and the Monday night following, and have church parade, probably to St. Paul's Church, two weeks from next Sunday, which will be the last parade for drill or other purposes until after the holidays.

The Scottish Concert.

St. Andrew's Society Hold Their Annual Celebration—A Large Audience and a Good Entertainment.

Last night's concert, under the auspices of St. Andrew's Society, drew the largest house of any similar entertainment in the Opera house this season. The hall was comfortably filled, and every number on the programme seemed to give satisfaction, judging from the amount of applause it elicited. The opening overture by the orchestra composed of Messrs. MacDuff, Parker, Butcher and Walke, was followed by Mr. Hutchins in "On the Banks of Allen Water." Mr. Hutchins, though indisposed from the effects of a cold, fully sustained his reputation as a tenor singer of high merit. He was vigorously encored each time he sang—a true criterion of his popularity. Mr. D. B. MacDuff on his violin charmed the audience as usual, winning a fair share of the applause. But the chef d'œuvre of the evening was the singing of Mrs. McCulloch (Miss Maggie Barr) the celebrated Scotch vocalist, of Hamilton. She was rapturously applauded and repeatedly recalled. Dr. Massie, of Keene, contributed a humorous reading, entitled "Amateur Photography," which he recited in the Scotch dialect, to the great amusement of the audience. The worthy Dr. is a thorough master of the Scotch tongue. Only one member of the Sinclair family, a boy of 12, was present, the little girl being detained at home on account of illness. However, the lad went through his evolutions with the precision, agility and endurance of a true-born Highlander, and his lively movements warmed the hearts of all the Scotchmen in the audience. A series of reels and strathspeys, followed by the National Anthem by the orchestra, terminated the programme.

The Festive Board.

Captain Edwards Entertains No. 1 Company of the 57th Battalion at Supper—A Jolly Time.

Last evening after drill a meeting of No. 1 Company was held in their armoury, when it was decided to establish a company fund for the purpose of purchasing anything that might be required by the company as a body; Sergeant Dixon was appointed Secretary-Treasurer. Then, at the invitation of their captain, the company, to the number of about 30, adjourned to the residence of Mr. Edwards, where a sumptuous repast had been prepared. At the supper a number of toasts were proposed as follows:

"Company One," proposed by Captain Edwards; responded to by Corporal Schofield.

"Our Captain," by Sergeant A. N. Brown; answered by Captain Edwards.

"The Host and Hostess," proposed by Sergeant Dixon; responded to by mine host himself.

"The Queen," by Sergeant Dixon; replied to by Corporal Dayman.

"Richard Cook, (a former member of No. 1 Company) a veteran of Batoche," proposed by Corporal Daymon; feelingly replied to by Mr. Cook.

After the toasts, vocal solos were rendered by Privates Walton, Matthews, Barlow, Sherin, and Corkery, and by Richard Cooke. No. 1 Co. possesses some excellent musical talent. A couple of harmonica solos by Bugler Norton, an exhibition of ventriloquism by Sergt. Dixon, and a several choruses by the company followed. Capt. Edwards then read some extracts from a military blue book published in Ottawa, showing the high position No. 1 Company of the 57th Battalion had taken in recent inspections and reviews. Three rousing cheers for Capt. Edwards preceded the breaking up of the assembly, and the Company sang "He's a jolly good fellow," with all their hearts before dispersing. The men are highly pleased with the kindness and forethought of their Captain, and are unanimous in voting him "one of the boys" of the right sort.

A "Talk" About Stars.

Mr. Long's Educational Lectures.

One of the finest lectures given here was delivered in the Young Men's Christian Association hall, on Monday evening, by Mr. J. H. Long, M.A., LL.B., acting Principal of the Collegiate Institute. Quoting Longfellow's description of the passing away of "evening in the peaceable village of Grand Pre":

Silently, one by one, in the infinite meadows of heaven
Blossomed the lovely stars, the forget-me-nots of the angels,"

the analogies between the flowers and the stars was referred to. Following this was a sketch of the rise and progress of the sciences of astronomy, beginning with the Chaldeans and other Oriental nations 2,200 years before Christ. The natural result of this contemplation of the heavenly bodies by peoples who had not a direct revelation of God, was the worship of the sun, moon and stars. The various forms of fire and sun-worship in all parts of the world was referred to, and Dr. Daniel Wilson's "Prehistoric Man" quoted at length, regarding these forms of idolatry among the ancient Aztecs and Peruvians. The consideration of this fire-worship leads naturally to the question: What is the nature of the sun and stars, and whence comes their supply of light and heat? The part played by the spectroscope in determining the constituent elements of these bodies was described, and the various theories as to whence came the heat were referred to, the "contractile theory" being the one now generally accepted. This theory is that the gravitation of the sun's mass towards its centre, and the consequent condensation produces heat. An amusing account of the arguments for and against the habitability of the stars and the moon was then given. Following this the lecturer described, in a most interesting way, comets and meteors, giving many details as to their composition, extent, number, etc., showing the very important part that the sun, moon and stars have played in the literature of the world; the most beautiful quotations in the Bible, Shakespeare and Milton were given. Beautiful as are these passages, how far short they fall of rightly describing the grandeur, the immensity of the universe. How great is this immensity could be partially gathered from the fact that Herschel once perceived 120,000 stars crossing the field of his telescope—only a quarter of a degree—in 15 minutes. Even with the mammoth Lick telescope there will be myriads of stars just dimly visible, like far off lights at sea. There is no limit, apparently, to the number of the stellar worlds. After dwelling on the limitlessness of space, Mr. Long concluded his admirable lecture with the following peroration. Can anything give us a grander idea of the absolute endlessness of the Universe? I trow not, except it be the thought that our solar system stretches across the heavens for a distance of 5700 millions of miles; that our system is but one out of millions of systems; and that the planets of our system, including our earth would be entirely invisible to us were we on the nearest fixed star! Could we but behold our system, in all its parts, from a vast distance what a conception the view would give us of the infinite grandeur of the universe. Stretching across the great centre, the sun, we should see the planets from little Mercury to mighty Jupiter, Saturn with his rings, the earth and others with their moons, Mars, blood-red, and Venus, pale as the evening star. Each in its orbit would they pass before us, moving noiselessly. And could we see further, we should behold another system, with its central sun and circling planets, and then another, and another, and another. And could we discern clearly, we should know that all these myriad systems moved in rythmic cadence round the central point of the universe; all "forever singing as they shine, the hand that made us is divine," and darting hither and thither like fireflies; shooting stars would blaze for an instant and then disappear—and comets would trail their misty light across the skies; and athwart all would be flung the milky-way, like the radiance of an angel-wing. At last, our eyes wearied with the sight, we should ask, "Is there no end?" and far off, "like bells at evening stealing," would come the answer, "As there is no beginning, so there is no end to the Universe of God."

The lecture while being very entertaining was also very instructive. It showed Mr. Long's wide range of knowledge and his happy method of imparting information, which made the acquisition of information a pleasure rather than a task. It is pretty certain that Mr. Long will be asked to repeat the lecture.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Long, and the audience was dismissed with prayer by the secretary.

A New Armoury.

The 57th Battalion to Have a New Armoury—A Move in the Right Direction.

When General Middleton and Lieut.-Col. Villiers were in town they inspected the armouries in connection with the drill shed, and at once realised the necessity of a new building. Accordingly the General informed the officers of the battalion that he would recommend the erection of such to the Government and the new armoury is looked upon as a certainty, the General's word generally being law in military matters. A plan has been prepared by Mr. Thos. Hay, which meets with the approval of all the officers, and will probably be accepted by the Government. The plan provides for a large two-storey brick building, with a hall running down the centre, on each side of which range the armories, eight in number—one for each company, one for the cavalry troop, and one for the Quartermaster-Sergeant. Upstairs will probably be devoted to officers' apartments and caretaker's rooms. The site of the new building will, in all probability, be on the Central Park, just north of the present drill shed. The erection of the armoury is generally looked upon as a foregone conclusion.

Who is St. Andrew?

The question is often put, how, when and wherefore did St. Andrew become the patron saint of Scotland? Such a question, it is feared, will never be satisfactorily answered. Tradition, however, has it that as early as the 9th century St. Regulus took refuge in a place called Muoros, bringing with him some of the bones of St. Andrew, which being enshrined there continued to be the objects of pious pilgrimages for centuries thereafter. Henceforth the place was designated St. Andrew's, now a very ancient historic city in Fifeshire, having the oldest university in Scotland. It is more than probable then that the missionary landing on the 30th November would constitute if not consecrate this as St. Andrew's day, and as the place would naturally if not necessarily become the centre of missionary operations, St. Andrew would not only become identified with the day and the place, but as the work spread and veneration for the saint increased, it is not difficult to conceive how, why and wherefore St. Andrew became the accepted and acknowledged patron saint of Scotland. But farther, the question is still asked, why and wherefore is the day yet kept and commemorated? To such a question a threefold answer may be given, and it is this, that "the Scot abroad" in this and other lands may thereby the better, by fostering the social, the patriotic and the charitable, proudly say and show that Scotchmen whether near or far

—"the world owre
Shall brithers be for a'that"

In order to this associations are formed, and these, as others, have their anniversaries, and on these, by concert or conversazione, by ball or banquet, the social feelings have free and full play, giving to them intensified force and fervour.

COERCION IN IRELAND

GEN. BULLER APPOINTED UNDER SECRETARY.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Dublin Express (Conservative) announces the appointment of Gen. Buller as Under Secretary for Ireland with ill-concealed disgust, declaring it to be startling.

A Special Commission telegraphs from Dublin this morning: Gen. Buller's appointment is taken to mean, first, a severe pressure on all landlords, to compel them to make a temporary reduction of rents; secondly, the employment of horse, foot and dragoons without stint and without mercy to evict tenants who refuse to pay after their landlords have made adequate reductions. The temper of the people has not been improved by the prosecution of Dillon and the proclamation of Land League meetings. At Cork a mob vigorously cheered the moonlighters yesterday as they were brought from Kerry to await the Assizes at Cork. The reason is obvious. Moonlighting is the tenants' third line of defence. The first is the pressure of the Government on unreasonable landlords, the second is the agitation of the League. If the Government suppresses the League the peasant falls back on the old familiar last line.

Mr. Morley's Opinion.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Mr. Morley, speaking at Hawick to-day, said order would not exist in Ireland until the Government dealt with the land problem, and the Government could not deal with that problem without a central body, acting between the peasant and the state, which was impossible without Home Rule.

Finerty's Views.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—John F. Finerty today said: "Affairs in Ireland are turning out as everybody expected. It is the old, old story. There is no earthly use in arguing with the Tories. Dillon's advice is best, to fight the British inch by inch. If the leaders of the Irish must be imprisoned for this, all right. It will be more expensive to keep them in jail than out. The result will be the overthrow of the Tory party and the return of Mr. Gladstone to power if he lives. I don't believe in Home Rule without fighting for it.'

DILLON AT THE QUEEN'S BENCH.

An Adjournment Granted at Defendant's Request.

DUBLIN, Nov. 30.—The case of the Government against John Dillon came up for hearing to-day before the Court of Queen's Bench. Mr. Dillon appeared, accompanied by Lord Mayor Sullivan and Messrs. Healy and Sexton. Great crowds surrounded the building and the Court Room and corridors were packed. Mr. Dillon was greeted with tremendous cheering by the people when he arrived, and his passage into the court was amid enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Healy, on behalf of Mr. Dillon, applied for an adjournment of the hearing. He said he had only been instructed as to the nature of the Crown's complaint last night, and as the Crown's affidavits were exceedingly voluminous the defence would require time to properly study them.

The counsel for the Government made no opposition to Mr. Healy's request, and the hearing was adjourned until December 11.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Speaking on the Earl of Clanricade's estate yesterday, John Dillon made an even more defiant speech than before. He ridiculed the fifty manuscript pages of summonses which the Government had caused to be placed in his hands. After exhorting the tenants to persevere, and telling them they had big fish to deal with, he said if they beat him there was an estate in Ireland but would only be too glad to follow the same path. He said in conclusion: "Now I shall bring up to the High Court of Justice in Ireland, to the Government, this message, whatever they may do to me, I do not think they are going to do very much. It will be a long day and a tough struggle before they can get a penny rent from Clanricade's estate again."

Destroyed by an Earthquake.

COLUMBIA, S.C., Nov. 30.—The new dam which has just been finished at the Langley cotton mills, on the Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta Railroad, gave way yesterday afternoon and is almost a complete wreck. The water rushed through in a flood from the pond, sweep away half a mile of the track of the Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta Railway and badly damaged the tracks of the South Carolina Railway. All the new and expensive work recently completed on the former was completely ruined. The accident is ascribed to a violent shock of earthquake which is reported to have been felt in that locality Sunday night. It is thought the shock weakened the foundations. The water is inundating the surrounding country.

The Murderer of Preller Reprieved.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.—An extension of time from Jan. 1 to Feb. 1 has been granted the attorneys for Brooks, alias Maxwell, the murderer of Preller, and Chyo Chiayck and Chib Gotsel, the Chinese murderers, in which to prepare their transcript of the case necessary for their appeal to the Supreme Court. The delay has been occasioned by the sickness of the stenographer and the amount of testimony taken.

A CHICAGO SENSATION

A DAUGHTER OF FARWELL, THE MILLIONAIRE, WANTS A DIVORCE.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Social circles are agitated over the suit for divorce brought against William H. Ferry, a well-known citizen, by his wife, a daughter of John V. Farwell.

Mr. Ferry married the millionaire's daughter Abbie ten years ago at Lake Forest, Ill. Mrs. Ferry's suit for divorce was instituted yesterday. In her statement Mrs. Ferry accuses her husband of an inordinate desire for money, and with being cunning and brutal in his nature. She states that while traveling in Europe in 1876, after their marriage, Mr. Ferry became aware of the fact that she was in a delicate condition and execrated his lot, saying he was a poor man and had nothing with which to support a family.

On their return to America he chided her on account of what he called her father's ungenerous conduct. He wanted money, Mrs. Ferry states. At times he wept bitterly, and said he was being chained down on account of being her husband. He importuned her to borrow money or get it in some way from her father. Mr. Farwell at times made several advantageous business propositions to him, but he scorned them.

Mrs. Ferry says she coaxed her father into building a house for them, but Ferry did not want a house. He wanted "stuff." Another of Mrs. Ferry's allegations is that she has reason to believe her husband is over-attentive to a young lady, and she says that when she accused Ferry of being so he said she (Mrs. Ferry) had not tried to win her father over to his assistance; that she was no sort of a wife, and that he had to find solace and comfort somewhere.

Ferry fell heir to $60,000 when his father died, but he was still mean and brutal. Complainant says that she went with an old hat for seven years, and with her own hands mended carpets to cover the floors of their home. Ferry improvised a set of rules for her. The following are specimens:

You must make the cook use drippings instead of lard; butter must never be thought of; lard is a luxury; bones left at table must be used for soup; the housemaid must wash the windows every day if she has nothing else to do.

HAMILTON AFFAIRS.

A Vigorous Protest Against Proposed Railway Legislation.

HAMILTON, Nov. 30.—A meeting of the Finance Committee of the City Council was held this morning to consider the proposed legislation for the amalgamation of the Hamilton and Northwestern, Northern and Pacific Junction and North Simcoe (Penetanguishene branch) railways. It was pointed out that Hamilton had given $350,000 to the Hamilton and Northwestern on the agreement that the road should remain independent and the head offices should be in this city. Not one of the agreements was carried out. The management of the Northwestern was vigorously condemned. After adopting the following resolution the meeting adjourned: Moved by Ald. Blaichey, seconded by Ald. Doran, That we oppose any action on the part of the Northern and Northwestern Railway which does not respect the obligations of that company to the city of Hamilton.

Constable Griggs, who was recently brutally beaten by west end roughs, is somewhat better. A commercial man, just returned from Lockport, N.Y., says he saw Eddie Brand, the man who assaulted Griggs, in that city yesterday.

Police Constable John Williams has left the force and is preparing to emigrate to Australia. He was on the force eleven years.

This morning Peter Mulholland was acquitted of the charge of stealing $10 from a little daughter of Wm. Gompfert. There was considerable doubt in the case, and Peter was given the benefit of the doubt.

Addie Rykert, a 12-year-old Dundas girl, has been missing from her home for a month and all the efforts of her mother to find her have been without avail. She has been away for two or three days at a time on several previous occasions, living with friends to whom she told all sorts of stories to induce them to keep her. She is believed to be in this city.

SUICIDE AT CHICAGO.

A Drunken Grocer Stands Before a Mirror and Blows His Brains Out.

CHICAGO, Nov. 30.—Standing before a looking glass in his room at the Grand Pacific Hotel yesterday, bootless and coatless, W. Scharfenberg, a grocer at No. 2410 West worth-avenue, blew his brains out shortly after noon. The wall, mirror and carpet were spattered with brains and blood, the hole in his forehead being large enough to admit the entrance of a man's fist. By his side lay a bottle of whisky, a bottle of poison and a revolver, the instrument of death. A fine sealskin coat and cap were thrown carelessly on the bed and his boots were tossed into a corner of the room. In his pockets several pawn tickets were found. Diamonds, a gold watch, rings and other jewelry had been pawned according to these tickets in various portions of the city. A sealed letter addressed to his wife was lying on the dresser. He had but $8 on his person when found. The self-murder was apparently the result of prolonged drinking.

Engagement at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Nov. 30.—The engagement is announced of Captain, the Hon. A. Byng, son of the late Earl of Stratford, and A. D. C. to Lord Lansdowne, to Lady Winifred Herbert, eldest daughter of Lord Carnarvon. Her mother was the only daughter of Lord Chesterfield and she has a considerable fortune in her own right.

The death is announced of Lady Harriet Fletcher, the widow of Colonel Fletcher, the well-known private secretary of Lord Dufferin when the latter was governor-general here.

Child Desertion at St. Thomas.

ST. THOMAS, Nov. 30.—Late on Saturday night during the snowstorm an infant was found upon the doorstep of Mr. John Meickle-john's house on Curtis-street, where it had been deserted by its mother. The waif was taken into an adjoining house, Mrs. Barnes'. It has since been discovered that the mother is Maria Deo, a 16-year-old girl who had been an inmate of the St. Thomas House of Industry and the police are looking for her.

The Belgium Mail Robbery.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Supt. Bell of the Foreign Mail Office has received from Postmaster Pearson of New York the list containing the registered numbers of mail matter sent by steamer Eider, which was stolen in Belgium. It contained 150 packages, and all but seven packages are reported lost. Of those lost sixty-seven were from New York, one from Buffalo and two from Rochester.

Three Men Burned to Death.

MASON, Neb., Nov. 30.—Mackendroff's general merchandise establishment was burned last night. J. J. Hoagland, Malcolm Miller and a son of Mackendroff perished in their sleeping room on an upper floor. Mackendroff saved himself by jumping from a window, but the fall broke one of his legs. The loss has not been ascertained.

A London Contractor Missing.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Nothing has been heard from Wm. Calvery, contractor, who left his home on the morning of Nov. 23 to go to work. He left a number of contracts unfinished, and his employes are looking for their week's wages. His wife can give no reason for his absence.

The Nationality of Dublin.

A St. Thomas despatch says:—A few nights ago a young domestic of this city gave birth to a child in the Southern counties fair grounds, she having become ill while passing the spot. She was seen to emerge from the grounds next morning with her babe wrapped in her overskirt. She found refuge in a house near by.

An Ottawa special to the Boston Herald says that many Manitoba settlers are again pressing their claims to lands which they allege were acquired by them prior to the transfer of the country to Canada. The same conditions exist as preceded the late rebellion and the danger is great.

People who are fond of discussing questions that can never be settled, says the London Times, are in the habit of affirming or denying very positively that Archer was the greatest jockey that ever lived. In the same way they argue that Ormonde is a better, or a worse, horse than Gladiateur, or Thormanby, or West Australian or Eclipse. Did Archer ride better than Scott, in the days of our fathers, or than Chaloner and Custance, twenty years ago, or than their illustrious contemporary, George Fordham? The question is hardly to be answered; and all that can be affirmed is that Archer, the winner of 2746 races, showed the qualities of first-rate horsemanship under a greater variety of circumstances and with more uniform success than any of these men.

Twenty-five blast furnaces, 66 railroad companies, 131 woodworking establishments, 18 electric light companies, 79 foundries, mills and machine shops, 6 mining and smelting companies and 26 flour mills were organized in the twelve Southern States during the past three months.

A jury has been secured to try Paul Grottkau, who is charged with having incited riots in Milwaukee last spring. One of the charges is that he urged the burning of the courthouse and an attack on the police. Grottkau was the predecessor of Spies as editor of the Chicago Anarchist organ.

ST. WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1886.

THE SECOND OPERA HOUSE MEETING.

There was a large gathering of electors in the Opera House last night, but though the meeting was called in Mr. Carnegie's behalf, the large majority of those present at the opening were in sympathy with the Liberal Candidate, Mr. Stratton and the Mowat Administration, and this preponderance was more marked at the termination of the masterly, logical, clear, dispassionate and convincing address of Mr. Bertram. This gentleman's knowledge of the political questions of the day, and his skill in presenting his facts show that though not in active political life, he keeps touch with the progress of political events, and that he has lost none of his old fire, that was wont to set the heather ablaze in former political contests in this county. The skilful manner in which he pilloried Mr. Carnegie, for his vast promises and infinitesimal performances, was highly appreciated by the audience, who caught each stinging point as it was presented, and endorsed it with ringing cheers. Mr. Carnegie's promises made in his election address of 1883, were a volume, while his performance was a paragraph. Mr. Carnegie was given credit for his great industry in the house but the strange part was that his exertions never amounted to anything, never accomplished anything. After all Mr. Carnegie's vigorous denunciation in his address of 1883 of the "monstrous" extravagance of the Mowat administration, he had only made in the session of 1884 an attempt to decrease that expenditure by $2700 and that was to defeat a grant to this amount for a local work—half the cost of a dam on Burnt River. It may be added that during the three years of 84, '85 and, 86, though there were appropriations voted for the public service to the amount of $6,966,065, the Conservative opposition only objected to the sum of $29,050, in these three years or a little over three mills in the dollar. This fact alone shews how baseless and factious is the cry of extravagance against the Mowat Government. Yet this is urged as a reason why "Mowat must go." No sane man would ask for a divorce from his wife because in her household disbursements for three years he found a sum equal to three mills on the dollar which did not meet his approval. All Mr. Carnegie's sweeping assertions, when squared with the record, show equally wonderful results. Mr. Carnegie flatly shirked discussion of the Separate School question and the amendments to the School Act, and did not dare to allude to it in the first part of his speech, so that Mr. Bertram could reply. Of course, he found fault with the amendments, but he neglected to state that the legislation he was now criticising, (when it was too late, and when he could, as he thought, make political capital out of it), that this legislation passed through all its stages without, as far as the journals of the House show, either Mr. Carnegie or any of the Opposition raising a voice against it. Mr. Carnegie appears to shine as a representative on the principle of locking the door after the horse is stolen. The gravamen of his objections to the amendments resolved itself into the growl that the amendments were not as definite as they might be. He could not controvert the true contention in reference to the payment of school rates that the party who pays the taxes is the party who decides how the money shall be applied for school purposes. Mr. Carnegie's attempt to ride both the Protestant and Roman Catholic horses was most diverting. There are trimmers and trimmers but Mr. Carnegie's exhibition last night showed him to be an apt scholar in trying to please every body a circumstance which suggests, the fable of the "old man and his ass." This meeting was heralded and placarded as an occasion for replying to Hon. Mr. Ross, address on Friday night, but in this respect it was a miserable failure. Instead of replying to Mr. Ross, Mr. Carnegie indulged in a monotonous rehash of all his old speeches, and no honest-minded Conservative can regard his speech as in the slightest degree an answer to the address of Hon. Mr. Ross. Mr. Carnegie's libations of milk and water oratory did not improve his position, in fact it can hardly be doubted the meeting called in his behalf will have the effect of injuring his interests.

MR. CARNEGIE HAS HIS SAY

To Another Large Gathering of Patient Electors.

A Specimen Speech by Mr. Carnegie—Mr. Bertram Makes a Most Effective Re joinder—His Many Telling Points. Heartily Applauded—Mr. Carnegie's Second Speech—He Pumps Cautiously with the Separate School Question—He Closes the Proceedings with a Grand Double Barrelled Act—He Attempts to Ride Both the Protestant Horse and the Roman Catholic Charger.

The meeting announced to be held in Mr. Carnegie's interest in the Opera House Tuesday evening was largely attended, the audience apparently being fairly balanced as to political weight. Several supporters of Mr. Carnegie occupied seats on the platform.

Mr. Moore occupied the chair and asked a good hearing for the speakers. Mr. Stratton was invited to a seat on the platform, but as he was otherwise engaged, Mr. Bertram amidst loud cheers stated that he would appear on his behalf.

MR. CARNEGIE, who was received with cheers, stated that in view of the fact that Hon. Mr. Ross had only on Friday evening last delivered an address and that they were to have our Chieftain—a pause, but no cheers—and his colleagues, in a few days, he was gratified at the large attendance present on this occasion. He then referred to alleged interference in Dominion matters, to the alleged detriment of the provincial interests. He asserted that the Mowat Administration had invaded municipal rights and that they spent their time in tinkering the municipal act. He referred also to the improper mode of payment of railway scrip. He attempted to ingeniously show that, instead of their being a surplus of six or seven millions, there was a debt of between three and four millions. Mr. Carnegie took his usual jaunt over Colonization roads rehashing his old statements, of extravagant appropriations for these roads on the eve of an election, and stated that in 1871 he applied for a grant to a road in Smith, but could not get one, as the appropriation had been exhausted. Another attempt was made to overturn the at Guelph, giving as a specific example of bad management that they had spent $7000 for cattle and feed and that the sales only amounted to about $3000, suppressing the fact that all of the cattle were not sold. The drainage question was referred to and the statement made that $60,000 had been forgiven one county in the west. Credit was taken by the Mowat Government for large expenditure on asylums but he assured his hearers that Sandfield Macdonald had erected most of the buildings. The province was, Mr. Carnegie asserted, running behind in the matter of money. Mr. Ross had claimed, what the speaker was not going to dispute, that the Mowat Government was an honest one, but it was a strange kind of honesty. The Mowat Government was accused of a loose manner of expenditure, the speaker alleging that items of account in one year did not appear till in the accounts of the next year. He asserted there was no audit in the Crown Lands Departmental accounts, and no check on payments. Specific sums of $1,100 and $600 were mentioned as not having been entered in the proper year. The enormous crime of selling Agricultural College stock and taking notes instead of cash and in not collecting the notes promptly enough, was affectingly elaborated. The Bonfield timber limit matter, showing that a license, which had been refused to Hurdman Bros., was issued to Mr. Bonfield, who had bought their claim, was also dwelt upon. The Coe land sale in Hastings was animadverted upon, and the bill for the relief of Dowling in 1885, denounced. The Mowat Government was denied credit for the Factory Act, and the assertion made that Mr. Mowat was forced to act in that matter. Manhood suffrage had been opposed by the Mowat Government, which afterwards adopted it. The hurried bringing on of the elections was condemned. The often refuted statements respecting the unfairness of the Redistribution Act of 1874 were reiterated, and considerable distortion of figures was indulged in to help the speaker in making out a case of unfair distribution of population. It was asked why the principle of minority representation was not applied to all counties returning three members, as it had been to Toronto? He referred to the school book question, and disputed the statement of Mr. Ross that the annual sales of the school books was $70,000, who had said on another occasion that the annual sales amounted to $100,000—(cheers)—and again emphasized the monopoly features of the scheme. The expenditure of education was criticised, and the speaker declared himself in favor of returning to an irresponsible head for the Education Department. The cost of administering the affairs of the department was attempted to be shown, and a letter was read ostensibly showing that the examination craze was distroying the efficiency of the school system.

Mr. Bertram's Rejoinder.

MR. BERTRAM, on rising, was greeted with round after round of applause. He said he had much pleasure in being on the platform to speak in Mr. Stratton's behalf. He had to thank the chairman for the tender solicitude he displayed for Mr. Stratton. If, however, the chairman had ever been in Parliament he would have learned before this that one of the first things that should not be done was to impute motives. The speaker had no doubt that Mr. Stratton had very good reasons for not appearing. He was at liberty to conduct his campaign in his own way, and while Mr. Carnegie has had twenty years' experience in public speaking, he was free to say that Mr. Stratton had not had that experience; but in that time he had no doubt Mr. Stratton would be able, if challenged, to appear on the platform with Mr. Carnegie. Mr. Bertram was inclined to concur with Mr. Stratton's opinion regarding the conducting of a campaign. The speaker then proceeded to a discussion of the political questions amidst loud applause. To judge from Mr. Carnegie's remarks, he would judge that the latter had a very bad opinion of the Mowat Government. Mr. Carnegie had cited a great many instances of its wrong-doings, but he would not be able to follow him, owing to the short time at his disposal through all the

of his arguments. He proposed therefore to consider some of the chief subjects now at issue, without endeavoring to follow him through all the mazes. Mr. Carnegie went, on without trying to balance one wrong-doing with another. He would discuss some of the questions now at issue. All were aware that the Mowat administration has been in power somewhere about 14 years, and it was not to be expected something would not crop up that could not be condemned. The Mowat government did not claim, to be an altogether perfect government. He knew some things himself which he would condemn, but those present were not looking for perfection, and while there are some in Canada who would prefer that the party spirit which now exists should not exist, and whether it would take the shape of another party or the loosening of party bonds, they would prefer to see a decrease of the spirit—he was inclined that way himself. But at present we have to deal with actualities. The only thing was to consider whether the electors will support Mr. Mowat or give the reins of power to Mr. Meredith, and the only way to consider was to find out what of the administration has been, and what representative questions have been brought before the House by Mr. Meredith and his friends. He had put only the record of Mr.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

XIII.

They were all assembled as usual at the breakfast table.

Preferring the request suggested to her by Mrs. Presty, Kitty had hastened the presentation of the birthday gifts by getting into her mother's bed in the morning and exacting her mother's promise before she would consent to get out again. By her own express wish she was left in ignorance of what the presents would prove to be. "Hide them from me," said this young epicure in pleasurable sensations, "and make me want to see them until I can bear it no longer." The gifts had accordingly been collected in an embrasure of one of the windows; and the time had now arrived when Kitty could bear it no longer.

In the procession of the presents, Mrs. Linley led the way.

She had passed behind the screen which had thus far protected the hidden treasures from discovery, and appeared again with a vision of beauty in the shape of a doll. The dress of this wonderful creature exhibited the latest audacities of French fashion. Her head made a bow; her eyes went to sleep and woke again; she had a voice that said two words—more precious than 2,000 in the mouth of a mere living creature. Kitty's arms opened and embraced her gift with a scream of ecstasy. That fervent pressure found its way to the right spring. The doll squeaked: "Mamma!"—and creaked—and cried again—and said: "Papa!" Kitty sat down on the floor; her legs would support her no longer. "I think I shall faint," she said, quite seriously.

In the midst of the general laughter Sydney silently placed a new toy (a pretty little imitation of a jeweler's casket) at Kitty's side, and drew back before the child could look at her. Mrs. Presty was the only person present who noticed her pale face and the trembling of her hands as she made the effort which preserved her composure.

The doll's necklace, bracelets, and watch and chain riveted Kitty's attention on the casket. Just as she thought of looking round for her dear Syd her father produced a new outburst of delight by presenting a perambulator worthy of the doll. Her uncle followed with a parasol, devoted to the preservation of the doll's complexion when she went out for an airing. Then there came a pause. Where was the generous grandmother's gift? Nobody remembered it; Mrs. Presty herself discovered the inestimable sixpenny picture-book cast away and forgotten on a distant window-seat. "I have a great mind to keep this," she said to Kitty, "till you are old enough to value it properly." In the moment of her absence at the window Linley's mother-in-law lost the chance of seeing him whisper to Sydney. "Meet me in the shrubbery in half an hour," he said. She stepped back from him startled by the proposal. When Mrs. Presty was in the middle of the room again Linley and the governess were no longer near each other.

Having by this time recovered herself, Kitty got on her legs. "Now," the spoilt child declared, addressing the company present, "I'm going to play."

The doll was put into the perambulator and was wheeled about the room, while Mrs. Linley moved the chairs out of the way and Randal attended with the open parasol—under orders to "pretend that the sun was shining." Once more the sixpenny picture-book was neglected. Mrs. Presty picked it up from the floor, determined by, this time to hold it in reserve until her ungrateful grandchild reached years of discretion. She put it in the bookcase between Byron's "Don Juan" and Butler's "Lives of the Saints." In the position which she now occupied, Linley was visible approaching Sydney again. "Your own interests are seriously concerned," he whispered, "in something that I have to tell you."

Incapable of hearing what passed between them, Mrs. Presty could see that a secret understanding united her son-in-law and the governess. She looked round cautiously at Mrs. Linley.

Kitty's humor had changed; she was now eager to see the doll's splendid clothes taken off and put on again. "Come and look at it," she said to Sydney; "I want you to enjoy my birthday as much as I do." Left by himself, Randal got rid of the parasol by putting it on a table near the door. Mrs. Presty beckoned to him to join her at the farther end of the room.

"I want you to do me a favor," she began.

Glancing at Linley before she proceeded, Mrs. Presty took up a newspaper and affected to be consulting Randal's opinion on a passage which had attracted her attention. "Your brother is looking our way," she whispered; "he mustn't suspect that there is a secret between us."

False pretenses of any kind invariably irritated Randal. "What do you want me to do?" he asked sharply.

The reply only increased his perplexity.

"Observe Miss Westerfield and your brother. Look at them now."

Randal obeyed. "What is there to look at?" he inquired.

"Can't you see?"

"I see they are talking to each other."

"They are talking confidentially; talking so that Mrs. Linley can't hear them. Look again."

Randal fixed his eyes on Mrs. Presty with an expression which showed his dislike of that lady a little too plainly. Before he could answer what she had just said to him his lively little niece hit on a new idea. The sun was shining, the flowers were in their brightest beauty—and the doll had not yet been taken into the garden! Kitty at once led the way out; so completely preoccupied in steering the perambulator in a straight course that she forgot her uncle and the parasol. Only waiting to remind her husband and Sydney that they were wasting the beautiful morning indoors, Mrs. Linley followed her daughter—and innocently placed a fatal obstacle in Mrs. Presty's way by leaving the room. Having consulted each other by a look, Linley and the governess went out next. Left alone with Randal, Mrs. Presty's anger, under the complete overthrow of her carefully laid scheme, set restraint at defiance.

"My daughter's married life is a wreck," she burst out, pointing theatrically to the door by which Linley and Sydney Westerfield had retired. "And Catherine has the vile creature whom your brother picked up in London to thank for it! Now do you understand me?"

"Less than ever," Randal answered—"unless you have taken leave of your senses."

Mrs. Presty recovered the command of her temper.

On that fine morning her daughter might remain in the garden until the luncheon bell rang. Linley and Sydney Westerfield could be left to [illegible] as his sole privilege, would assuredly take place. The one chance left of still defeating him on his own ground was to force Randal to interfere by convincing him of his brother's guilt. Moderation of language and composure of manner offered the only hopeful prospect of reaching this end. Mrs. Presty assumed the disguise of patient submission, and used the irresistible influence of good humor and good sense.

"I don't comprehend, dear Randal, of what you have still to say," she replied. "My indiscretion has deserved it. I ought to have produced my proofs, and have left it to you to draw the conclusion. Sit down, if you please. I won't detain you for more than a few minutes."

Randal had not anticipated such moderation as this; he took the chair that was nearest to Mrs. Presty. They were both now sitting with their backs turned to the entrance from the library to the drawing-room.

"I won't trouble you with my own impressions," Mrs. Presty went on. "I will be careful only to mention what I have seen and heard. If you refuse to believe me I refer you to the guilty persons themselves."

She had just got to the end of those introductory words when Mrs. Linley returned, by way of the library, to fetch the forgotten parasol.

Randal insisted on making Mrs. Presty express herself plainly. "You speak of guilty persons," he said. "Am I to understand that one of those guilty persons is my brother?"

Mrs. Linley advanced a step and took the parasol from the table. Hearing what Randal said, she paused, wondering at the strange allusion to her husband. In the meanwhile Mrs. Presty answered the question that had been addressed to her.

"Yes," she said to Randal; "I mean your brother and your brother's mistress—Sydney Westerfield."

Mrs. Linley laid the parasol back on the tables and approached them.

She never once looked at her mother; her face, white and rigid, was turned toward Randal. To him, and to him only, she spoke. "What does my mother's horrible language mean?" she asked.

Mrs. Presty triumphed inwardly; chance had decided in her favor after all. "Don't you see," she said to her daughter, "that I am here to answer for myself?"

Mrs. Linley still looked at Randal, and still spoke to him. "It is impossible for me to insist on an explanation from my mother," she proceeded. "No matter what I may feel I must remember that she is my mother. I ask you again—you who have been listening to her—what does she mean?"

Mrs. Presty's sense of her own importance refused to submit to being passed over in this way.

"However insolently you may behave, Catherine, you will not succeed in provoking me. Your mother is bound to open your eyes to the truth. You have a rival in your husband's affections, and that rival is your governess. Take your own course now; I have no more to say." With her head high in the air—looking the picture of conscious virtue—the old lady walked out.

At the same moment Randal seized his first opportunity of speaking.

Have You Thought About It?

Pain is one of the sure things of life, and it becomes then a most important question to have at hand the quickest and most efficient remedy. Polson's Nerviline cannot fail to cure cramps, toothache, neuralgia, headache and all pain, internal or external. Nerviline is the most perfect combination ever offered to the public for the relief of pain. It will not cost you much to try it, for you can buy at any drug store for 10 cents a trial bottle, which will convince you of its mighty pain relieving power. 6dw48

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. sodw41tf

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spring-less trusses made in York State, costing me $50. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. R. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 95 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. MR. CARNEGIE HAS HIS SAY

Meredith to fall back upon, but the record of the candidate for West Peterborough. Now, so far as Mr. Stratton was concerned, there was no public record. Unlike Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Stratton has not been in Parliament; he was only an aspirant for the position, and if he is sent there and comes back to his electors, he will have a record to which appeal could be made. Now, Mr. Carnegie is fortunate—or unfortunate—enough to have a record. (Laughter.) Before going into the actions of the government itself the speaker proposed to briefly review Mr. Carnegie's record as a matter of simple justice to the electors. Mr. Carnegie was in parliament from 1867 to 1871, and then he left his record, but that may be said to have been settled before the elections of 1883, when he was again returned. In 1883 Mr. Carnegie had a great many strong, bold and outspoken opinions, and the opinions he embodied in an address to the electors of considerable length. In that address he gives wonderful promises and to give to the electors. And when Mr. Carnegie's address was printed during this campaign, the speaker could not help thinking in his own mind that this (holding up the larger address) was Mr. Carnegie in 1883, and this (putting aloft a small slip of paper scarcely large enough to light a pipe) is Mr. Carnegie in 1886, and that the latter was the "performance" of the "promises" (demonstrative applause). He proposed to refer to those opinions, but Mr. Carnegie had only one opinion now, and that is that you should elect him to sit again in the Legislative Assembly at Toronto. Now, he proposed to to examine some of these opinions, and contrast them with what had been done since. The speaker read a clause from Mr. Carnegie's 1883 address in reference to the Streams Bill, which was a bone of contention at that time. The clause declared him in favor of the protection of the rights of individuals in the matter of rivers and streams. On Jan. 29th, 1885, Mr. Carnegie assented to an entirely different opinion to what he expressed in 1883. He changed his opinion because the was against him. Mr. Carnegie went back on his own opinion, which he proclaimed in '83 simply because he could not help himself. The speaker was disposed to give Mr. Carnegie credit for being a most painstaking representative, and his name figured largely in connection with the public accounts committee. Mr. Carnegie had a great nose for scandal. He took a large part of the time of the House, in his inquiry into the public accounts, but after the most minute and searching investigation—and the speaker thought he remembered hearing Mr. Carnegie say he would make it hot for Mr. J. B. McWilliams when he got into the House—what was the result of it? Nothing.

NOT A SINGLE MOTION

made in the House condemning any of these accounts; and the speaker always judged a man by his actions more than his words. And if Mr. Carnegie found all this iniquity prevailing in the Public Accounts Committee, it was his duty at least to bring some motion into the House whereby those gentlemen should have been shown guilty and all their malpractices condemned. Now, as to that "reckless expenditure," one would surely think that in Mr. Carnegie's handwriting there would be put into the Clerk of the House, a motion condemning those items of expenditure. Well, come down to the record again. (Laughter) What does it say? There was only one motion made in 1884 to curtail any expenditure, which was introduced on March 22nd. Mr. Bertram read the motion, which moved to strike out the sum of $2,750 appropriated to meet the one half of the cost of a dam on Burnt river. Of all the appropriations asked during 1884 that was to amend made—a reduction of $2,750 in the $3,000,000 asked. (Applause) Having shown that this great cry of reckless expenditure ended after all in very little wool, the speaker read another clause of Mr. Carnegie's '83 address regarding the expenditure of the Government. Unfortunately the record was against him again. (Applause.) The only way the speaker could account for it was that Mr. C. was indulging in very bad company at Toronto—Mr. Meredith and other friends. What did Mr. Carnegie do? He voted directly and squarely that the number of members in the House be increased from 89 to 90. (Cheers.) (Upon Mr. Carnegie asking Mr. Bertram to read the motion, the latter did so. It was unmistakably plain—against Mr. Carnegie.) In voting for this motion he went back on his advocacy of fewer members and decreased expenditure. (Applause.) The speaker had nothing to say that came nearer home. The evening Mr. Ross was here Mr. Carnegie said he commended the taking of a representative from Stormont and Cornwall, (Mr. Carnegie—"Yes, I did.") why he voted against it. (Prolonged cheers.) Mr. Bertram mentioned that the motion was moved on March 27th, '83, and could be found on record in page 171. The speaker thought it would be quite futile for him to pursue this course of investigation—enough had been said to convince all that Mr. Carnegie must have been

KEEPING VERY BAD COMPANY.

He was afraid it might be said of Mr. Carnegie that, like the politician discribed by an American rhymster,

"A merciful Providence fashioned him holler
In order that he might his principles swaller."

(Cheers.) The opposition were crying "Oh, the finances," in order to defeat Mr. Mowat, but in the Mail newspaper there is not one word about the finances, and Mr. Meredith's address is simply one of platitude of the merest milk and water make-up. Therefore the electors must look in some other direction for the reasons these gentlemen are urging to get rid of the Government. All had heard of the "brawling brood of bribers" who were up there trying to capture the treasury benches. Big Push Wilkison, the man who was paying out the money, is a friend of Mr. Carnegie's. In '83 Mr. Big Push stood on that platform and made a beautiful speech on behalf of Mr. Carnegie, who, if he wants his friends to have a good opinion of him, must steer clear of Wilkison. It seemed to the speaker that a persistent attempt was being made by the Mail newspaper and other organs to raise an altogether different issue—an issue that has not yet been raised to any great extent in Canada. The speaker referred to the Separate School question. He had been anxious for Mr. Carnegie to discuss it in the manner the latter professes to admire, namely,

FACE TO FACE.

Mr. Carnegie had not given the electors any opinion or statements which the speaker could reply to or contradict. If When he advertised that he would discuss a certain subject, and then takes his seat without alluding to it, he did injustice not only to his opponents but to his professions for anxiety for full and free discussion. The question is being diligently used throughout the country in all aspects and all ways to influence the electors. It is said by the Mail that the Roman Catholic people of this country were enjoying privileges that had been given them by the Mowat Government, which was called the administration of Archbishop Lynch. The speaker liked this question

BROUGHT TO THE LIGHT OF DAY.

It was the question which he, for one, would never consent to have raised as far as his own opinions prevailed. He believed, and always had believed, that the worst thing that could befall Canada was to have any question raised by which the different religions in the country might be "set by the ears." All ought to have the same measure of freedom, all were citizens of the same country, and he would deprecate any such discussion being raised. But the speaker thought Mr. Carnegie should have raised the subject on this occasion. As far as that matter was concerned, he had met Protestants who were contrary instead to think there was nothing in the cry. The speaker himself was not convinced of anything till he

APPLIED TO THE RECORD.

(Laughter). It might not be known to all the electors of the county how they stood in this respect, and for that purpose he had brought with him the British North America Act itself. It gives to the Roman Catholic electors in Ontario the right to have Separate Schools. That was by treaty, and there was no taking it from them except by revolution, and that they did not want to have. (Applause.) The same privileges were granted in the same charter to the Protestant minority in Lower Canada. In order that there might be no mistake he read the entire clause 93, on page 96, referring to the matter; the only question raised was that the Roman Catholic's are obtaining undue advantages by the action of the Mowat government, but the clause read proved that

THAT WAS NOT THE CASE.

The act provided that nothing in any law should prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons have by law; that equal privileges be extended to the Roman Catholics in Ontario and the Protestants in Quebec; that in case the Local Government is not willing to grant the required legislation whereby the schools can be properly carried on, they have a right to appeal to the Governor-General in Council. That was the charter whereby these schools were established in both Upper and Lower Canada. The speaker then read an extract from the Mail of Nov. 20th, 1886, on the subject which, he said, was so cunningly devised and so well put that he did not wonder anybody reading it would be taken in. Where the cunning came in was this. It is well known that in reading an act of Parliament, a clause may have its meaning entirely changed by reading the clause following. What the Mail did was to place the wrong clause first. In place of giving clause 41 first, it gives clause 52—and clause 52 governs clause 41. The speaker then read the two clauses as they should be, and the difference in meaning was most noticeable. The party paying the taxes had the right to say whether his money should be applied to Public or Separate schools. It is said this act

COMPELS A ROMAN CATHOLIC

to support Separate Schools. It says nothing of the sort—if a Catholic prefers to support Public schools, he is at perfect liberty to do so. It also says that the tenant shall be right to say where his money shall be applied if he pays the taxes, but if the tenant does not pay the taxes, the landlord is held liable, and in that event the landlord determines where the taxes shall go. That was plain enough. According to the Mail, Protestant electors may be led away by a false issue of the worst character. There is a clause in the Act which gives them full liberty to send their children to any school they like and pay their taxes to any school they like. Therefore, this contention of the Mail's falls to the ground. But the

STING WAS IN THE TAIL END

of the article. The electors would naturally infer from it that Mr. Mowat to curry favor had passed legislation which he had no right to do. But the speaker said he had gone over the Act clause after clause, and he had failed to find anything in it but what gives straight forward fairness to Protestant and Catholic alike, and if any inequality by any means had been inserted in the Act, it should be expunged at once. (Applause.) But they pay taxes as we do, are our fellow subjects, and having a right to seperate schools as by that charter, it is our duty as citizens everyone whatever our religion, to give them full facility, the same as we have, to carry on their educational system to enable them to educate their children as well as we educate ours. (Applause). In referring to the school book question, over which Mr. Carnegie had been so eloquent (?), the speaker said the contract came up before the House and was rattled. If the bargain was so very bad, it would have been Mr. Carnegie's duty to get up in the House and move an amendment setting forth his reasons why it should not be completed. Nobody did. (Cheers). But what are the facts? Are the electors paying any more for school books now than they were before. Mr. Carnegie says they give 10c. now for the first reader, whereas the old price was 5c. But the speaker was willing to leave it to the audience if the new book at 10c. was not as the old one at 5c. (Cries of "yes" and applause.) Mr. Ross stated when here that money was saved by the new book to the children. The speaker would not dwell on that subject, as Mr. Ross had fully justified the course of the Government in the matter last Friday evening. Mr. Carnegie had spoken of a great many evil things that have been done by the Government, but the speaker knew of Mr. Ludgate, who was an old friend, whose memory it was the speaker's duty to see cleared, and of whom it was said that by impeachment, as it were, he obtained a timber limit from the Government that he could not fairly claim, that the statements made in regard to him were false. The speaker gave incidents showing the difficulty of securing settlement of any claims, no matter how just, from any Government. He happened to know just how the one in question came about. Mr. Ludgate owned a limit in the township of Lutherworth, which was set apart as a mineral lot. Some two or three years passed by and the land was not used for mineral purposes, but another party made application, and the lot was put in his limit instead of being returned to Mr. Ludgate. The next year the timber was cut off it, and when that became known Mr. Ludgate

THREE TIMES AS GOOD

APPLIED FOR THE RECOMPENSE

he had a perfect right to, and, finally, the Government agreed to give him territory to recoup him for his loss. It was given only for that purpose. (Applause.) It is known that in latter years Mr. Ludgate was in poor circumstances. Well, a very large portion of that money was given to his creditors, but a number of them, myself among the number, never asked him for a dollar of his debt. The speaker was glad to be able to relieve him from any blame in the matter. Mr. Bertram was obliged to abruptly terminate his address by the expiry of his time. He resumed his seat amidst a whirlwind of applause.

MR. CARNEGIE'S INCONSISTENCY.

After the conclusion of Mr. Bertram's speech, Mr. Carnegie of course asserted his right to reply. And herein he showed the dishonesty of his alleged desire for full and free discussion, a point he has insisted on time and again. It was announced that he would deal with the Separate School question, but he refrained altogether from it in his first speech, thus shirking the discussion he pretended to be so anxious for. He preferred to save it for the latter part of his address, when he knew Mr. Bertram would have no chance of replying to and controverting his arguments. Thus did Mr. Carnegie give the lie to his professed anxiety for full, free and fair discussion.

In the second part of his address, Mr. Carnegie defended himself from the charge made by Mr. Bertram, of not carrying out promises of great deeds made in his address to the electors in 1883. He endeavored to show that the fact of his not having objected to alleged extravagant expenditures, was not any proof that improper expenditures do not exist. The speaker was proud of his action against the $2,700 grant for a dam on Burnt River. With great earnestness and a warmth suggestive of personal interest, he defended the bribery conspiracy, and insinuated that the bribery funds were supplied by the Mowat Administration.

In the matter of Separate Schools, he argued with Mr. Bertram's contention as to the guarantee of Confederation Act. He was not responible for the position of the Mail, which he professed to repudiate. With regard to the election of Roman Catholic trustees by ballot, it was something with which he had nothing to do, either for or against. As to the principle of Separate Schools, he (Mr. Carnegie) was opposed to it. He dealt at some length with amendments to the school law in 1863. He admitted that until 1877 the party who agreed to pay the taxes could dispose of the taxes for school purposes as he saw fit. In 1877 the assessor was bound to distinguish between Roman Catholics and Protestants, and in 1879 he was bound to accept the statement of the party assessed as to his standing. (At this point the clock overhead tolling the hour of eleven, was the signal for about one-third of the audience quietly retiring.) Mr. Carnegie asserted that no agreement can affect the disposition of school taxes by the "occupant" or "tenant," and attempted to controvert the assertion, which the text of the act precisely warrants, that the party who pays the taxes has the right of deciding the application of the taxes for school purposes. At the most, the speaker asserted that there was some doubt upon the meaning and effect of the clauses in question, and he denounced the Mowat Administration for framing the amendments so that there should be any doubt. The speaker was willing to give his constituents of all classes even handed justice. He took credit to himself for opposing a bill authorising Separate School boards to accept a fixed arbitrary pro rata sum for school purposes, and on this ground he asked the people's support at the coming elections! He had voted for Roman Catholic representation on High School boards, because Hon. Mr. Fraser's arguments had convinced him. Mr. Carnegie felt he must speak out. He wanted all classes to consider where we stand. He asked for disapproval of the Irish League for political purposes, condemned it strongly, and asked Roman Catholics to denounce it by their votes. He proceeded to say he did not ride the Protestant horse, and he spent several minutes in alternately asserting his undying fidelity to Protestantism and his affectionate solicitude for Roman Catholics, and if he hadn't asserted that he was a Presbyterian one, could not have told from his acrobatic expression of sentiment whether he was in religion, a Mormon or a Second Adventist. The meeting closed with cheers for the Queen and the speakers.

WHY

Will people pay rent when houses and lots can be purchased on such easy terms as are offered by the undesigned. Come and inspect our work and see for yourselves how we construct our houses. Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. I am offering good building lots, and will build solid brick houses, nine-inch walls, strapped and lathed, two stories, for less money than you can buy frame or veneered buildings. We cordially invite those who anticipate renting or buying to inspect our work and prove for themselves that our houses are not merely built to sell. Every house I've sold gives first-class satisfaction, and I am determined that every house I build shall be a standing testimony to honest building. IRISH DIFFICULTIES.

O'CONNOR SAYS HARTINGTON IS THE ALLY OF THE LANDLORDS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—T. P. O'Connor, M.P., cables from London to the Star as follows: Lord Hartington holds out firmly against all attempts of the Gladstonians to bring about a reunion of the party. He is credited with having stated positively that nothing would induce him to serve again under Gladstone. All his interests, prejudices and connections bind him to the side of the landlords. It is given out by the Tories that every step taken by the Government in Ireland has had his approval. A section of the Unionists, however, disapprove coercive measures, and will probably make a stand on that point. Last night's reports from Ireland show that Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is now fully embarked in reorganization. His appointment of Gen. Buller as under secretary dissatisfies the Tories generally. The consent of Lord Hartington and other landlords is understood to have been gained by representations that Buller's appointment is meant as a sop to the Irish, who knew him chiefly as a supposed resolute enemy of rack rents, and the assurance that he may be relied on at the proper time to put the military forces in motion with unrelenting vigor.

There was wild talk last night among private Tories of the coming suspension of Irish members of Parliament. It is pretended that the Government intends to meet obstruction tactics with the suspension of every member taking part therein. Official Tories questioned as to the truth of the statement do not deny that members of the Cabinet and prominent leaders of the party have declared themselves in favor of such action in the event as anticipated.

Mr. Labouchere, speaking at the Radical meeting at Brighton, announced that efforts would be made to nominate a Liberal or Radical in every English and Scotch constituency for which a Unionist now stands unless the member accepts Mr. Gladstone's Irish policy. The Radicals who think with Mr. Labouchere are determined to force even Gladstone to admit that no compromise is possible on the Irish question.

Archbishop Walsh's Views.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Archbishop Walsh of Dublin informed a Pall Mall Gazette reporter who interrogated him concerning United Ireland's rent movement, that he was at first startled and grieved at the plan of campaign which the league had adopted, but he had since been convinced of its equity and necessity.

He did not fear that the church would lose its moral influence over the people. A movement was imperative to establish a rent-fixing tribunal which would be independent of landlord and tenant alike. Social order in Ireland depended upon the success of this movement.

Buller's Appointment Unpopular.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The Daily News says that the Kerry landlords are evidently furious at Buller's appointment as Under Secretary for Ireland, but dare not speak out. The practice of sending forward impartial Englishmen to responsible posts in Ireland cannot be too highly commended.

Editor Farrar's Town Heard From.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—Two hundred girls to-day attacked and pelted with mud a bailiff and his assistant, who were serving writs of ejectment upon tenants on Lord Dillon's estate, in Ballyhaunis, County Mayo. The men beat a hasty retreat, leaving the horse, car and papers.

THE BUSY BIGAMIST.

John Trenholm Alias George Brown Arrested in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Dec. 1.—John Trenholm alias George Brown was arrested last evening on a charge of bigamy, he having three wives living at present. This action it brought by his third wife, Eulalie Marcotte, of Sault au Recollet, daughter of an hotelkeeper of that place. He married Miss Marcotte on June 14, 1886, after having married Jane Strange in Winnipeg, by whom he had two children, whom he has also left, and Annie Dixon of Drummondville, with whom he has recently lived and by whom he has eight children. The prisoner is about 60 years of age. He appeared before the Police Magistrate to-day and was remanded to the 9th inst.

A Circular From Powderly.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—The Press publishes a circular issued by the general officers of the Knights of Labor of America, which announces that the General Executive Board has unanimously resolved to levy an assessment of 25 cents per member upon all the local assemblies of the order to be applied to the relief of locked out members. The circular says that the order of the Knights of Labor has reached the most critical period in its history, and is signed by Powderly.

THE CAMPBELL CASE.

THE TALE SHE TELLS OF LORD COLIN'S HOUSEHOLD.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The hearing of the Campbell divorce suit was resumed to-day. Rose Baer, formerly lady's maid to the plaintiff, testified for the defence. She said the Duke of Marlborough frequently visited Lady Colin Campbell. He usually came in the afternoon and was shown to the drawing-room. Witness never saw any familiarity between Lord Colin Campbell and Mary Watson. Lady Colin had instructed the witness not to leave letters to her mistress in the hall, but to take them to her. Some of the letters witness carried to plaintiff the latter burned, others she placed in a box under her bed. In June, 1883, Lady Colin, who was at the time in the company of Lady Miles, called the witness. Lady Miles told witness that she had blackened her mistress' character and must leave, and that if she did not go at once the police would be called to put her out. Lady Colin gave her $20. $5 only being due, as wages, and told witness to tell the servants la explanation of her departure that her father was ill and she was going home. Lady Colin added, the witness said, that she considered the witness as a sister and not as a servant, and kissed her good-bye, saying it was Lord Colin Campbell who had dismissed her. The witness had posted letters daily to the Duke of Marlborough and sometimes took them to his house. Lady Campbell used to leave the house at 8 o'clock in the evening and return as late as 2 o'clock on the following morning. On some of these occasions the witness would accompany her mistress a short distance from home and then be told to return. On these expeditions Lady Colin usually carried along a felt hat concealed under her cloak. Sometimes in undressing Lady Colin after her return from these absences witness found her dress partially disarranged. Once witness found a gentleman's handkerchief in Lady Colin's room at Leigh Court. The plaintiff said she knew to whom it belonged and took it. Once witness heard somebody after midnight ascending the stairs. Lady Colin coughed. The person then entered the door of room adjoining the plaintiff's. The door of this room was shut and witness was dismissed. Next day the witness found evidence that the room had been occupied by two persons. Once the witness heard the Duke of Marlborough in Lady Colin's room during the afternoon. On one occasion, while witness was brushing Lady Colin's hair after midnight, somebody on the outside of the room tried the door, and finding it locked departed. Witness saw Chief Shaw walking outside the house with a carriage in waiting. The carriage went away and Chief Shaw entered the house. Witness often mailed letters to Chief Shaw from Lady Colin. Being cross-examined Miss Baer admitted that she cried when she was dismissed from Lady Colin's service, and that she said she was sorry she had talked to the servants. She admitted she had been a "wicked gossip," also that she had written Lady Colin both from abroad and after her return to England, and that plaintiff had never answered the letters. She denied having threatened to expose Lady Colin when the latter allowed witness' letters asking for money to remain unanswered. At this point counsel for the plaintiff cross-examined Miss Baer very closely and she admitted that two weeks ago she had signed a statement that Lady Colin Campbell dismissed her because she knew too much about her, and that she thought it necessary to tell Lady Colin that she would expose her. Being asked to explain how it came that she signed such a statement and now admitted that it was untrue, witness said, "I thought it true then; I think it untrue now." Continuing, witness admitted that the Duke of Marlborough always called on Lady Colin during the usual visiting hours. He came twice, thrice, and sometimes five times weekly. Witness posted letters to the Duke of Marlborough every day, and sometimes twice a day. On occasions when she took letters to the Duke's residence she put them into the letter box, rang the bell and ran home. She had been instructed to do this on these occasions. Witness contradicted herself on many points. Nearly every one of Miss Baers admissions under cross-examination provoked excitement and a sensation in view of their damaging effect upon that side of the case which was largely built upon what she had previously stated in writing.

The cross-examination of Miss Baer was continued at great length. Being asked to confirm her statement that the Duke of Marlborough and Lady Colin sat together like a pair of lovers on a seat in the Paddington Railway station, witness simply said she was sure there was a seat on the platform. Being referred to her statement to the man servant O'Neil that Lady Colin passed every night at high Court with the Duke of Marlborough, witness denied that she had ever told O'Neil any such thing. She had simply told him "she thought so." Replying to an interrogatory by the Judge witness said she believed the Duke of Marlborough and the plaintiff were together nightly when their bedrooms adjoined at Leigh Court, during the Easter season of 1883, but witness had no reason to believe they were together at other times. The Judge asked why she had told the man servant O'Neil that they were together at night while at Leigh Court during the Christmas holidays of 1882, and witness answered, "That cannot be so." This contradiction at once caused a sensation. After recess Miss Baer did not at once appear on the witness stand. The Judge took his seat and wasted five minutes when he sent for the young woman. Miss Baer came in complaining of faintness. Resuming her place she said Lady Colin Campbell possessed a peculiar door key. It had a tongue on both ends and witness imagined that one end was for the lock on her own house door and the other for that of the Duke of Marlborough's residence. Witness and Lady Colin used preventive medicines and got sick every time she used them, but witness did not infer from this that her mistress was habitually doing wrong. Once while brushing Lady Colin's hair in her room at Leigh Court, some one tried the door of the room and then went away. When all were leaving Leigh Court the artist Fitzhenry spoke to her, saying that Lady Colin had not taken notice of him as she had of so many other gentlemen, but he should be able to make up for lost time, as he was going to Paris with her. When he said this Fitzhenry had a bouquet for Lady Colin. Witness denied having sent a letter to Lady Colin menacing her with exposure.

Here an adjournment was taken.

KNIGHTS WHO REFUSE TO STRIKE.

Rather Than Do So They Will Surrender Their Charters.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 1.—An important feature has entered into the controversy between the green-glass manufacturers and the blowers, over the abolition of the apprentice system. On Monday night meetings of the local assemblies of glass-blowers were held in Clayton, Millville, Salem, Woodbury, Williamstown and Glassboro, N.J., when it was decided that they would not strike as ordered by the Executive Board of District Assembly No. 149, Knights of Labor, but would surrender their charters rather than do so. These blowers are working with apprentices under a reduction in wages of 5 per cent., according to agreement made with manufacturers some weeks ago.

The charters of the six assemblies were sent to General-Secretary Litchman yesterday. It is stated that these assemblies purpose forming a new association. On the other hand, the officers of District Assembly 149 declare that these blowers, numbering between 300 and 600, will be ostracised and black-listed by all members of the league in good standing, and will not be allowed to work outside the limits of their own towns.

AN AURORA SCANDAL.

A Sunday School Young Man Betrays a Weak-Minded Girl.

The village of Aurora, Ont., on the Northern, is excited over a scandal, involving a young man named Thomas, a prominent Sunday School worker, and by occupation a moulder, and his alleged victim, the weak-minded daughter of Thomas Wilkinson, one of the best known residents of the place. Thomas is said to have betrayed the confidence reposed in him by the Wilkinson family, and as the result of his deceit the girl gave birth to a child a month ago. Proceedings were begun against Thomas, but the local Justice of the Peace did not deem the evidence sufficient to warrant his detention. Thomas subsequently removed to another village, and it is intended to again invoke the law for his punishment. A brother of the wronged girl recently left Toronto to assist his father in the prosecution of Thomas, and became involved in an altercation with one Andrews, an intimate friend of Thomas', wherein the latter was roughly handled. Wilkinson was arrested upon a warrant issued by the justice who had discharged his sister's betrayer, and was fined $15 and costs. The respectable residents of Aurora fail to understand the motives which induced the justice to overlook the damaging evidence against Thomas, and his issuance of a warrant for young Wilkinson's arrest instead of a summons for his attendance at Court. Constables are looking for Thomas, and his capture is deemed certain, in a few days, at most.

THE SECRET KNOWN.

"DOC" WILSON IS HIS SON, AS MANY SUSPECTED.

PROVIDENCE, R.I., Dec. 1.—Unable to bear the strain any longer, "Doc" Wilson this morning, broken down in health and weeping like a child, told the great secret which has existed between him and Philip L. Moen of Worcester for so many years. The story was told in the presence of four reputable citizens, who have furnished it to the press. "I am looked upon as a blackmailer," he said, "and those who believe I have been bleeding that old man hold me in as much contempt as a yellow dog. But I will stand it no longer. I am more pained against than gaining, and now the truth shall be known. My name is not Wilson nor am I the son of Jonas Wilson. My father is the man who is accusing me of blackmail, and my name is Levi Moen, the illegitimate son of P. L. Moen of Worcester." Mr. Wilson then went on to tell the history of his birth and the wrong done him by his father. His story is that he is a son of Moen's first wife and that he was born a few months after the marriage. Moen being a deacon and professedly high-toned Christian did not wish to face the scandal, so a bargain was made with one Jonas Wilson of Danielson, Conn., a stage driver, by which the babe was transferred to the latter's care and was brought up as a Wilson. The boy lived and toiled in the humble sphere to which he says, Moen consigned him, and it was not until he was a young man that he learned the secret of his birth. For that secret he was indebted to the religious remorse of his supposed father, Jonas Wilson, who told him the truth on his death bed. After Wilson died the young fellow set off for Worcester to meet his father face to face. Their first meeting, Wilson says, was exactly as has been described. He did meet Moen on that particular morning and after observing the signs of wealth and luxury that abounded he demanded of Moen some reparation for the wrong done to the one who should be the heir to all. Moen at first refused to acknowledge the lad, but the boy faced his millionaire parent defiantly and upbraided him for the wrong done his mother and himself. He said: "I will force you to acknowledge me and the world shall know you for what you are." Then "Doc" says the manufacturer, banker and Deacon became alarmed and gave him $1000. By appointment he met Moen the next day and consented to shield his unnatural father from shame. The father had in the meantime married again, after the death of "Doc's" mother, and had married into a family which would have scorned Moen had they known of the scandal. Then, according to Wilson's story, the Wilsons, who knew the secret of his parentage, seeing "Doc" had money and knowing it came from Moen, began to urge claims upon him. Their demands increased and to satisfy them he had to apply to Moen for money, and in that way much of the sums received from his father were spent. Wilson says these demands upon him grew so exorbitant that he was almost impoverished by them. The Engley suits were settled, he said at Moen's suggestion and with Moen's money, because the latter feared his relations to Wilson would come out some way in the trial. Wilson has letters which, he says, were written by Moen acknowledging the relationship and calling him "Dear son." These letters Wilson produced to-day. He says he can no longer endure the calumnies with which he is assailed, and that his confession of the secret is true in every respect.

WORCESTER, Mass., Dec. 1.—The announcement of Wilson's confession caused an immense sensation here. The millionaire was at prayer meeting, and coming out was shown the despatch. He said that Wilson's story was a lie and refused to be interviewed.

PROF. SMYTH'S HERESY.

The Accusation That he is Not an Orthodox and Consistent Calvinist he Considers to be too Indefinite.

BOSTON, Dec. 1.—Prof. Egbert C. Smyth, for himself and in behalf of his fellow-professors of Andover Theological Seminary, who are charged with heresy, has made an extended reply to the charges of the Board of Visitors. To the first charge that the professors hold beliefs and had taught theories not in harmony with the constitution of the seminary, etc., Professor Smyth submits that the charge is too indefinite to require an answer. The charge that the accused teachers are not men of sound and orthodox principles in divinity, etc., Professor Smyth declares is chiefly, if not wholly, irrelevant. "The professorship," he says, "which I hold is placed by its founder and the action of the constituted authorities, on the associate foundation. No professor on this foundation is required to be a man of sound and orthodox principles, according to the fundamental and distinguished doctrines of the Gospel of Christ, as summarily expressed in the Westminster Assembly's shorter catechism."

The third charge is that Egbert C. Smyth is not an orthodox and consistent Calvinist, but, on the other hand, believes and teaches, in several particulars, what is opposed to the seminary creed. Prof. Smyth replied in effect that the charge is indefinite.

Fourthly. The professors are charged with heterdoxy and with opposition to the creed of the seminary, and to the true intension of the founders, as expressed in the statutes. Professor Smyth denies that he has taught that the Bible is not the "only perfect rule of faith and practice." "The charge is that I hold, maintain and inculcate that Christ was not during his earthly life God and man. If this means that I hold that he was not two persons, I admit the truth of the allegation, and deny that I thus affirm anything contrary to the creed and statutes. If it means that I hold that he was not from his birth or incarnation, both God and man, I deny the accusation. I have nowhere denied man's free moral agency or the distinction between natural and moral ability. If by the phrase 'Trinity of Persons' is meant that the one absolute person of God exists as three persons, persons being used in each member of the sentence with the same meaning, I admit that I do not hold such a doctrine. If I did, I should be heterodox; not only as judged by the founders' creed, but by the creed of universal Christendom."

To the charge that he holds there is and will be probation after death for all men who do not decisively reject Christ during the earthly life, and that this should be emphasized, made influential and even central in systematic theology, he responds that he does not hold these views in this unqualified form. "God, as revealed in Christ," he says, "is to me central in theology." Further he says, "I am charged with disbelieving the trustworthiness of the scriptures as a religious guide; with holding humanitarian views of Christ; with denying the doctrine of the trinity; with disowning man's free agency, his universal sinfulness and guilt and exposure to the penalty of the law; with rejecting the doctrine of atonement by the sufferings and death of Christ; with teaching that salvation is not wholly of grace, and with breaking, in repeated instances, 'solemn promises.' Such accusations have no reality to me."

The visiting board will hear Prof. Smyth's formal reply on Dec. 22.

HAMILTON ITEMS.

A Dead Brakeman — Repudiated by the Labor Party—A Small Fire.

HAMILTON, Dec. 1.—This morning the remains of James Eustace, who was killed yesterday on the Canadian Pacific Railway while coupling cars at Perth, passed through on the early train to Lioma, Pa., where the deceased's parents live. Young Eustace was raised in Glanford township and was well known in this section.

The Iron Moulders' Union met last night and repudiated the action of Mr. John Burns in accepting the Conservative nomination while he was a delegate to and an officer of a convention to bring out a Labor candidate, Mr. Burns' explanation, offered at the meeting, was not considered satisfactory.

The jury in the case of Edward Brown, who died in the City Hospital on Monday, returned a verdict of death from natural causes. Deceased was a railway laborer from Minneapolis.

Mr. Thomas Tandy, formerly of this city but now of Detroit, has been promised the position of General Freight Agent of the Grand Trunk Railway at Montreal, in place of Mr. Pentland, who goes to Boston.

A fire occurred this morning at Campbell's sewer pipe manufactory, head of Jackson street. The firemen were called out, but their services were not required, as the employes had extinguished the flames which had broken out in the drying kiln.

The experts from this part to the United States during November amounted to $[illegible]. The shipments consisted of horses and cattle, skins, barley and vegetables.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1886.

NEGLECT OF DUTY OR BOSH.

The other day at Sarnia, Hon. Thomas White, Minister of the Interior, in one of the stirring tour speeches, said: "he had reason to know, as head of the Department of the Interior, that there are at this moment, on the banks of the Saskatchewan, emissaries of the Liberal party endeavoring to-day to stir up further trouble in that far-off country." Now, Mr. White is either indulging in clap-trap, or he is gravely neglecting his duty. If, as he says, as head of the Department, there is an insurrection on foot in the North-West, he should be at his post of duty taking measures to suppress it. We all know, as the Mail informs us, how the "cruel and callous neglect" of the Government precipitated the last rebellion, and how the Government refused to act at the time they had information and when a corporal's guard could have suppressed the rising, but preferred to neglect their duty till the insurrection grew to such proportions that it took an army and involved a cost of hundreds of lives and millions of money before order was restored. We all know how, on another memorable occasion, a minister had to be dragged from under the table, when the country was actually invaded by a foreign foe. Is Mr. White pursuing the same tactics now? Or is he talking bosh for electioneering purposes and to discredit the Liberals? If a minister of the Crown introduces such clap-trap in his speeches, how is the public to know that the other portions are entitled to any more respect? If Mr. White believed the Liberals are stirring up insurrection in the North-west, he would be at his post protecting the interests of the country. If he is making "political-exigencies" statements he should be ashamed of himself—though that is rather an extravagant expectation of a member of a cabinet, the record of whose members bears witness to the verity of the old copy-book head line—"Shame being lost, all virtue is lost."

AN EVENING'S EVIDENCE.

A CONSERVATIVE local business man was asked last evening: "How does the Local election contest affect your business?" "O I'm all right; I think it rather improves business. At election times, you know, people become liberal." Very true, and Liberal enough, too, to return the Liberal candidate on December 28th. This gentleman, though an all-wool, dyed-in-the-wool Conservative, gave a most effective answer to the puerile complaints of the party organs to the effect that the holding of the Ontario elections would destroy the holiday business. It is pretty certain that they will have an opposite effect. Every person who takes an active interest in politics, no matter what side he is on, is inclined to spend money freely—this disposition is unavoidably incident to the ardour of an election campaign. Money circulates freely, not as a bribery fund, but for the incidental expenses of a campaign. Halls are hired, horses are hired, and hundreds of persons get little odd jobs of necessary work for which they are paid. They earn money and they will spend it. Hotels have more guests and do more business, and they patronize the butcher and the baker, etc., more largely. Private persons entertain more, and they must buy more bread and blankets, and the house-wife must have new dresses. All tends to stimulate business. The objection, however, is hardly worth a moment's serious thought, but opponents of the Government insist on it on every occasion, and will continue to do so till polling day. They have such hard work to find a real ground of complaint against the Mowat Administration that one feels like allowing them to indulge their fancy and to draw on their imagination. On their way to certain defeat they may be allowed the luxury of grumbling a little, on the same principle that condemned criminals in England, were formerly allowed the comfort of the last pewter of beer on their way to Tyburn tree.

WHEN a great political exhibition strikes the town for the town's amusement every citizen should help to contribute to its success. To this end the following suggestion for mottoes to adorn the Opera House are thrown out.—"These Hands are Clean;" "Lend as Another Ten Thousand." Political Exigencies Justify White Lies," "No Limit to Timber Limits (Ontario) for Government Supporters;" "Mowat Must Go;" (this motto is somewhat old, but it's a very fine sentiment, though rather a failure as a prophecy); "Deal Gently with the Boodlers." "Prohibition is a great Moral Question; not one of Practical Politics." "Temperance is too Sacred a thing to be made the Football of Partisan Politics." These two last mottoes are Prof. Foster's, the prohibition minister of the Cabinet, who said at Sarnia that he didn't know when prohibition would come, and they very properly close the list—the curtain ing down on the farce, and this is a rattling farce composed by the editor of the Mail.

Kind words are cheaper, for often ones cost many a pang.

SCRIPTURE READINGS IN SCHOOLS.

An considerable capital is sought to be made out of the "Scripture Readings for High and Public Schools," authorized by the Ontario Education Department, the following addressed to the public by Rev. Dr. CAVEN, principal of Knox (Presbyterian) College, Toronto, will be read with interest:

The Minister of Education is attacked from various quarters in regard to the book of "Scripture Readings" for use in the Public schools. This attack seems to me quite groundless, and such as no exigencies of party welfare can justify. I am certainly not anxious intervene in the political conflict, but I think is my duty to make a brief statement regarding these readings.

The Education Department in authorizing selections of Scripture acted in conformity with representations made to the Department by the churches of Ontario and by the Provincial Teachers' Association. A large deputation of the Church of England and of the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches submitted to the Attorney-General a resolution of which the following is part: "That this conference pledges itself to press upon the Attorney-General the making of the reading of the Holy Scriptures by the children and teacher . . . an obligatory exercise at the opening of the Public Schools of Ontario, the passages of Holy Scripture to be read each day, to be prescribed by the Department in conformity with the recommendations of the committee of this Conference, or some other representative of the various churches of Ontario, etc." The teachers resolved:—"That the reading of selected portions of Scripture was part of the regular daily exercises of the school would be a material aid to teachers in the discharge of their duties in respect to moral training," and "that the Education Department do make a suitable selection of Scripture readings for the schools under its charge." A selection of readings was accordingly made, and before receiving authorization was submitted to a large joint committee of the Churches, each member of the committee having had a copy sent to him for examination in advance. When the committee met its first action was to approve of the principle of a book of Scripture readings; afterwards free and general expressions of opinion regarding the proposed selection took place, and a sub-committee, representing the several Churches, was appointed to examine the selections carefully in detail. The writer of this letter, while not a member of the sub-committee, was present at the meeting of the general committee and knows what was done. The Minister in issuing this maligned book was but giving effect to the strongly expressed wishes of the Churches and the teachers. I am not here arguing for the use of selections in preference to the use of the entire Bible, but stating the circumstances under which this selection received approval; and it will thus be seen how little ground there is for accusing the Department of proceedings in opposition to, or in ignorance of, the opinion of the Churches.

The regulations approved in 1884 do not require "the reading of the Holy Scriptures" by the children and teachers, which I think the committee of the Churches desired, and which seems to me decidedly preferable to reading by the teachers alone; and to this extent effect has not been given to the views of the Church Committee; but in regard to the principle of selections, and the main features of this selection, the Minister is sustained by the representatives of the Congregational, Methodist, Episcopal, and Presbyterian Churches.

It is scarcely necessary, therefore, to say that the Scripture Readings were not selected by Archbishop Lynch, nor under his direction. The draft seems to have been sent to him in common with all the gentlemen composing this large committee above referred to, and the Archbishop suggested the harmless if unnecessary, change of "which" into "who" in the Lord's Prayer; further than this the hand of the Archbishop was not applied.

Have those who assert that selections acceptable to the Church of Rome have been made ever examined the book? Have they any conception of the consequences of what they are saying? Are they prepared to admit that selections embracing a considerable part of both Testaments, and regarded, presumably, by the able men who gave the final revision as exhibiting fairly the teachings of the Bible, are an inadequate basis for Protestantism? If the Archbishop of Toronto entirely approves of the selections I am delighted to hear it; for in them I can find every doctrine of my faith distinctly exhibited.

It was further alleged, if my memory serves me, that selections were made which should not give offence to Agnostics; but it will hardly be expected that I should refute this absurd proposition.

An able journal in this city, which cannot be suspected of undue partiality towards the Minister, was pleased to say, "The Minister of Education is to be congratulated upon having adopted for use in the Common Schools a series of readings from the Old and New Testaments, together with a brief form of prayer. . The work has been prepared with the greatest care, and cannot fail to commend itself to parents."

My object in writing this letter, as already said, is not to defend selections of Scripture for use in schools, nor to endorse in every particular the compilation in question, but to express my sincere condemnation of all attempts to discredit Mr. Ross by misrepresenting facts which are well known to many ministers and laymen in all the Churches. I would equally bear testimony on behalf of the opponents of the Ontario Government should their action have been in question. No Government can complain of fair and honest criticism, however searching; but when public men strive to do right, and to follow the best sentiment of the community in its most authentic expression (as Mr. Ross has done in the matter of this book), they are entitled, I think, to expect that those who have prompted their action, and as it were, pushed them forward, shall not without emphatic protest allow that action to become the ground of party attack.

R. W. MUNCASTER.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

He addressed himself gently and respectfully to his sister-in-law. She refused to hear him. The indignation which Mrs. Presty had roused in her made no allowances, and was blind to all sense of right.

"Don't trouble yourself to account for your silence," she said most unjustly. "You were listening to my mother without a word of remonstrance when I came into the room. You are concerned in this vile slander, too."

Randal considerately refrained from provoking her by attempting to defend himself, while she was incapable of understanding him. "You will be sorry when you find that you have misjudged me," he said, and sighed and left her.

She dropped into a chair. If there was any one distinct thought in her at that moment it was the thought of her husband. She was eager to see him; she longed to say to him: "My love, I don't believe a word of it!" He was not in the garden when she returned for the parasol, and Sydney was not in the garden. Wondering what had become of her father and her governess Kitty had asked the nursemaid to look for them. What had happened since? Where had they been found? After some hesitation Mrs. Linley sent for the nursemaid. She felt the strongest reluctance, when the girl appeared, to approach the very inquiries which she was interested in making.

"Have you found Mr. Linley?" she said—with an effort.

"Yes, ma'am."

"Where did you find him?"

"In the shrubbery."

"Did your master say anything?"

"I slipped away, ma'am, before he saw me."

"Why?"

"Miss Westerfield was in the shrubbery with my master. I might have been mistaken——" The girl paused and looked confused.

Mrs. Linley tried to tell her to go on. The words were in her mind, but the capacity of giving expression to them failed her. She impatiently made a sign. The sign was understood.

"I might have been mistaken," the maid repeated—"but I thought Miss Westerfield was crying."

Having replied in those terms she seemed to be anxious to get away. The parasol caught her eye. "Miss Kitty wants this," she said, "and wonders why you have not gone back to her in the garden. May I take the parasol?"

"Take it!"

The tone of the mistress' voice was completely changed. The servant looked at her with vague misgivings. "Are you not well, ma'am?"

"Quite well."

The servant withdrew.

Mrs. Linley's chair happened to be near one of the windows which commanded a view of the drive leading to the main entrance of the house. A carriage had just arrived, bringing holiday travelers to visit that part of Mount Morven which was open to strangers. She watched them as they got out, talking and laughing and looking about them. Still shrinking instinctively from the first doubt of Herbert that had ever entered her mind, she found a refuge from herself in watching the ordinary events of the day. One by one the tourists disappeared under the portico of the front door. The empty carriage was driven away next, to water the horses at the village inn. Solitude was all she could see from the window; silence, horrible silence, surrounded her out of doors and in. The thoughts from which she recoiled forced their way back into her mind; the narrative of the nursemaid's discovery became a burden on her memory once more. She considered the circumstances. In spite of herself, she considered the circumstances again. Her husband and Sydney Westerfield together in the shrubbery—and Sydney crying. Had Mrs. Presty's abominable suspicion of them reached their ears? or—No! that second possibility might be estimated at its right value by other women; not by Herbert Linley's wife.

She snatched up the newspaper and fixed her eyes on it in the hope of fixing her mind on it next. Obstinately, desperately, she read without knowing what she was reading. The lines of print were beginning to mingle and grow dim when she was startled by the sudden opening of the door. She looked round.

Her husband entered the room.

XIV.

Linley advanced a few steps—and stopped. His wife, hurrying eagerly to meet him, checked herself. It might have been distrust, or it might have been unreasoning fear—she hesitated on the point of approaching him.

"I have something to say, Catherine, which I am afraid will distress you."

His voice faltered, his eyes rested on her—then looked away again. He said no more. He had spoken a few commonplace words, and yet he had said enough. She saw the truth in his eyes, heard the truth in his voice. A fit of trembling seized her. Linley stepped forward, in the fear that she might fall. She instantly controlled herself, and signed to him to keep back. "Don't touch me!" she said. "You come from Miss Westerfield?"

That reproach roused him.

"I own that I come from Miss Westerfield," he answered. "She addresses a request to you through me."

"I refuse to grant it."

"Hear it first."

"No!"

"Hear it—in your own interest. Will you permit her to leave the house, never to return again? While she is still innocent——"

His wife eyed him with a look of unutterable contempt. He submitted to it, but not in silence.

"A man does'nt lie, Catherine, who makes such a confession as I am making now. Miss Westerfield offers the one atonement in her power while she is still innocent of having wronged you—except in thought."

"Is that all?" Mrs. Linley asked.

"It rests with you," he replied, "to say if there is any other sacrifice of herself which may be more acceptable to you."

"Let me understand first what the sacrifice means. Does she make any conditions?"

"She has positively forbidden me to make conditions."

"And goes out into the world helpless and friendless?"

"Yes."

Even under the terrible trial that wrung her, the nobility of the woman's nature spoke in her next words.

"Give me time to think of what you have said," she replied. "I have had a happy life. I am not used to either or I am suffering now." In the minute that followed her changing color revealed a struggle with her sent.

"Miss Westerfield is innocent of having wronged me, except in thought," Mrs. Linley resumed. "She might have deceived me—she has not deceived me. I owe it to her to remember that. She shall go, but not helpless and not friendless."

Her husband forgot the restraints he had imposed on himself.

"Is there another woman in the world like you?" he exclaimed.

"Many other women," she answered firmly. "A vulgar termagant, feeling a sense of injury, finds relief in an outburst of jealousy and a furious quarrel. A woman in my position, who respects herself, restrains herself. I try to remember what I owe to others as well as what they owe to me."

She approached the writing table and took up a pen.

Feeling his position acutely, Linley had abstained from again declaring admiration of her generosity. Until he had deserved to be forgiven, he had forfeited the right to express an opinion on her conduct. She misinterpreted his silence. As she understood it, he appreciated an act of self-sacrifice on Miss Westerfield's side—but he had no word of encouragement for an act of self-sacrifice on his wife's side. She threw down the pen, with the first outbreak of anger that had escaped her yet.

"You have spoken for the governess," she said to him. "I haven't heard yet, sir, what you have to say for yourself. Is it you who tempted her? You know how gratefully she feels toward you—have you perverted her gratitude and led her blindfold to love? Cruel, cruel, cruel! Defend yourself, if you can."

He made no reply.

"Is it not worth your while to defend yourself?" she burst out, passionately. "Your silence is an insult!"

"My silence is a confession," he answered, sadly. "I have as much need of your mercy as she has—and more."

Something in the tone of his voice reminded her of past days—the days of perfect love and perfect confidence, when she had been the one woman in the world to him. Dearly treasured remembrances of her married life filled her heart with tenderness, and dimmed with tears the angry light that had risen in her eyes. There was no pride, no anger, in his wife when she spoke to him now.

"Oh! my husband, has she taken your love from me?"

"Judge for yourself, Catherine, if there is no proof of my love for you in what I have resisted—and no remembrance of all that I owe to you in what I have confessed."

She ventured a little nearer to him. "Can I believe you?"

"Put me to the test."

She instantly took him at his word. "When Miss Westerfield has left us, promise not to see her again."

"I promise."

"And not even to write to her."

"I promise."

She went back to the writing-table. "My heart is easier," she said, simply. "I can be merciful to her now."

A Wonderful Shot.

The man who put ten bullets in succession, inside the circumference of a Milwaukee girl's finger ring, at fifteen paces, was a pretty good shot, but he wasn't half so wise as the billious man who put ten of "Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" into his system to-day, and on the sixth walked ten miles "just because he felt so well." If your blood is out of order, if you feel low-spirited and "blue," you will find these Little Liver Pills just what you need. 6dw48

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 25th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in York State, costing me $50. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. S. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child born; and 95 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. A Presentation.

It becoming known that Miss Johnston, a popular young lady teacher in the Central School, was about to leave the profession, her fellow teachers and pupils decided to afford her some tangible proof of their esteem and regard. Accordingly, Tuesday afternoon after school had been dismissed, the teachers and pupils assembled in one of the rooms, and a brief address was read to Miss Johnston, expressing deep regret and sorrow that she was about to sever her connection with the school, in which for the past six years she had been successfully engaged as a teacher. The reading of the address was accompanied by the presentation of a handsome gold ring, with coral setting. The address was read by Master Stone, son of E. B. Stone, Esq., and was signed on behalf of the teachers and pupils of the Peterborough Public Schools by Wm. Smith, P. P. P. S., May A. Nicholls, Ralph Stone and Annie Hall. Miss Johnston replied most feelingly, thanking them sincerely for the token of friendship and expression of love towards her.

Political Pilgrims' Progress.

Sir John Macdonald, Premier of Canada, Arrives in Peterborough—A Cold Day and a Rather Cool Reception.

The 11.45 Grand Trunk train this morning had attached to its rear a special car containing Sir John Macdonald and his caste for the political performances at the Opera House this afternoon and evening. As the train rolled into the station the large crowd assembled was in a state of tip-toe anxiety to catch a glimpse of the veteran politician, who, on stepping out upon the platform, was greeted by cheers—not so vigorous, though, as to give rise to any fears that the people might rupture their bronchial tubes. The band of the 57th Battalion was on hand, and headed the procession which escorted Sir. John and his colleagues to the Oriental hotel. The procession consisted of three or four cabs and a number of "Junior" conservatives on foot. George St. was gaily decorated in honor of the occasion, and though the street was pretty well lined with spectators, the chill north wind had evidently cooled their ardour, and consequently the enthusiasm evinced was not very marked. Arrived at the hotel, a chance was given a few admirers of Sir John to indulge in a little hero-worship before the wants of the inner man were supplied. This afternoon's meeting in the Opera house was largely attended, large numbers having to stand up throughout. It is expected the attendance at the meeting to-night will be even larger.

Slippery Weather.

Some Reasonable Hints—How to do an Awkward Act Gracefully.

Quite a number of people who have no intention of doing anything of the kind have been sitting down on the sidewalks of Peterborough since frost set in, and it occurred to the writer, who witnessed several individuals so seat themselves in a hurried and undignified manner, that a hint as to the advantage of sitting down gracefully and easily would not be inappropriate at the present season of the year. It is worth remarking in the first place that the sidewalk is not at all a good thing to sit on. A chair is much more comfortable and more in accordance with Canadian customs; but if people will sit on the sidewalk, let them do it calmly and leisurely; it only takes a second or two longer and looks so much better. In a lady this is particularly desirable, though of the ladies who sat on the sidewalk it is doubtful if even one of them so much as reflected on the subject. It does not matter so much in a man—he is an ungraceful creature, anyhow; but the man, when he has sat down on the sidewalk, as many have taken the opportunity of doing, certainly should not spring up again with an ungainly sprawl, and a very red face, as if he had done something to be ashamed of. The lady, as a rule, is much more consistent. Having once taken her seat on the sidewalk, she retains it until she has thoroughly inspected the scenery of which it affords a view, and then rises composedly, if not gracefully, and pursues the somewhat slippery tenor of her way. The practice of sitting on the sidewalk, however, is one to be strongly condemned. It has not yet taken a very strong hold upon the people of Peterborough, and prompt action on the part of the proper authorities may have the effect of nipping it in the bud.

Police Court.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 1st.

J. J. Daly and H. Croft admitted a first violation of the Scott Act and were each fined $50 and costs. F. J. Daly contested the charge of a second violation of the Scott Act, but was convicted and fined $100 and costs. E. B. Edwards for prosecution; W. H. Moore for defence.

THURSDAY, DEC. 2.

Clark Stone charged John Currant with the theft of $83 on Tuesday night. The circumstances of the case are as follows:—Tuesday afternoon Stone drove to town from Burleigh, where he was working, and after paying a few bills had $83 left. That night he gave Currant, whom he had met at Burleigh, a ride as far as Lakefield, where they put up for the night at Dion's hotel, but sleeping in the same bed. The next morning his money was gone. He did not directly accuse Currant of the crime, but Wednesday afternoon returned to town and swore out a warrant for his arrest. Currant was found at the Grand Central hotel with a new valise filled with new clothing, and on being searched, $26 in bills was found in the toe of his boot and about $14 in his pockets. Stone identified the bills as being his, as they were all on the Bank of Ontario. The prisoner was remanded till to-morrow. R. E. Wood, C.C.A., for prosecution; J. O'Meara for prisoner.

Agitation in the world of homœpathic medicine has been its very soul of progress, as in politics and religion—the difficulties of opinion and the individuality of men have been parent to the disagreements by which the standard of these bodies have been elevated. So with most of our famous preparations—foremost in illustration of which truth stands the world-famous remedy to general debility and languor "Quinine Wine"—and which, when obtainable in its genuine strength, is a miraculous creator of appetite, vitality and stimulant, to the general fertility of the system, Quinine Wine, and its improvement, has, from the first discovery of the great virtues of Quinine as a medical agent, been one of the most thoroughly discussed remedies ever offered to the public. It is one of the great tonics and natural life-giving stimulants which the medical profession have been compelled to recognise and prescribe. Messrs. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto, have given to the preparation of their pure Quinine Wine the great care due to its importance, and the standard excellence of the article which they offer to the public comes into the market purged of all the defects which skillful observation and scientific opinion has pointed out in the less perfect preparations of the past. w19

Lines of Thanks to Mr. Bigelegham.

For the freewill gift he presented to me in the form of a large and beautifully finished writing desk as a token of his appreciation of my humble productions which has appeared so frequently in the papers in Peterborough.

You you made it, your man laid it
On my floor, of charges free;
Many knows it, your act shows it—
The generous heart possessed by thee.

Quite amazing, I stood gazing
At its beauty, style and size,
While in fact, sir, your kind act, sir,
Gave both pleasure and surprise.

True and clear, sir, forty years, sir,
Whither writing truth or fable
All my wrestling and tackling
Was done on my kitchen table.

You have changed it, well arranged it,
That my pen may run more free;
Kind and witty, you showed pity,
And sent this nice desk to me.

When I wrote, sir, I never thought, sir,
My weak lines had power or art,
Nor so much, sir, as to touch, sir,
The sponge of your generous heart.

Neighbors view it while I use it,
And they one and all agree,
In one mind, sir, think you kind, sir,
To present that desk to me.

I sit before it, I adore it,
And the fire work I shall do;
With delight, sir, I shall write, sir,
These few lines of thanks to you.

To be truthful, it is useful
All my papers to contain.
It charms and fires me and inspires me,
Gives me flight to loftier strains.

I must tell you, 'tis not its value,
Sir, whatever that might be,
Love of the donor, and the honour,
Gives its precious worth to me.

Wood worms may bore it, fire devour it,
Time and use the varnish wear,
If it lasts, sir till my life's past, sir,
I will leave it to my heir.

I won't bespatter you, no, nor flatter you,
I possess no blarneying art,
As a friend I rank you, and I thank you
From the bottom of my heart.

WILLIAM TELFORD.

Smith, November 19th, 1886.

They're Jolly Good Fellows.

Captain Langford and Lieutenant Lee "Set 'em Up" for the Boys of No. 2 Company, 57th Battalion—Toasts and Speeches.

The members of No. 2 Company assembled at the drill shed at 8.30 last night, and at the invitation of Captain Langford and Lieutenant Lee, marched in a body to J. F. Daly's restaurant, where a table loaded with edibles and delicacies awaited their arrival. The following gentlemen assembled around the festive board:

Colonel J. Z. Rogers, Quartermaster-Sergeant Millar, Captain Langford, Lieutenant Lee, Sergeants W. Robinson, Distos and Clegg; Privates W. F. Green, H. Dawson, E. Dawson, G. Dawson, A. H. Turner, A. E. Thompson, A. Turner, A. E. Scott, W. Metherall, K. Kincaid, D. Armstrong, J. P. Armstrong, F. Metherall, A. Metherall, C. Hopwood, E. H. Carter, T. York, J. Tucker, J. Brook, R. Henderson, J. Connal, W. Greer, J. Turner, J. Craig, R. A. Gilleapie, M. Lyle, F. Cooney and Bugler Millar.

After supper was disposed of, Captain Langford rose and proposed a toast to the Queen, which was heartily drunk by the volunteers, who sang the National Anthem with vigor. This was followed by a quartette, Messrs. E. Dawson, W. Green, G. Dawson and H. Dawson, in "The Buccaneer's Bride." It was nicely rendered and deservedly applauded.

"Lieut. Lee in proposing "Our guests—Col. Rogers and Quartermaster-Sergt. Millar," spoke feelingly of the long services of the two officers in connection with the Battalion. The men could not wish for better officers. The toast was drunk right royally.

Col. Rogers replied thanking them for the hearty manner in which they had drunk his health. He was better at drilling than speaking. But if the companies kept good fellowship with one another, as occasions like this would tend to create, the 57th would always be a first class Battalion. Col. Rogers sat down amidst applause.

Quartermaster-Sergt. Millar said he had always taken a great interest in No. 2 Company. When the Company had done guard duty on the streets of Peterborough in 1866 and at the border near Buffalo he was with them. But the only old member now in the Company was Capt. Langford. He could say to the present members of No. 2 that the No. 2 Company had always been No. 1. (Applause). He still felt that he was a member of No. 2, and he had no doubt, judging from the faces around the board, that No. 2 has the material for a company second to none in the Dominion. He thanked them for the kind manner in which they drank off the toast, and hoped it would not be the last occasion of the kind. When they went to camp he in turn would be most happy to dish up the rations.

After a chorus by the Company, Sergt. Dixon proposed "Our Captain and Lieutenant."

Captain Langford responded by stating that he had belonged to the Company a great many years, having joined it when the late Col. Kennedy was captain. The old Col. was very particular about his company, and all his men had to reach a certain mark on the wall before they could become members. When he (the speaker) joined he did not quite touch the mark, but by wearing a chum's high-heeled boots he managed it, and became a member. (Laughter). That was 22 years ago. He was proud of being Captain of the company. He had held every position in the company, advancing by degrees, spending about three years in each office. They had a good company under Col. Kennedy, but not better than they have now. (Applause). He resumed his seat after expressing thanks.

Lieut. Lee said his first experience in soldiering was in '67, when he was with Col. Wolseley, at Thorold. He was very young at the time, and his experience was rather bitter. Before he got his commission he was Quarter-Master Sergt., and then paymaster's clerk. He entered the school in '71, and succeeded in getting his certificate from the old 60th Royal Rifles. Two or three years afterwards he got a position in No. 1 Company, and finally to the office he held at present, which was the best position he had ever held, and hoped the company would always be as good as it is now. After thanking the company for their hearty approval he resumed his seat.

Lieut. Lee proposed a toast to "The Ladies, God bless them," and coupled the names of E. Henderson, E. Dawson, A. H. Turner, A. E. Thompson and A. E. Scott, who each spoke briefly but feelingly on the subject, declaring they could drink from a tumbler to a barrel full on that toast, according to their individual capacities.

"The Press," proposed by Captain Langford, was responded to by the two pencil-pushers representing Peterborough's afternoon papers.

After a toast to "No. 2," and a chorus by the company, toasts were proposed to the "Army and Navy," by Sergeant Robinson; and to "Our Host and Hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Daly," by Captain Langford, both of which were heartily drunk.

The assembly broke up after singing the National Anthem. The boys desire to express their thanks to mine host Daly for the cigars. Three hearty cheers, vigorous enough to "wake the echoes of the night," were given for the Queen, the Captain and Lieutenant, and mine host Daly by the boys before dispersing.

Captain Langford and Lieutenant Lee have the sincerest thanks, individually, from No. 2 Company for the liberal entertainment provided. "May they live long and die happy" was the out-spoken opinion of every red-coat, and the EXAMINER endorses the sentiment most heartily.

Now is the time to buy your heavy overstockings. The place to find the cheapest thing is at the Golden Lion. R. FAIR.

Have You Thought About It?

Pain is one of the sure things of life, and it becomes then a most important question to have at hand the quickest and most efficient remedy. Polson's Nerviline cannot fail to cure cramps, toothache, neuralgia, headache and all pain, internal or external. Nerviline is the most perfect combination ever offered to the public for the relief of pain. It will not cost you much to try it, for you can buy at any drug store for 10 cents a trial bottle, which will convince you of its mighty pain relieving power. 6dw48

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41

Will people pay rent when houses and lots can be purchased on such easy terms as are offered by the undersigned. Come and inspect our work and see for yourselves how we construct our houses. Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. I am offering good building lots, and will build solid brick houses, nine-inch walls, strapped and lathed, two stories, for less money than you can buy frame or veneered buildings. We cordially invite those who anticipate renting or buying to inspect our work and prove for themselves that our houses are not merely built to sell. Every house I've sold gives first-class satisfaction, and I am determined that every house I build shall be a standing testimony to honest building. FRIDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1886.

A TERRIBLE DAY ON THE LAKES.

Fears For Nearly One Hundred Vessels Bound For Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Yesterday was a terrible day on the lakes. The temperature fell to nearly zero. All day long the northwest wind bowled at the rate of forty miles an hour, and at frequent intervals attained a velocity of sixty miles an hour. All vessels that reached port during the day were covered with ice, and sailors suffered severely from the cold. Outside the sea was running very high, but by keeping the weather shore close aboard vessels that were on this side of the lake fetched port without much difficulty. Many vessels overdue here did not arrive, and much anxiety is felt for the safety of all that were caught in the blow on the lee shore. At least fifty vessels were exposed to the gale on Lake Michigan, and almost as many more are known to be on the other lakes. Following is a partial list of the fleet that is headed for Chicago: Steamers—R. J. Hackett and consorts, Iron Duke and consort, Alaska and consort, J. W. Westcott, D. C. Whitney, B. W. Arnold, Lehigh, James Pickands, Conestoga, Montana, Australasia, Cormorant, Fred Mercur, Avon, Syracuse, Boston, Starucca, Richard Winslow, Escanaba, Hattie B. Pierce, Champlain, and schooners Felicitous, Charles Marshall, F. H. Mead, C. C. Trowbridge, A. J. Dewey, M. L. Higgie, Mary D. Ayer, A. J. Moyer, Lake Forrest, John Raber, Cascade, Mediator, W. O. Goodman, Tempest, Cuyahoga, Carrion, William Loutit, Ray S. Farr, Waukesha, Scotia, Granger, Mineral State, Emma C. Hutchinson, Michigan and E. A. Nicholson. The schooner A. J. Dewey broke away from the tug Wright Sunday night, and was last seen Monday morning off Big Point Au Sable. The Tioga left here for Buffalo Tuesday night, but there were no departures yesterday. The Susquehana, Oceanica and Albany are expected to start this morning. The H. E. Packer and Clyde were unable to secure grain cargoes for Buffalo, and were ordered into winter quarters here.

BUFFALO, Dec. 2.—The steamer Nashua arrived this morning, and the captain reported dropping her tow—the Potomac, Annie Vought and Parsons—when above Long Point. Tugs were sent after them, and shortly before noon the Potomac was safely brought in. Another one is lying at anchor outside of the breakwater waiting for the assistance of tugs, and another one is about five miles from port, being towed down by a tug. They are in no danger and will probably be brought in safely this afternoon. A heavy sea is running, making it next to impossible for even tugs to make headway against it. It was reported that the Potomac lost part of her deck load. All of the vessels are lumber laden. S. L. Watson is their owner.

ERASTUS WIMAN'S GUEST.

A Visitor From London Entertained at the Canadian Club.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Mr. Thomas A. Richardson of London, England, well known to Canadian buyers in the English market, was entertained last night at the Canadian Club by the President of the club, Mr. Wiman. A number of prominent Canadians were present. Mr. Richardson's visit to this country is in connection with the extension of a mercantile agency, the business of which has been extended throughout the United States and Canada with such success, and which Mr. Richardson in London specially represents.

A Jury to Settle Their Sanity.

BUFFALO, Dec. 2.—What promises to be an extremely interesting insanity suit will be tried in the Erie County Circuit Court before a jury after all the preliminaries have been gone through. At Brooklyn last week Justice Cullen made three orders in the cases of Charles O. Berard, who is now confined in the State Asylum for the Insane at Stockton, and his sisters, Katharine A. J. Berard and Mary Julia C. Berard, who are sojourning at Sister Rosalind's retreat for unbalanced persons in this city. Justice Cullen directed that the question of their sanity should be settled by jury trial so that a committee of their estates could be appointed, for their father died recently, leaving them some property. The two girls are about 25 years old and are twins. The cause of their affliction was overstudy, and their cases are very mild ones.

Louisiana Skylocks.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 2.—The outrages in West Carroll parish turn out to have been the result of an uprising of the farmers against the Shylock propensities of the Witkowski family, who made their wealth by foreclosing mortgages on crops. The Government has offered a reward of $1000 for the arrest of the murderer of John McKay and his cook. McKay was Witkowski's bookkeeper. Witkowski has offered another $1000.

The Fate of Two Truant Boys.

READING, Pa., Dec. 2.—George Seaman and James Seiders, aged 13 and 14 years respectively, absented themselves from school yesterday and being afraid of punishment from their parents did not go home. The couple collected all the small change they could muster and purchased tickets for Philadelphia. They boarded a train and [illegible]

THE CONFIDENTIAL CLERK.

He Takes His Superiors and $200,000 of His Employer's Money.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—The Inter-Ocean says that the most sensational as well as the heaviest defalcation which has taken place in Chicago in many years has just been brought to light. Minor T. Ames, the millionaire coal merchant, is the victim, and Theodore S. Mize, his confidential bookkeeper and cashier, and Secretary of the Chicago and Minonk Coal and Coke Company, is the perpetrator of the robbery that is estimated at $150,000 and may exceed that amount.

From his position of bookkeeper, cashier, confidential clerk and secretary of the coal company, Mize had absolute control of the moneys of the company, and the private account of Mr. Ames.

Mize is one of the best known men in local business circles, having a very extensive acquaintance, and has also been one of the most popular men of his set. He was a member of the Union Veteran Club and the Apollo Club, being a singer of much ability. Mize is handsome, stylish and talented, but in this case it is the old story: Wine, women and ruin. His employer, Mr. Ames, had known him from infancy, being an old friend of the young man's father, Edward Mize, formerly of Akron, Ohio, but now living in this city.

Theodore had been in the employ of Mr. Ames since 1872. Within a couple of years from the time he entered Mr. Ames' employ he began a systematic course of robbery, covering up his dishonesty by false entries upon the books, and by other schemes. At first his stealings were comparatively small, but he soon began operations on a more extensive scale, and of late years, it is rumored, his peculations frequently reached $1000 in a single month. About a week ago Mr. Ames discovered that something was wrong with the money accounts.

A brief investigation convinced him that large sums were missing. It is said he then taxed Mize with dishonesty, and declared he would engage experts to go over the books. Mize broke down and confessed that he was guilty and had been robbing his employer for many years. He begged for mercy and promised restitution, so far as it lay in his power.

Since then all his property which could be found, including a fine house on Ellis-avenue, has been turned over to Mr. Ames. Mize could not be found last night, but he is believed to be stopping for the present with his father. Besides the extravagant manner in which he and his wife lived, it is asserted that Mize at various times supported three other women on whom he lavished money with a generous hand.

NATURAL GAS IN BUFFALO.

It Reaches Forty-Seven Miles Through the Mains in Thirty Minutes.

BUFFALO, Dec. 2.—Natural gas reached Buffalo late yesterday afternoon, and came in such force as to be an assured success so far as supply is concerned. In spite of the driving snow-storm there was quite a gathering of people at the point on the Atlas Refinery property on Elk-street where the test was to be made. The last coupling was made near North Collins yesterday afternoon, and it was 6.40 p.m. when the gas supply was turned on. It took about thirty minutes for it to reach Buffalo, heralded by a stream of sticks, stones and dirt and chips of iron blown out by the gas. A flame was applied with an impromptu torch and there was a loud report, and a jet of flame eighty feet long shot out at an angle of forty-five degrees, melting the ice and snow on the creek's banks, and after a time setting fire to the rapidly-dried grass. The pressure of air in the mains put out the flame once or twice, but finally the pipe was clear, and the flame burned steadily. At 9 o'clock the gate at Salamanca was closed. The test was perfectly satisfactory. To-day the gas is to be turned into the city mains, and probably tests will be made at the main station on Franklin-street near the Terrace, and near the Waterworks. The gas came from Salamanca last night—forty-seven miles—in thirty minutes, or ninety-four miles an hour.

A WOMAN'S PERJURY.

Evidence Given in a Murder Trial Retracted as False.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 2.—The second trial of John W. Sauer, for the murder of his wife, whom he shot for a burglar, as he maintains, was begun yesterday, but was unexpectedly postponed until the next term of court, owing to affidavits filed by the prosecution stating that an important witness—Emma Bell—was in Chicago at the bedside of her sick father. The defence introduced an affidavit from Emma Bell confessing that she had committed perjury at the former trial, in which Sauer was convicted of murder in the second degree. She swore that on Dec. 20, 1885, she was approached by a man representing himself as agent for Joseph D. Iler, who is a relative of the dead woman, and that this man offered her $100 to testify against Sauer. This she did. She now regrets it and says she never received the money. The affidavit is supported by others, from persons to whom she expressed regret at having committed perjury.

PLOT TO BURN A CITY.

The Incendiary Caught in the Act and Promptly Shot to Death.

TEMPLE, Tex., Dec. 2.—Tuesday afternoon a man named Carton informed the city officials of the existence of a plot to burn the city. A special force was summoned and the city was put under the closest watch. At 7.30 the incendiaries appeared and poured oil on the wall of Williams' saloon, in the rear, and applied a match. When the flames leaped up special officer McMahon demanded the surrender of James Nash, the man who started the fire. Nash fled and McMahon shot and killed him. The other conspirators escaped.

THE POINT AU SABLE TRAGEDY.

The Displaying of the Value Signals to be Investigated.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The report of the loss of the captain and two surfmen of the life-saving crew at the Point au Sable, (Mich.) station, will lead to a thorough investigation and possibly to an act of Congress that will deal severely with vessel captains who imperil the lives of life-saving crews by false signals. There is no law to prevent the display of false signals of distress. It has never been thought for a moment that such a law could by any possibility be needed.

A Suit by Molson's Bank.

BUFFALO, Dec. 2.—The suit of Molson's Bank of Canada against the McGraw estate of Ithaca, represented by Judge Boardman, executor, is on trial before Hon. John M. Camp, referee, at the office of Swift, Hawkins & Gibbs. The plaintiff's attorneys are McGee and McGibbon, assisted by Swift, Hawkins & Gibbs, and the defendant's attorneys are Judge Countryman of Albany, and Hon. Samuel Holliday of Ithaca. The suit is brought to recover $160,000, for which the plaintiff alleges the defendant was liable as stockholder in a lumber company that owed the bank.

A Jailer Gives up a Prisoner to a Mob.

ARKANSAS CITY, Ark., Dec. 2.—Early yesterday morning a party of masked men surrounded the jail at Monticello and demanded from the jailer the surrender of Buck Hunter (colored), who was charged with assaulting with intent to kill two respectable citizens of that county. Finding resistance useless the jailer surrendered the keys and the mob seized Hunter, placed a rope around his neck and led him into the suburbs of the town and strung him up to a limb. They then emptied their shot-guns into the suspended body.

More Earthquake Shocks.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 2.—There were eight slight shocks of earthquake at Summerville last night and this morning.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1886.

NOT A LEG LEFT TO STAND UPON.

For some time past the Mail and other organs, as well as Conservative stumpers, have been virulently denouncing the Mowat Administration, accusing them of truckling to Roman Catholic support by their amendments to the Separate School law. The fallacy of the arguments used and the utter groundlessness of the cries raised has been shown with more or less force, but the Attorney-General gives the coup de grace to the sham, and does not leave Mr. Meredith, the Mail and other mischief-makers a leg to stand upon. He has issued a memorandum to show that Protestantism is not menaced with any danger. In the course of it he points out that the big bugbears to these alarmists—sections 41 and 52 of the Consolidated Act of 1886—were simply transferred to that act in the process of consolidation, and that the one (section 41) had been on the statute book since 1863, and the other (section 52) since 1881. These sections have been contemptuously spoken of as "new law" enacted by the Mowat Government against the interests of the country. One of these sections is twenty years old and the other five years old. One was enacted before Confederation, and the other was enacted under the argus eye of Mr. Meredith in 1881. If it has all the elements of evil now attributed to it, it is passing strange that Mr. Meredith did not discover the fact sooner than five years, and without the help of the Mail, Inspector Hughes and the other members of the little cabal of mischief-mongers who are doing their best to set one class against the other in bitter enmity, and to sow the seeds of sectarian strife in a peaceable community, where just laws give equal justice to all classes. Yet this astute Mr. Meredith, who has never had any political policy that Sir John has not dictated to him, who permits what he doubtless calls "iniquitous legislation" to pass without a single challenge or objection, is the man who now demands that the electors shall oust Hon. Oliver Mowat and replace him by William Ralph Meredith. And this is the only ground upon which the deputy leader of the Conservative party in Ontario appeals to the electors. For the past month the official organs and party spouters have insisted on nothing else. They had no other objection that would count against the present Administration, and they have to do them credit, worked the little mine to its fullest capacity, only to find it a miserable "pocket"—a disgusting cul-de-sac, which has brought them up standing against a dead wall of granite facts. Mr. Meredith will have to telegraph to Sir John for a new policy—the Mowat memorandum has left him without a leg to stand upon, the more because the Mail seems to have back-slidden on the prohibition question, it has not mentioned it for ten days or so. The mountain in labour has brought forth a mouse—muridiculus.

THE CABINET QUINTETTE.

"The Chieftain" and Four of his Colleagues visit Peterboro'.

A Large Array of Official Orators, Large but not Effusively Enthusiastic Audiences—Summary of the Speeches.

At the afternoon meeting in the Opera House assembled to offer homage to Sir John Macdonald and his Cabinet colleagues, the hall at the opening was well filled, party loyalty and curiosity combining to attract large numbers. The gallery was filled with ladies. The Opera House was profusely decorated with flags etc., while a small conservatory bloomed on the stage in front of the speakers. The mottoes were; "Confederation Must be Preserved"; "True in the Past, We Trust You in the Future"; "Canadas Greatest Chieftain;" "One Law for All."

GEORGE HILLIARD, Esq., M. P. presided and besides him and the speakers there were noticed on the stage:—Messrs. H. Allen, John McClelland, R Brodie, John Fell, M. P.P., East Victoria, Sam. Hughes, Warder, Lindsay, T. M. Willen, South Monaghan, A.P. Poussette, J. E. Belcher, Thos. Kelly, Rev. Vance Charles Fairbairn, Victoria, Jas. Golborne Harvey, Dr. Shaw, Keene, W. H. Moore, Rev. Father Kelly, Enniskmore, W. Clarkson, J. O'Meara, E. J. Toker, A. McQuade, ex M. P., Lindsay, H. T. Strickland, Rev. V. Clementi, James Stevenson, Commons candidate, West Peterborough; J. H. Burnham, Dr. Geo. Burnham, G. W. Hatton, W. H. Wrighton, H. LeBrun, Dr. Crevier, J. E. Hammond, A. McNeil, Jas. Keadry, Jas. Edwards, J. E. Collins, Millbrook; R. C. Strickland, Lakefield; John Carnegie, ex-M.P.P., Geo. Strickland, Lakefield; John Dobson, Lindsay; John Corkery, W. H Stephenson, Ontario Assembly candidate, East Peterborough, Norwood, and others.

HON. J. S. D. THOMPSON, the mellifluous Minister of Justice, was first called upon. He is a pleasant, fluent, but rather monotonous speaker, and perhaps made the most logical speech of the series. He dealt largely with the Riel question. He denied that he had ever spoken disparagingly of the French and asserted that Sir John had not a man in his cabinet who had one story for the French and one for the English, Irish and Scotch. He defended the action of the Government, asserting that they had acted from the very highest motives of justice, without the least idea of carrying political favor. He urged his hearers to make that question the sole issue of the coming elections. Mr. Thompson admitted a deficit of two millions for 1885-6 besides the war expenses, but hoped there would be a surplus this year. In alluding to public works undertaken by the Government, his reference to their extension of the system of Canals was received with chilling silence, the audience evidently having the Trent Valley Canal in mind. The Government was credited with making the country advance by "leaps and bounds" and it was said that the C. P. R. was bringing in a rushing tide of immigrants. Mr. Thompson whittled down the public debt to 74 millions, asserting that the Conservative had only increased it four millions a year, and he went on to try to show that we had only enough debt to keep us humble. The "savings bank barometer" was read to show that low rates of interest and lack of facilities for investing money had made a big increase in deposits.

HON. MR. FOSTER, Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the cold water (on prohibition) member of the cabinet called for a new dictionary to express his ideas of the magnificent demonstration of the day. He admitted that the tariff was not as perfect as it might be, and tried to show that there were no monopolies possible under the present Government. The Lomaion Government could not give the county reciprocity unless the United States would consent and he left the inference that they would not consent so long as the present fiscal policy obtained.

"HAIL TO THE CHIEF."

When the CHAIRMAN rose to introduce Sir John, the latter plucked the chairman's coat tails and there ensued a sotto voce confab, in which the Premier suggested a little joke; for the chairman went on to say that there was a time when Sir John did not steer the ship of state, and his followers complained that he used the ministry too gently, but the Chieftain had magnanimously answered, "Let them alone; give them enough rope and they will hang themselves." (Respectful laughter.)

SIR JOHN, who had been sitting on the chairman's right, rose to his feet and briskly drew off (without assistance) his fur-faced overcoat amidst loud applause. The old gentleman, who is not so jaunty as of yore, is rather vigorous for one of his years—72 next January. His familiar flowing locks are growing thin, and on top of his head a little space of baldness is asserting itself. His voice shows signs of decided impairment and an impediment in his speech that was not there years ago, interferes with his utterance. He began his remarks by saying that it was not his first visit to Peterborough, and the place had grown so since his former visits that he hardly recognized it, (and he wasn't referring to the claims of the town in respect of the Trent Valley Canal either.) He had been called a great statesmen but he never received a higher compliment than the remark of a boy as he was climbing the stairs to-day; "There goes the old Union Jack." (Cheers.) He had been in favor of union with the mother land and the union of the provinces. But the witty premier failed to tell that his opposition to Confederation nearly led to a rupture of personal relations between himself and Sir George Cartier. Sir John strongly deprecated the policy of slander and abuse of which he had been the object. He indulged in a glowing panygeric of the N. P. and even had the assurance to claim the support of the farmers and the grounds of what he had done for them. Millions of capital had been flowing into the country. The farmers were so happy and contented that not one desired a change. They had the benefit of a home market, the farmer could send his children to work in the nearest village and his wife could get a ready sale for her chickens and eggs in the same village. If the wheat crop failed, the tariff kept out Yankee wheat, and if the wheat crop failed in the States, though a minute before he had said it could not fail, the Canadian farmer would get a big price because the tariff prevented his selling it in the States. He asserted that the duty on cheese had developed this great national industry, though both the Canadians and the Yankees look to England for a market. The experimental farm he was going to start would be a boon to the farmers. Sir John concluded his address by soliciting the support of the electors, and took his seat amidst loud cheers, repeatedly renewed.

The Evening Meeting.

In the evening the Opera House was jammed with hearers.

HON. THOS. WHITE was first introduced to the audience by the chairman. He was received with applause. He opened by stating that he was glad to be in Peterborogh, where he had lived so long once more, and have an opportunity of addressing the citizens. In defending the Government he said that the Dominion Government had but one policy from the Atlantic to the Pacific. They had the same old story to tell—nothing fresh, nothing new, but a policy that had done so much for the country. That was probably the reason why they had been dubbed the Chestnut Combination. The town of Peterborough, when the speaker lived here, voted £30.000 or $120,000 to secure connection with the Beaverton, Lindsay and Port Hope Railway, thereby incurring a debt per capita as large as the debt incurred

One Price and Square Dealing to All!

This week, the public will receive the benefit of an extraordinary LOW PURCHASE of SEASONABLE OVERCOATS and SUITS, and any intending purchaser will miss it, if they do not call and examine them. We are determined to be the Poor Man's Friend, and if in fulfilling this mission, we break the back bone of those High Price Clothiers, I am sorry, as I wish them no harm. But having inaugurated this in PETERBOROUGH, I must bow to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Sheddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. Always keep in mind, that the man who does as he ADVERTISES, and Refunds the Money if Goods are not Satisfactory, is GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN.

LOW PRICE AND ONE PRICE SYSTEM

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Some will have it that the Scott Act is a failure; others protest that it is not. This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

After writing a few lines she rose and handed the paper to him. He looked up from it in surprise. "Addressed to Mrs. MacEdwin?" he said.

"Addressed," she answered, "to the only person I know who feels a true interest in her. Have you not heard of it?"

"I remember," he said—and read the lines that followed:

"I recommend Miss Westerfield as a teacher of young children, having had ample proof of her capacity, industry, and good temper while she has been governess to my child. She leaves her situation in my service under circumstances that testify to her sense of duty and her sense of gratitude."

"Have I said," she asked, "more than I could honorably and truly say—even after what has happened?"

He could only look at her; no words could have spoken for him as his silence spoke for him at that moment. When she took back the written paper there was pardon in her eyes already.

The last, worst trial remained to be undergone; she faced it resolutely. "Tell Miss Westerfield that I wish to see her."

On the point of leaving the room, Herbert was called back. "If you happen to meet with my mother," his wife added, "will you ask her to come to me?"

Mrs. Presty knew her daughter's nature; Mrs. Presty had been waiting near at hand, in expectation of the message which she now received.

Tenderly and respectfully Mrs. Linley addressed herself to her mother. "When we last met I thought you spoke rashly and cruelly. I know now that there was truth—some truth, let me say—in what offended me at the time. If you felt strongly it was for my sake. I wish to beg your pardon; I was hasty; I was wrong."

On an occasion when she had first irritated and then surprised him, Randal Linley had said to Mrs. Presty: "You have got a heart, after all!" Her reply to her daughter showed that view of her character to be the right one. "Say no more, my dear," she answered. "I was hasty; I was wrong."

The words had barely fallen from her lips before Herbert returned. He was followed by Sydney Westerfield.

The governess stopped in the middle of the room. Her head sank on her breast; her quiet, convulsive breathing was audible in the silence. Mrs. Linley advanced to the place in which Sydney stood. There was something divine in her beauty as she looked compassionately at the shrinking girl and held out her hand.

Sydney fell on her knees. In silence she lifted that generous hand to her lips. In silence Mrs. Linley raised her, took the writing which testified to her character from the table and presented it. Linley looked at his wife, looked at the governess. He waited, and still neither the one nor the other uttered a word. It was more than he could endure. He addressed himself to Sydney first.

"Try to thank Mrs. Linley," he said.

She answered, faintly: "I can't speak!"

He appealed to his wife next. "Say a last kind word to her," he pleaded.

She made an effort, a vain effort, to obey him. A gesture of despair answered for her as Sydney had answered: "I can't speak!"

True, nobly true, to the Christian virtue that repents, to the Christian virtue that forgives, those three persons stood together on the brink of separation, and forced their frail humanity to suffer and submit.

In mercy to the women Linley summoned the courage to part them. He turned to his wife first.

"I may say, Catherine, that she has your good wishes for happier days to come?"

Mrs. Linley pressed his hand.

He approached Sydney and gave his wife's message. It was in his heart to add something equally kind on his own part. He could only say what we have all said—how sincerely, how sorrowfully, we all know—the common word "good-by!"—the common wish "God bless you!"

At that last moment the child ran into the room in search of her mother.

There was a low murmur of horror at the sight of her. That innocent heart, they had all hoped, might have been spared the misery of the parting scene!

She saw that Sydney had her hat and cloak on. "You're dressed to go out," she said. Sydney turned away to hide her face. It was too late; Kitty had seen the tears. "Oh, my darling, you're not going away!" She looked at her father and mother. "Is she going away?" They were afraid to answer her. With all her little strength she clasped her beloved friend and playfellow round the waist. "My own dear, you're not going to leave me!" The dumb misery in Sydney's face struck Linley with horror. He placed Kitty in her mother's arms. The child's piteous cry: "Oh don't let her go! don't let her go!" followed the governess as she suffered her martyrdom and went out. Linley's heart ached; he watched her until she was lost to view. "Gone!" he murmured to himself—"gone forever!"

Mrs. Presty heard him, and answered him: "She'll come back again!"

XV.

As the year advanced, the servants at Mount Morven remarked that the weeks seemed to follow each other more slowly than usual. In the higher regions of the house the same impression was prevalent; but the sense of dullness among the gentlefolks submitted to circumstances in silence.

If the question had been asked in past days: Who is the brightest and happiest member of the family? everybody would have said: Kitty. If the question had been asked at the present time, differences of opinion might have suggested different answers—but the whole household would have refrained without hesitation from mentioning the child's name.

Since Sydney Westerfield's departure Kitty had never held up her head.

Time quieted the child's first vehement outbreaks of distress under the loss of the companion whom she had so dearly loved. Delicate management, gently yet resolutely applied, held the faithful little creature in check when she tried to discover the cause of her governess' banishment from the house. She made no more complaints; she asked no more embarrassing questions; but it was miserably plain to everybody about her that she failed to recover her spirits. She was willing to learn her lessons (not under another governess) when her mother was able to attend to her; she played with her toys and went out riding on her pony. But the delightful gayety of other days was gone; the shrill laughter that once rang through the house was heard no more. Kitty had become a quiet child; and, worse still, a child who seemed to be easily tired.

The doctor was consulted.

He was a man skilled in the sound medical practice that keeps ill-doers without health—bedside practice. His opinion declared that the child's vital power was seriously lowered. "Some cause is at work here," he said to the mother, "which I don't understand. Can you help me?" Mrs. Linley helped him without hesitation. "My little daughter dearly loved her governess; and her governess has been obliged to leave us." That was her reply. The doctor wanted to hear no more; he at once advised that Kitty should be taken to the seaside, and that everything which might remind her of the absent friend—books, presents, even articles of clothing likely to revive old associations—should be left at home. A new life, in new air. When pen, ink, and paper were offered to him that was the doctor's prescription.

Mrs. Linley consulted her husband on the choice of the seaside place to which the child should be removed.

The blank which Sydney's departure left in the life of the household was felt by the master and mistress of Mount Morven—and felt, unhappily, without any open avowal on either side of what was passing in their minds. In this way the governess became a forbidden subject between them; the husband waited for the wife to set the example of approaching it, and the wife waited for the husband. The trial of temper produced by this state of hesitation, and by the secret doubts which it encouraged, led insensibly to a certain estrangement—which Linley in particular was morbidly unwilling to acknowledge. If, when the dinner hour brought them together, he was silent and dull in his wife's presence, he attributed it to anxiety on the subject of his brother—then absent on a serious business errand in London. If he sometimes left the house the first thing in the morning and only returned at night, it was because the management of the model farm had become one of his duties in Randal's absence. Mrs. Linley made no attempt to dispute this view of the altered circumstances in home life—but she submitted with a mind ill at ease. Secretly fearing that Linley was suffering under Miss Westerfield's absence, she allowed herself to hope that Kitty's father would see a necessity, in his own case, for change of scene and would accompany them to the seaside.

"Won't you come with us, Herbert?" she suggested, when they had both agreed on the choice of a place.

His temper was in a state of constant irritation. Without meaning it, he answered her harmless question sharply.

"How can I go away with you when we are losing by the farm, and when there is nobody to check the ruinous expenses but myself?"

Mrs. Linley's thoughts naturally turned to Randal's prolonged absence. "What can be keeping him all this time in London?" she said.

Linley's failing patience suffered a severe trial.

"Don't you know," he broke out, "that I have inherited my poor mother's property in England, saddled with a lawsuit? Have you never heard of delays and disappointments, and quibbles and false pretenses, encountered by unfortunate wretches like me who are obliged to go to law? God only knows when Randal will be free to return, or what bad news he may bring with him when he does come back."

"You have many anxieties, Herbert; and I ought to have remembered them."

A Wonderful Shot.

The man who put ten bullets in succession, inside the circumference of a Milwaukee girl's finger ring, at fifteen paces, was a pretty good shot, but he wasn't half so wise as the billious man who put ten of "Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" into his system in five days, and on the sixth walked ten miles "just because he felt so well." Making Ready the Rink.

Mr. John Cousins is again constituted the custodian of the Charlotte street skating rink for the current season. He is now busy on his contract for flooring the rink with ice, and, as he and the clerk of the weather work together in great harmony, it is almost certain that the rink in all its departments will be ready for the steel of the skaters and the stones of the coopers on Monday. Indeed, it is possible that some of the more enthusiastic curlers may steal a march and indulge in a little trial spell on Saturday night.

There were born of this marriage nine children, two of whom died in infancy and seven survive. Mrs. Tully was an exemplary wife, an affectionate mother and a faithful friend, and in the latter relation won the respect and esteem of all with whom she came in contact.

News From the Camp.

A correspondent writes from Mr. Hazlitt's lumber camp, near Minden, as follows:—

James Northcott, whose home is near Lakefield, was struck by a falling cedar tree last Saturday. He was struck just above the hip bone on his right side, and so severely hurt that he had to be carried into camp. He will be laid up for some time.

A gang of skidders in this camp skidded 431 logs in one day recently. The logs were all of average size. Who can beat the record?

A Peculiar Incident.

A team of horses belonging to Jas. Galvin, wood merchant, frightened by the whistle of an approaching train, yesterday afternoon bolted from the C. P. R. yards with a full load of wood in tow. The driver, who was helping load another waggon at the time, endeavoured to climb onto the waggon to reach the lines, and failing in that, grabbed the tail of one of the horses. He was thrown in between the two horses, but fortunately was not injured, escaping both the animals feet and the wheels of the waggon which passed by on either side of him it was a marvellous escape. The load was upset, and the horses caught on the market square. Damage, nil.

THE CABINET QUINTETTE.

by the Dominion. The National Policy had also been discussed. It was not a question of how large a revenue could be collected, but what tariff could be placed on imports, so that home manufactures might be protected. It had been said that the National Policy was a scheme for personal benefit. Messrs. Wood and Irvine, of Hamilton; Mr. Patterson, of Brant; Charles C. Cameron, of Hersa, were all pronounced protectionists, and yet they sat in Parliament supporting a party that had declared protection not in the interests of the party. He asked them when the election to ignore the personal statements of the candidate, but consider the policy of the Government which he was supporting. It was, however, his duty to speak on the policy of the Government, though it was not much attacked. The Reform party had attacked their railway policy, declaring that the great C. P. R. would never be built. But they have seen the road built and equipped as few transcontinental lines are, and a great overland trade is being established. In it Canada had made a great contribution to the Empire, such as no other colony ever did. Mr. Blake says we imposed $63,000,000 on the Dominion in order to build the line, but in addition to that he has to take into account the large subsidies granted the various railways in order to show that that sum had been expended. But Mr. Blake, alarmist though he was, could not be able to impress any sense of alarm. Even the Franchise Bill is not talked of now, by which thousands of young men have a right to help in the affairs of the Government. A new system of tactics had been adopted, since the attacks upon the public policy of the country had failed. Having nothing which they can present to the public in lieu of the policy they oppose, they have adopted a system of personal attack against the members of the Government. But these charges they could not prove. If they can show that we have been using the resources of this Government to benefit personal friends, then the speaker would say to the electors, turn us out. Mr. MacKenzie thought that if he could induce capitalists to go into the North-West, erect mills and saw lumber, the settlers would get the benefit of it. The speaker was sorry to say that the policy was not a success. After the MacKenzie Government had been defeated, their very last act of administration was to grant an order-in-council to Cook and Sutherland, two supporters of the then Government, 200 miles of timber area along the Saskatchewan river, and gave them three years in which to select their land. But the first act of Sir John Macdonald on coming into power was to return the land to the country. He challenged these gentlemen who charged the Government that the timber limits were wrongfully used, to point their finger at a Conservative, in Parliament or out of it, who received any timber limits under any conditions that were not open to the public; or to show one instance where the highest bidder for any land did not get it. Only two grants had been made to parties to cut timber in the Northwest—a Liberal and a Conservative. The government were developing the great Northwest, and the practical result of their policy was that the government had received thousands of dollars into the treasury for these limits. They had given grazing leases. They say we established colonization companies for the purpose of corrupting, and the speaker issued the same challenge. He then took up several of the charges made against the government, especially those attacks made upon the Sir John Macdonald and Sir Charles Tupper through their sons, who were both in the law business. It had been said that these two young men had been dealing in the timber limits and coal lands. These slanders the speaker refuted. But they were charged with a much more serious offence than any of these. They were charged with having so mismanaged, so oppressed the Indians and half-breeds in the Northwest that, in self defence, they were forced to rise in open rebellion. He pointed out some of the facts in connection of the rebellion. The speaker entered into details on the subject. The policy of the present government by which no half-breed had ever been deprived of his settlement, was he was sure not open to the charges made by the Opposition. To this day no one has been able to place his hand upon one half-breed who had been deprived of one foot of land by the action or inaction of the government. The policy of settlement adopted by the government was a just one, but the half-breeds demanded in their petition three things which went directly against the law. Every one of these concessions was granted by the government; with regard to settlement, improvement and pre-emption. It was said that the Northwest Councils, the Archbishop and Bishops of the Northwest had made representations which the government had ignored. But if all their recommendations, and they conflicted with each other, had been granted, the very men who were now crying down the government for oppression, would have as vigorously opposed them in making the concessions recommended. And it was said the government kept dallying until the first guns of the rebellion had been fired. That was not so. Two months before the Duck Lake fight an order in Council had been passed appointing a commission to investigate the grievances. The confession of Father Andres, given at Regina under oath, set forth that every grievance, every demand of the half-breeds were known to be granted or about to be granted previous to the rebellion, except the question of wood, which did not amount to much anyway. He referred to a little disturbance regarding a survey which had occurred in the Northwest in which Father LeDuc had interested himself, and which had been satisfactorily settled by the government. The best there were no representations made to the government after Louis Riel entered the country. He had other fish to fry, and he proceeded to fry them in a manner which brought misery to thousands of people. The speaker read a statement made under oath by Father Andres on the subject, which went to show that Riel had asked the Father to use his influence to have indemnity granted him by the government. And Riel warned the people against the clergy, who up to that time had been their best friends, and by working upon the feelings of the people committed to the fight at Duck Lake, and made them easy dupes thereafter. That was the manner in which the rebellion broke out. The speaker said that never had a community been treated so fairly and equitably as the half-breeds of the Northwest. The speaker indulged in a severe diatribe against the Mowat government and the opposition for taking the ground they have in aiding the Rielites in the Province of Quebec, the government could safely appeal to the electors that there was but one law for all whatever their creed, whatever their nationality, whatever province they come from.

Mr. FOSTER next took the floor and created a little "diversion" by making some humorous references to the alleged bribery and corruption of his predecessor, the hon. Minister for the Interior.

SIR JOHN entered at this juncture and was loudly applauded.

The speaker, continuing, was of opinion that these parties who laid the accusations of bribery and corruption, were themselves guilty of these unrighteous acts. In first place the speaker undertook to say that Edward Blake was the chief sinner to-day in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. CHAPLEAU entered and was applauded.

It was the fact that Hon. Edward Blake threw doubt upon the legality of Riel's trial at Regina and upon Riel's sanity that put heart into the Rielites and urged them to open action. And when Riel was captured the Reform press and leaders were loud in their expressions of fear that he would not be justly punished. The speaker read extracts from several Reform newspapers to prove his statement in that particular, and waxed eloquent in a description of the persecutions carried on against the Tories by the Reform press. Confederation must be preserved. A slight disturbance had taken place in Nova Scotia, but not one of those who took an active part in the movement was a friend and supporter of Hon. Edward Blake. Down in that province of New Brunswick certain resolutions had been raised the cry of annexation, and those who praised that cry were every mothers' son of them supporters of Hon. Edward Blake. He convicted the Reform party on these accounts of trafficing in the most sacred feelings and principles that we have in this Confederation of ours.

HON. MR. CHAPLEAU

was introduced amidst great applause. He opened by accusing the people of Peterborough of cruelty in making him speak, while suffering from a severe cold. He had come to enter once more his protest against the bad character certain demagogues had been trying to lay against his dear province of Quebec. Their falsehoods and misrepresentations had been believed by some, but thank God their efforts would not be successful. His fellow countrymen were a unit in favor of Confederation. He was one of those who had suffered most from the Riel business, but again thank God he had remained true to himself and his country. He had been tempted and offered large sums of money, but the offers he had scorned as an insult, and indulged in some bitter sarcasms against his enemies. In referring to the "chestnut" business, he said the old tricks and stories of their opponents might be more appropriately termed 'chestnut.' The speaker closed by warning his hearers not to be led away by the machinations of the Reform party, but remain true to the grand old chieftain, whose wise policy had done so much for the country.

Mr. Andrew McNeil, President of the Young Mens Liberal Conservative Association, then read an address of welcome and commendation to Sir John Macdonald. It abounded in poetical and sentimental phrases, and was flattering in the extreme.

SIR JOHN was loudly applauded on coming forward, but expressed his regret that indisposition would not allow him to address the audience at any great length. However, he thanked them for the address, which assured him that he still retained the confidence of his party, after 25 years of political life. When he was compelled in the course of nature to leave the arena of political life, the cause of Liberal-Conservatism would still ride triumphantly forward to progress and prosperity. He concluded by again expressing thanks for the courtesy and kind reception accorded him.

The meeting was brought to a close by cheers for the Queen and Sir John Macdonald.

While the different speakers were given a respectful and patient hearing, there was an absence of the spontaneous enthusiasm one might expect on such an occasion. Sir John was, of course, more heartily welcomed than any of the others. It was noticed that the applause was the quickest and heartiest on the platform. The Young Conservatives, who managed the entire demonstration very creditably, are capital claquers.

After the evening meeting the party were given a banquet at the Oriental hotel, at which about 150 guests sat down. All the ministers were present except Sir John.

The party left in the private car "Jamaica" this morning for Port Hope, where they merely halted, taking the fast express for Cobourg, where meetings will be held this afternoon and evening.

HON. MR. CHAPLEAU

addressed the Canadian French in the old music hall. There was an audience of about one hundred who listened attentively to his address delivered in the French language.

Mr. Chapleau said he had come to speak for the interest of the French Canadians in Peterborough and to point out to them how it was their interest to vote. He referred to the Canadian Pacific Railway as the greatest work of modern times and justified the cost of it. He pointed out that the government which had done so much for their interests should receive the benefit of their votes. He gave Sir George Cartier and Sir John the glory of having brought about Confederation. But the bulk of his address dealt with the Riel question. Riel was alone to blame for the North-west rebellion, and he regretted the bloodshed and expense that such a simpleton had caused, and he was glad that such an element of disturbance had been removed. He had been a curse to the country. He elaborately excused himself for the odium attaching to him on account of his consenting to Riel's death, but he had taken such a course out of loyalty to Sir John. The only cause of complaint the Halfbreeds had was on account of the mode of survey. But to-day, owing to the wise course of the Government, the country was peaceful and the Metis loyal and contented. His course on the Riel question had alienated a majority of his French friends, but they acted through prejudice. He appealed to his hearers not to allow anyone to lead them astray, but to go to the polls and vote for the Conservative Government. Hon. Mr. Chapleau referred to his connection with the Credit Foncier, but failed to point out how that had benefitted the French in Peterborough. He pointed out that if the Halfbreeds had only waited, the Government would have given them justice. Rebellion against an angelic government like the Dominion Government was so base an ingratitude that it was no more harm to kill such a rebel than to kill a buffalo. The speaker had been maligned, but that was no reason why they should vote against him and his colleagues. He denied that any could accuse him of working against the interests of the French. His address abounded in frequent appeals to his hearers to vote against the Liberals.

A Sudden Death.

Yesterday afternoon about two o'clock Mrs. T. Evans Bradburn died suddenly and most unpectedly of, it is supposed, paralysis of the heart. She had taken dinner with her husband as usual, apparently enjoying good health, but shortly afterwards was stricken down and died instantly without a struggle. Deceased was an only daughter of the late Chas. Ormond, Esq., at one time a highly respected citizen of Peterborough. She leaves a husband and six children, the youngest of whom is but three weeks old, disconsolate. Mrs. Bradburn was a young woman of rare amiability and cheerfulness of disposition, and had the undivided love and esteem of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She was well known and kindly remembered in Lindsay also, where she lived a number of years. The funeral takes place to-morrow at 2.30 p.m., from the residence of Mr. Bradburn, Stewart street.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. eodw41tf

An Eventful Fact to be remembered is our Ulster and Mantle Cloths and the prices which we are selling them at.

A Fact of Integrity and that is we keep faith with the public in every article we advertised.

A Fact to be Remembered and that is we don't sell or propose to sell goods at cost, nor do we sell you the best All Wool Flannels at 18c. per yard, we sell you the goods as we advertise them. It would never do to sell Flannels that cost 30c. per yard at 18c.

BLACK SILK—We have the best Black Gro Grain Silk at $1.00 per yard in Canada, and every lady is welcome to compare it with any silk she wishes at 30 per cent higher.

SERVANT'S STORIES.

DAMAGING EVIDENCE AGAINST LADY COLIN CAMPBELL.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—In the Campbell divorce case to-day O'Neill, a man-servant, testified that he had looked through the keyhole in the dining room door and had seen the plaintiff and Chief Shaw in a compromising position. Lord Colin Campbell was in the drawing room at the time.

Elizabeth Evans, a housemaid, testified that during the Easter holidays, in 1882, Lady Colin Campbell and the Duke of Marlborough occupied adjoining apartments at Leigh Court. Witness saw Lady Colin once, while in the central hall, take off one of her slippers and throw it at the Duke. While Lady Colin was at Leigh Court she appeared to be robust and went out on long walks in all kinds of weather—in snow, rain or mud—with Dr. Bird. It was only after the plaintiff's return to London that she appeared to be ill. Witness remembered that on one occasion in April, 1883, Gen. Butler was in the drawing-room with Lady Colin when some one called. Lady Colin came out and said she was not at home. When Lord Colin came home Lady Colin went to her bedroom and Gen. Butler came down stairs and let himself out of the house. Soon afterward Lady Colin came down and began singing and playing. Lord Colin called her and she went to his room and said she didn't know he was home, and asked him why he had not come into the drawing-room. He replied "Because you had a visitor there." Lady Colin answered, "only the old soldier, he has known me since I was a child."

Annie Duffy, a nurse, testified that Lady Colin became ill in April. Her ailment was unusual. Dr. Bird conversing with witness ten days after said: "Don't talk about Lady Colin's illness. Just say Lady Colin has a cold." Witness, basing her observations on seventeen years experience as a nurse believed that Lady Colin's illness was the result of a miscarriage. After this illness Lady Colin wore a half hoop emerald ring and when she went into her husband's room she used always to turn the stones of the ring around from the top to the lower side of her finger. Witness being asked why she did not inform Lord Colin of what she saw, said she refrained from doing so because she felt certain that ultimately he would find it all out.

Amy Wright, a hospital nurse, testified that she was in attendance upon Lord Campbell at the time of his marriage. She accompanied His Lordship and Lady Colin to Scotland. From what she saw witness believed that Lady Campbell, at the time of her marriage and for some time before it, was suffering from an infectious disease, the most loathsome of its class (sensation) and that she did not warn Lord Colin Campbell against the probable results of the consummation of a marriage with a woman in her diseased condition. Witness was not Lord Colin Campbell's medical adviser. She had had fourteen years experience in hospitals.

A STRANGE MALADY IN HOGS.

A Plague in Indiana That Carried Off Three Thousand Animals.

WABASH, Ind., Nov. 3.—The hog disease prevailing in this section is radically different from hog cholera, which affects the animals' bowels. The new malady strikes at the lungs, brain and eyes, and appears to be incurable. Hogs stricken with this plague have been found with their eyes fairly pushed out and the eyeballs cracked open. Farmers are hastily disposing of their healthy swine, and the dead animals are brought by the hundreds to soap manufacturers. It is estimated that fully 3000 hogs have died in this county in six weeks, and a like number in Miami county, and that farmers throughout the Wabash valley will lose from $75,000 to $100,000 by the scourge.

JIM CUMMINGS AGAIN.

This Time He Shoots and Fatally Wounds a Policeman.

PARSONS, Ks., Dec. 3.—A stranger registered at the Centropolis Wednesday evening, as "Jim Cummings" and soon went to supper. When he came out he put on the landlord's hat and departed. Policeman Kiser arrested him near the depot. They had walked a short distance when the man pulled away from the policeman and stepping back a few paces, drew a pistol and fired. The policeman dropped fatally wounded, and the assassin made his escape down the tracks, stampeding a crowd who attempted to stop him by flourishing his revolver.

Chopped Her Husband's Head Off.

HELENA, Ark., Dec. 3.—Particulars are received of a horrible tragedy. Lavinia Brown, wife of Jackson Brown, living near Trenton, Ark., had some words with him about a trivial matter while at breakfast. The husband did not pay any more attention to the occurrence, and was sitting down with his children when his wife went to the wood-pile, picked up an axe, slipped up to her husband and almost severed his head from his body.

The woman made no attempt to escape and is now in custody. The parties are united.

NATIONALISTS JOY.

AT THE TROUBLE CHURCHILL IS MEETING WITH IN IRELAND.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P.; cables this morning as follows: Prominent officials of Dublin Castle have reported to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach that there is no escape from the deadlock in Ireland except through wholesale arrests and the total suppression of unlicensed meetings throughout the length and breadth of Ireland. This opinion is understood to have been communicated to the Cabinet and to the Unionist leaders and to have disastrously affected the stability of the Unionist-Tory coalition.

It is now known positively that the Cabinet is divided on the cloture question. The split threatens to become serious. Lord Randolph Churchill is in a furious temper over the obstacles he is encountering in the attempts to bring the Ministry and the leading men of the party to the adoption of his views. The Irish members of Parliament are joyous at the increasing difficulties of the Government, and are working with renewed vigor to complete the popular organization against unfair rents. Parties of Parliamentarians, accompanied by leading Nationalists, are daily leaving for different parts of the country to collect as trustees the rents the tenants are prepared to pay the landlords, and which the latter refuse. An enormous fund is thus rapidly accumulating. Wherever the party go to collect rents they proceed to stir up the population to resistance meetings, where resolutions are adopted pledging all present to stand firm in refusing to pay unfair rents and for mutual support and protection against evictions.

THE MOEN SCANDAL.

Wilson's Story Pronounced False by a Woman Who Says She Is His Sister.

WORCESTER, Mass., Dec. 3.—Mrs. George M. Rice, of Uxbridge, said to-day that she was the eldest daughter of Jonas Wilson and sister of Levi Wilson, and some seventeen years older than he is. Her story was direct and to the point in regard to "Doc" Wilson's parentage, and completely contradicted the story of Wilson that he was Moen's son. She was at home in North Oxford when Levi was born, and she had watched him grow up as an infant and through childhood. He was the son of her own parents without any question. He was named after her uncle, Levi Fessenden. His father died at Guadlig, Conn. There never was any deathbed confession by her father, as stated by Levi. She knew of Levi's suddenly becoming rich, but he never explained it to her. She had received gifts from him, but only in a brotherly way, never anything for keeping any secrets. She thought he must be out of his mind.

The Wilson-Moen affair has caused great excitement here and in the surrounding towns where Wilson formerly lived. This afternoon a reporter went to East Thompson and had an interview with Mrs. Lyman Porter, Wilson's mother. She said emphatically that she is Wilson's own mother, and that Jonas Wilson was his real father. She also said the reports of the record of Wilson's birth at Oxford are correct. She thinks Wilson is not in his right mind or that he acted impulsively. She does not know of any mystery. She is 68 years old, and is broken down in health. Wilson is the perfect picture of her in the face, especially the nose, and there is no question but that she is his mother. She never saw or heard of Moen till of late years. Her husband is a shoemaker, and is supported mostly by Wilson. The only possible doubt concerns "his—his father," and Mrs. Porter faltered in saying it, and sobbingly said Jonas was his father, "but I know something bad will become of me." Whether this apprehension is in regard to her future support or on account of her not having answered truthfully concerning the paternity of Wilson is a question.

THE FRENCH MINISTRY DEFEATED

It is Reported that DeFreycinet and Two of His Cabinet Will Resign.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day M. Sarrien, Minister of the Interior, speaking in opposition to a motion for the total abolition of the office of sub-prefects, promised that he would introduce a bill providing for the partial abolition of offices. Prime Minister De Freycinet supported Sarrien and reproached the opposition for seizing every chance that was offered to overthrow the Government. The Chamber, however, adopted a motion for total abolition by a majority of thirteen votes, thus defeating the Government. It is reported that De Freycinet, Sarrien and Goblet, Minister of Public Instruction, will resign. There was intense excitement in the lobbies of the Chambers after the vote was announced. The sitting of the Chamber was suspended at the instance of De Freycinet, that the Cabinet might consider its position.

The Cabinet will meet to-morrow. It is believed that President Grevy is adverse to dissolving the Ministry, and will ask M. de Freycinet to reform the Cabinet. MM. Sarrien, Develle and Goblet will probably insist upon resigning.

The Cold Dip.

Snow storms prevailed in Ulster, Ireland, and Devonshire, England, yesterday.

At Chicago yesterday the weather was clear with the temperature two degrees below zero.

At Dubuque, Iowa, the temperature was ten degrees below zero yesterday morning.

A heavy snow storm set in in the vicinity of Rome, N.Y., yesterday, and continued through the night. It was the first blizzard of the winter.

Ice began to form on Hamilton Bay Thursday night, and it is believed it will be frozen over before long.

The roads around Hamilton are said to be in splendid condition for good sleighing. All that's needed is snow.

It has been snowing in Memphis, Tenn., since 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and at last accounts it lies fully four inches deep.

There is such fine sleighing in Montreal that the authorities have prohibited the use of wheeled vehicles in the streets.

Prof. Foster of Burlington, Ia., the meteorologist, still insists that his predictions regarding a great snow period from to-morrow until the 15th will be verified. Blockades, according to his predictions, will occur in the West by Sunday, and in the East by Wednesday.

The Murderer Escaped.

BRIDGTON, Me., Dec. 3.—John Dorr, aged 21, was killed here yesterday afternoon by James McLaughlin. The men were working together logging, when some trouble arose in connection with their work, and McLaughlin assaulted Dorr and gave him a beating, which caused him to leave work and start for home. After he had been gone a few minutes McLaughlin followed and beat him to death on the road. The murderer escaped.

Didn't Kill His Man Quick Enough.

STEPHENSON, Ala., Dec. 3.—Last night James Turner went to the house of Frank Carter and called him to the door. As soon as Carter opened the door Turner fired two shots from a shot gun at him, both taking effect in his breast. As Carter fell he caught up his rifle, which was standing behind the door, and shot Turner in the right side. Both are dying.

The St. Louis Browns Challenged.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—President Spalding of the Chicago Baseball Club to-day wired President Von der Ahe, challenging the St. Louis Browns to play a series of seven or nine games in April next for the world's championship. The dates and other details were left open to be arranged later.

THE LAKE DISASTERS.

THE WINTER STORMS LEAVE MANY A WRECK BEHIND.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Anxiety in marine circles about the safety of sail and steam vessels which were probably exposed to Wednesday night's fearful gale, has been increased by their failure to appear at any port or harbor of refuge, and some of them it is feared have been lost. The captain of the schooner Lake Forest, which emerged from the storm early yesterday morning crippled and almost helpless, says it was a terrific gale. The Lake Forest was about 40 miles out of Muskegon when it began, and before her sails could be "shortened," the seas were running mountains high and washing clear over her deck.

"The men endured more hardship and suffering than they ever will again, perhaps, if they live to be a hundred years old. The wind was bitter cold, and as we all had to throw off our heaviest clothing, such as overcoats, to insure safety in crawling around the deck every blast seemed to penetrate to our very marrow." The Forest was covered with ice when she arrived.

The Stormy Trip of the R. S. Parr.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—Last Tuesday the schooner Ray R. S. Parr left Muskegon for Chicago with a load of slabs. On Wednesday afternoon she went ashore on the beach near Michigan City, Ind., and her crew reached this port this morning. The wind was blowing stiff from the northwest when the vessel left Muskegon and there was a moderate sea running, but it was thought Chicago could be easily made with the wind as it then was. All went well until Wednesday morning, just as Chicago harbor was sighted. The wind then freshened to a gale and veered to the west. The change in the wind made it impossible for the schooner to keep on her course for Chicago. The wind grew more and more fierce and the cold more intense, until every drop of spray that struck the vessel froze as it fell, gradually loading her down on her lee side until she was nearly on her beams end, and her canvas solid sheets of ice two or three inches in thickness and totally unmanageable. The sea began to rise and run from the north, and every wave broke over the vessel, now so loaded with ice that she was almost hull down in the water. South Chicago was sighted, but the crew was unable to do anything towards gaining it, and she drifted helplessly by. A determined effort was made by the crew to get in the stiff frozen canvas, and it was brought down, though the nails were broken in pieces as they were folded on the deck. By this time the crew were almost dead from exhaustion. They had been on deck all night and were covered with the frozen spray. Several of the men were badly frozen, and Capt. Granse, who had stuck to his post in the iced rigging keeping lookout for shore and giving orders to his men on deck, was in a pitiable condition. His nose, face, fingers and toes were frozen and he was completely encased in ice. As his vessel drifted past South Chicago the captain saw that all hope of making the harbor was gone, and he determined to put his vessel before the wind and beach her in the sand near Michigan City. This was done about 2.30 o'clock. The vessel struck the bar seven miles this side of that town. She grounded on the bar, and the next moment a tremendous wave swept her over the bar and drenched her with water from stem to stern. Another bar lay beyond and the schooner struck again and was once more carried over the bar by another wave, which froze as it struck, and left the vessel little more than a mammoth iceberg. The schooner struck on the beach, but it is very sloping, and the crew were still a long distance from shore. A yawl was lowered, but it was immediately struck by a cake of ice and swamped. The tackle still held, the boat was regained and the crew managed to crawl into her and make their way through a field of floating ice to the shore, where, almost dead from exhaustion, they were cared for by the villagers. The men were in a terrible condition, and the medical force of the vicinity was kept busy in attending to numerous frost bites. Capt. Granse's injuries were most severe, his fingers being perfectly black. They were lanced, and it is hoped his hands will be saved. The crew were cared for until last evening, when they left for Chicago. The Parr is completely surrounded by ice.

THE MISS DEFALCATION.

A Chicago Cashier's Big Steal and Its Direful Consequences.

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—The latest estimates of the defalcation of Theodore S. Mize, cashier for Ames, the coal merchant, make the amount $112,000. The developments reveal a state of affairs sad in the extreme. A whole family ruined by the recklessness of a son who has brought a gray-haired father from affluence to poverty; from health almost to the verge of the grave. The homestead of the aged parents, the home of the sister and brother-in-law; the residence of the embezzler; the jewels of his wife, and his very birthright and heritage have gone to satisfy the claim of Mize's employer and save the son from the penitentiary.

Yesterday transfers to Ames were recorded for all the property enumerated, and Theodore S. Mize, jointly with his father, signed away all rights and title to the share of the father's property that would revert to him by the provisions of the father's will, already made. The brother of Mize, who is in Atchison, Kas., also came to his assistance.

A BREWERY BURNED.

McCarthy's Establishment at Ogdensburg Destroyed by Fire.

OGDENSBURG, Dec. 3.—McCarthy's brewery, situated on the banks of the St. Lawrence, is on fire and the wind is blowing strongly from the west towards the river, so no damage can be done to adjacent buildings. The fire has now made its way down to the docks connected with the brewery, and both buildings and dock will be entirely consumed. The insurance is mostly held by Ogdensburg agencies, but it is impossible to ascertain the amount. The brewery is worth about $100,000.

A Carload of Gold Coin.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 3.—Parties representing the Louisville and Nashville railroad arrived here yesterday on a special train with $320,000 in gold, guarded by a posse with Winchester rifles, and tendered it in payment for the Kentucky Union Railroad, claiming that they had the right to purchase in a given time, which had not expired. They took the money to the City National Bank, but it was refused. After the refusal it was again loaded in an express wagon and taken back to the cars and returned to Louisville, where it was guarded in the car during the night. There is a prospect of a big suit. The parties tendering it were Mr. Baxter, a Nashville lawyer, accompanied by A. M. Shook, John Inman and James H. Warner, directors of the Louisville and Nashville.

Smallpox Near Kingston.

KINGSTON, Dec. 3.—It is believed that Mr. Charles Cox, of Parkham, who is suffering from smallpox, contracted the disease in Montreal whence he recently returned. The health authorities have been informed as to the hotel he stopped at while there, and the Montreal authorities will be asked to investigate. Every precaution possible has been taken in Mr. Cox's case to prevent the spread of the disease.

The Paris Faster.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—Merlatti, who has now fasted thirty-nine days, fell to-day from extreme weakness. The committee of physicians, which has been in attendance upon him during his long period of abstinence, has advised him to terminate his undertaking, which he has refused to do.

SCRIPTURE READINGS IN SCHOOLS.

As considerable capital is sought to be made out of the "Scripture Readings for High and Public Schools," authorized by the Ontario Education Department, the following addressed to the public by Mr. W. H. Kerr, a legal gentleman concerned in the work of selection, will be read with interest :

Sir,—Will you allow me space in your paper to say, in reply to a letter signed "James L. Hughes," which appears in to-day's Mail, that it is grossly unfair to Hon. Mr. Ross, as the following facts will demonstrate :—

1. The selection of Scripture readings for use in schools was begun by me a year before Mr. Ross was thought of as a possible Minister of Education ; at all events, a year before his appointment was spoken of or known. I did not at that time know the hon. gentleman, and only became acquainted with him after his accession to office.

2. At that time I intended publishing the the book on my own account as a private enterprise, trusting to the general excellence and utility of the work to secure its adoption in the Public Schools. I did not then fully realise how little room there was for individuality in our educational system, and how completely our Public Schools were in all things subject to departmental control. My idea was, that I should get of the different Churches and trust to the book thereafter making its own way. I also thought that it might with advantage be extensively used for family reading ; and I am confident that if its merits were more generally known it would command a large sale for this laudable purpose. Let those who are talking about this book, without knowing what it contains, procure a copy and judge for themselves.

3. I used King James' translation as being the one most generally known and likely to be the most widely acceptable. I proceeded leisurely with my selections, my work being only undertaken in the evenings, and then often interrupted. Moreover, I wrote a short comment on each of the lessons, which appear in the second part of the Selections under the heading "Didactic and moral." In this little explanation and enforcement of the text of the lesson, I avoided all dogmatic teachings of any sort, and it was with reference to this that it was said that there was nothing written to which the apostle of "sweetness and light" or any agnostic could well take exception. From an educationalists' standpoint, pure morality ought to be the ultimate end of all teaching. The absence of color in the comments would doubtless condemn them in the eyes of those who are not willing that the children should have "the sincere milk of the word that they may grow thereby," but the "strong meat" of James L. Hughes' whole Bible.

(4) From the very first I intended to try and secure the approbation of the Archbishop of Toronto, with a view to having the Scripture Readings generally acceptable. This heinous mistake of mine doubtless arose from supposing that I was living in a Christian country and that His Grace of Toronto was a Christian minister who was entitled to be consulted. I was aware that there were many and some hundreds of Catholic teachers, also. I knew, for example, that many of the well-behaved and promising pupils in the Brantford Collegiate Institute, and that Mr. Sinon, a successful classical teacher in the same institution, were Roman Catholics. I understood, too, that the latter, a most estimable young man, did not absent himself from prayers, and I doubt not, had the occasion arisen, would have "taken prayers" himself. Why should he not? But then, Brantford is a city of exceptional culture, and the people there of different creeds have the grace to live together in amity.

(5) Meantime, I consulted several prominent Protestant divines, receiving in every case nothing but unstinted encouragement in my work. One of the first persons to whom I broached the matter was the Rev. Dr. Nelles, the very same gentlemen who, according to Mr. Hughes' incredible story, was five mortal hours drafting the resolution adopted by the Teachers' Association recommending selections from the Bible for use in the schools. I met him on the train between Toronto and Hamilton, and in the course of conversation mentioned the "Scripture Readings" which I had then only just begun. He said it was just what was wanted, and urged me to proceed with my work. I subsequently saw the Rev. Dr. Cochrane, a distinguished divine of the Presbyterian Church—of which he was at one time Moderator—a gentleman thoroughly conversant with the needs of our educational system, and he professed himself highly pleased with the proposed readings, but expressed doubts as to the propriety of there being any comments.

(6) Having got my work well on the way to completion I fixed upon the firm of Campbell & Sons to publish it, and when in Toronto on other business called several times to see them and consult with them. Always convinced of the importance of procuring the authorization of the Education Department, it was from them I first learned that it would be almost to secure such authorization. The senior member of the firm undertook to see the Hon. Mr. Mowat, who then assisted the Hon. Mr. Hardy in the management of the Education Department during the serious indisposition of the late Hon. Adam Crooks, then Minister of Education. I myself saw the Hon. Mr. Hardy in Brantford in regard to it, but he expressed no decided opinion in the matter one way or the other. Mr. Campbell met with more encouragement from Mr. Mowat, and so reported to me. Mr. Campbell regarded my procuring the assent of Archbishop Lynch to the use of the readings as extremely problematical. I never for a moment doubted that I could obtain His Grace's approval of the selections, and the result justified my confidence in his liberality.

(7.) I had finally determined to go on and publish a Scripture lectionary myself, when the new Minister of Education was appointed. After he assumed the duties of his office I submitted my work to him, but not until after I had myself shown the selected readings to Archbishop Lynch. In doing so of the "Palace," nor choose "the very witching hour of night" for my purpose. I went boldly up to the front door in broad daylight, with my manuscript in a lawyer's bag slung over my shoulder, and was promptly shown into His Grace's library. The guardian of the Church, who did not know but my lawyer's bag contained some objections to the title to St. Michael's Cathedral, experienced evident relief when I unfolded my mission and told him I only wanted him, in common with other Christian ministers, to combat the materialistic tendencies of the age by sanctioning certain Bible selections for the use of schools. He received the proposal most kindly, and promised to look over the manuscript, which I left with him for that purpose. On calling again, I found he had accepted my selections, comments and all ; the only emendation he suggested was the use of "who" instead of "which" in the Lord's Prayer. When I informed my intended publishers that I had secured the Archbishop's approval of the Bible Readings, they were surprised. Now, sir, I hold that, to the extent that the reading of these selections was intended to be made obligatory on Catholic as well as Protestant teachers, and that these Bible lessons might be recited in the presence of Catholic children whose parents did not object, I unhesitatingly assert that the leading Roman Catholic clergy, the more especially as the selections were from the Protestant Bible, were entitled to be consulted. At all events, if a man is to be condemned for doing a praiseworthy act, it will be seen from the foregoing that I am the real culprit, and not the Hon. Mr. Ross.

8. And now, for a moment, let us contrast the enlightened liberality of Archbishop Lynch in this matter with the miserable fanatical intolerance which some ultra-Protestant bigots have evinced. Here on the one hand, is a Roman Catholic prelate consenting to selections from a translation of the sacred Scriptures which his Church does not recognize, being used in the Public Schools of the Province, together with a comment thereupon written by an uncircumcised lawyer, who, as Sir John Falstaff might say, was "little better than one of the wicked" —and, on the other hand, an intolerant Protestant faction, so exceeding mad with the Archbishop for giving his sanction to the use of the readings, that they threaten to have him arraigned before a special consistory at Rome and placed under the ban of the Pope for having exceeded his authority in giving countenance to the reading of a Protestant Bible ! When James L. Hughes gets off the prancing charger on which he personates a monarch who had accurate notions of civil and religious liberty and mounts a table in an Orange lodge, under the skull and crossbones of a Royal Black Preceptory, to expound to the faithful the religious bigotry of Roman Catholics, let him remember that to let the glorious light of the Gospel shine in upon the mind of the poor benighted Catholic, and he refused to let it shine. My comments had to go simply because a Presbyterian Minister of Education would have "the Bible without note or comment." What matter? The whole Bible is there. All that is ever read anywhere, in church, or Sunday School, or the family. All that is dear to the Christian heart : the divinest Psalms, the most charming narratives, the most instructive Proverbs, the Gospel story complete, the Acts of the Apostles, the history of the Early Church entire, many of the choicest epistles, including even the chapter on "charity," which it would be well for some Christian bigots to study. Throughout the whole selections I kept constantly in mind that they were for the children ; for the boys and girls reading together in mixed schools ; for adolescent young men and women. It is obviously impossible to administer to the children James L. Hughes' whole Bible, like a dose of brimstone and the treacle at a gulp from an iron spoon. No one has heretofore ventured to point out any omission, important or unimportant. That the selections were made with some judgment and skill on the part of the compiler is evidenced by the fact that they passed the various committees of eminent divines who undertook their revision, practically unscathed. It must be a great gratification to every lover of the Bible to learn that the "Scripture Readings" are meeting with the general favor they deserve, and that the Province of Manitoba has adopted them for use in its Public Schools.

My excuse for the length of this communication is that I have had neither time nor inclination hitherto to notice the idiotic clap-trap that has been written to the newspapers on this subject by people who ought to know better ! I trusted to the obvious malevolence of the writers being the best antidote to their words. There may be honest difference of opinion as to the method of using the Scripture lessons, but to the lessons themselves no one can successfully object without assailing the Bible itself.

Yours truly,
W. H. C. KERR.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

That gentle answer touched him. He made the best apology in his power; he said his nerves were out of order, and asked her to excuse him if he had spoken roughly. There was no unfriendly feeling on either side, and yet there was something wanting in the reconciliation. Mrs. Linley left her husband, shaken by a conflict of feelings. At one moment she felt angry with herself.

With the best intentions (as usual) Mrs. Presty made mischief, nevertheless. Observing that her daughter was in tears, and feeling sincerely distressed by the discovery, she was eager to administer consolation. "Make your mind easy, my dear, if you have any doubt about Herbert's movements when he is away from home. I followed him myself the day before yesterday when he went out. A long walk for an old woman—but I can assure you that he does really go to the farm."

Implicitly trusting her husband—and rightly trusting him—Linley's wife replied by a look which Mrs. Presty received in silent indignation. She summoned her dignity and marched out of the room.

Five minutes afterward Mrs. Linley received an intimation that her mother was seriously offended in the form of a little note:

"I find that my maternal interest in your welfare and my devoted efforts to serve you are only rewarded with furious looks. The less we see of each other the better. Permit me to thank you for your invitation, and to decline accompanying you when you leave Mount Morven to-morrow."

Mrs. Linley answered the note in person. The next day Kitty's grandmother—ripe for more mischief on the next favorable occasion—altered her mind and thoroughly enjoyed her journey to the seaside.

XVI.

During the first week there was an improvement in the child's health, which justified the doctor's hopeful anticipations. Mrs. Linley wrote cheerfully to her husband; and the better nature of Mrs. Linley's mother seemed, by some inscrutable process, to thrive morally under the encouraging influences of the sea air. It may be a bold thing to say, but it is surely true that our virtues depend greatly on the state of our health.

During the second week the reports sent to Mount Morven were less encouraging. The improvement in Kitty was maintained; but it made no further progress.

The lapse of the third week brought with it depressing results. There could be no doubt now that the child was losing ground. Bitterly disappointed, Mrs. Linley wrote to her medical adviser, describing the symptoms, and asking for instructions. The doctor wrote back: "Find out where your supply of drinking water comes from. If from a well, let me know how it is situated. Answer by telegraph." The reply arrived: "A well near the parish church." The doctor's advice ran back along the wires: "Come home instantly."

They returned the same day—and they returned too late.

Kitty's first night at home was wakeful and restless; her little hands felt feverish, and she was tormented by perpetual thirst. The good doctor still spoke hopefully, attributing the symptoms to fatigue after the journey. But, as the days followed each other, his medical visits were paid at shorter intervals. The mother noticed that his pleasant face became grave and anxious, and implored him to tell her the truth. The truth was told in two dreadful words: "Typhoid fever."

A day or two later the doctor spoke privately with Mr. Linley. The child's debilitated condition—that lowered state of the vital power which he had observed when Kitty's case was first submitted to him—placed a terrible obstacle in the way of successful resistance to the advance of the disease. "Say nothing to Mrs. Linley just yet. There is no absolute danger so far, unless delirium sets in." "Do you think it likely?" Linley asked. The doctor shook his head, and said "God knows."

On the next evening but one the fatal symptom showed itself. There was nothing violent in the delirium. Unconscious of past events in the family life, the poor child supposed that her governess was living in the house as usual. She piteously wondered why Sydney remained down-stairs in the school-room. "Oh, don't keep her away from me! I want Syd! I want Syd!" That was her one cry. When exhaustion silenced her they hoped that the sad delusion was at an end. No! As the slow fire of the fever flamed up again the same words were on the child's lips—the same fond hope was in her sinking heart.

The doctor led Mrs. Linley out of the room. "Is this the governess?" he asked.

"Yes!"

"Is she within easy reach?"

"She is employed in the family of a friend of ours, living nine miles away from us."

"Send for her instantly!"

Mrs. Linley looked at him with a wildly mingled expression of hope and fear. She was not thinking of herself—she was not even thinking, for that one moment, of the child. What would her husband say, if she (who had extorted his promise never to see the governess again) brought Sydney Westerfield back to the house?

The doctor spoke to her more strongly still.

"I don't presume to inquire into your private reasons for hesitating to follow my advice," he said; "but I am bound to tell you the truth. My poor little patient is in serious danger—every hour of delay is an hour gained by death. Bring that lady to the bedside as fast as a carriage can fetch her, and let us see the result. If Kitty recognizes the governess—there, I tell you plainly, is the one chance of saving the child's life."

Mrs. Linley's resolution flashed on him in her weary eyes—the eyes which, by day and night alike, had known so little rest. She rang for her maid. "Tell your master I want to speak to him."

The woman answered: "My master has gone out."

The doctor watched the mother's face. No sign of hesitation appeared in it—the one thought in her mind now was the thought of the child. She called the maid back.

"Order the carriage."

"At what time do you want it, ma'am?"

"At once!"

XVII.

Mrs. Linley's first impulse in ordering the carriage was to use it herself. One look at the child reminded her that her freedom of action began and ended at the bedside. Two hours at least must elapse before Sydney Westerfield could be brought back to Mount Morven. The first thought of what might happen in that interval, if she was absent, filled the mother with horror. She wrote to Mrs. Macklewain and sent her child with the letter.

Of the result of this proceeding it was not possible to entertain a doubt.

Sydney's love for Kitty would hesitate at no sacrifice, and Mrs. MacKlewain's conduct had already answered for her. She had received the governess with the utmost kindness, and she had generously and delicately refrained from asking any questions. But one person at Mount Morven thought it necessary to investigate the motives under which she had acted. Mrs. Presty's inquiring mind arrived at discoveries, and Mrs. Presty's sense of duty communicated them to her daughter.

"There can be no sort of doubt, Catherine, that our good friend and neighbor has heard, probably from the servants, of what has happened; and (having her husband to consider—men are so weak!) has drawn her own conclusions. If she trusts our fascinating governess, it's because she knows that Miss Westerfield's affections are left behind her in this house. Does my explanation satisfy you?"

Mrs. Linley said: "Never let me hear it again!"

And Mrs. Presty answered: "How very ungrateful!"

The dreary interval of expectation, after the departure of the carriage, was brightened by a domestic event.

Thinking it possible that Mrs. Presty might know why her husband had left the house, Mrs. Linley sent to ask for information. The message in reply informed her that Linley had received a telegram announcing Randal's return from London. He had gone to the railway station to meet his brother.

Before she went down-stairs to welcome Randal, Mrs. Linley paused to consider her situation. The one alternative before her was to acknowledge, at the earliest opportunity, that she had assumed the serious responsibility of sending for Sydney Westerfield. For the first time in her life Catherine Linley found herself planning beforehand what she would say in speaking to her husband.

A second message interrupted her, announcing that the two brothers had just arrived. She joined them immediately in the drawing-room.

Linley was sitting in a corner by himself. The dreadful discovery that the child's life, (by the doctor's confession) was in danger had completely overwhelmed him; he never even lifted his head when his wife opened the door. Randal and Mrs. Presty were talking together. The old lady's insatiable curiosity was eager for news from London; she wanted to know how Randal had amused himself when he was not attending to business.

He was grieving for Kitty; and he was looking sadly at his brother. "I don't remember," he answered, absently. Other women might have discovered that they had chosen their time badly. Mrs. Presty, with the best possible intentions, remonstrated.

A Wonderful Shot.

The man who put ten bullets in succession, inside the circumference of a Milwaukee girl's finger ring, at fifteen paces, was a pretty good shot, but he wasn't half so wise as the billious man who put ten of "Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" into his system in five days, and on the sixth walked ten miles "just because he felt so well." If he wasn't out of order, if you feel low-spirited and "blue," you will find these Little Liver Pills just what you need. 6dw48

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty-six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41

"Where does it have the largest sale?"

Right in the city of Hamilton, where it is manufactured, there has been over one thousand dollars' worth sold in the last year retail, and the great majority of the sales are by one recommending to another. For sale at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by John McKee, druggist. eodw48

Government Appointments.

The following appointments were made by Sir John Macdonald during his visit to Peterborough, Thursday:

Mr. Wm. Toole, ex-mayor of Peterborough, recently residing at Stonewall, Man., has been appointed superintendent of the mechanical department in Stoney Mountain penitentiary, N. W. T.

Mr. Richard Cook, who was wounded at Batoche during the rebellion, has been appointed land agent at Prince Albert.

A Cold Bath.

A large number of young people took advantage of the combined beauties of new moonlight and fine ice on Little Lake last night, and skated to their heart's content. One young man, who thought he knew the lake well enough to avoid all dangerous places, after properly adjusting the glittering steels to his nimble feet, made a bold dash from the shore, but had scarcely caught his breath before he found himself struggling in twenty feet of ice cold water. No one was at hand to render the least assistance, but by dint of perseverance and a liberal exercise of muscle, the young man succeeded in finding a solid foothold. On the way home, with clothing frozen stiff as a board, teeth chattering and limbs benumbed, the unfortunate young jeweller was frequently met with the maddening query, "Is skating good, Mac.?" Mac. is subjected to unmerciful "roasting" at the hands of his chums who have heard of the affair.

To-night will, therefore, witness the enthusiastic, if not formal, inauguration of the "roarin game" for the winter of '86-'87. The skating rink will be in condition on Monday, and we may expect to see hung out the welcome placard "Skating To-day."

Peterborough Lodge, A. F. & A. M.

At the regular meeting, held on Friday evening, the elective officers were chosen. There was a large attendance of the brethren. It is understood that Rev. W. C. Bradshaw has been requested to deliver a sermon to the Masonic fraternity in St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, on Sunday afternoon, December 26th, the day before the festival of St. John the Evangelist, and that the reverend gentleman has signified his compliance with the request.

A New Railway.

While at Cobourg, Sir John Macdonald was presented by the town council with an address, which, besides some complimentary remarks, requested the Government to assume control of the harbor, and asked for aid to a railway connecting Cobourg to Peterborough, so as to get connection with the C. P. R. Sir John promised to take the harbor question into his serious consideration, while he regarded the request as to the railway as an abdoration of the policy of the Government in bonusing railways.

More Sheep Worried.

Mr. Wm. Fowler, of North Monaghan, had several sheep worried to death by dogs the other night.

Mr. Robert Leroy, North Monaghan, early Friday morning heard a disturbance outside his house, and on investigating found that a small collie dog had driven eleven sheep from their pens down into the creek, where five had already been worried to death, and three more were badly lacerated. At daylight he traced the animal to a neighbour's house, who settled the affair by paying for the sheep and destroying the dog.

Wednesday night Mr. Joseph Bennett, a near neighbor of Mr. Leroy, had two sheep worried to death, it is supposed, by the same dog.

Fine Florida Oranges, 50c. and 60c. per dozen, at Ostrom's.

Municipal Elections.

The municipal elections in this and surrounding townships says the Norwood Register, promise to prove very exciting. In Asphodel, Mr. Walsh will altogether likely have opposition for the reeveship, while Messrs. Jas. Stephenson and Donald Cameron will oppose Mr. James Moore for the deputy-reeveship. Councillors Harrison and Elliott, two "solid men" and as good as ever sat at the council board, will seek re-election. In Belmont and Methuen, Mr. John Brown, reeve, will likely be elected without opposition, while for the deputy-reeveship John Vanaickle or Wm. Burgess will probably be selected. Both are good men and would fill the position with ability. It is not likely that there will be much change in the councillors, they having given every satisfaction during the past year. In Dummer we may expect A. R. Kidd, reeve, to be returned by accalamation, and Mr. Geo. Kirk to be elected deputy-reeve.

The "Chestnut Combination."

The Globe irreverently calls the Dominion ministers who are stairring through the country, the "chestnut combination," and ministers don't seem to be thereby at all injured in feelings or reputation. Their talk seemed to flow in Peterborough, as though the word "chestnut" had never been whispered. They tried to make us believe we had no debt, that every thing was booming, and that the N. P. was the white headed boy, but Belleghem the Famous Furniture Factor, who is a candidate for the people's suffrages, takes the broad platform that the people don't require protection—that is the people who buy their furniture from Belleghem. His goods are of so superior a quality, the prices are so reasonable and he has made so high a reputation for a square dealing that they need no other protection. The public recognize in Belleghem the candidate who works for their dearest home interests; they are depositing their ballots, (procured from the banks) every day, and he is sure to be sweepingly elected.

Police Court.

SATURDAY, Dec. 4th.

QUEEN VS. SIMPSON.—A charge of tampering with a witness was preferred against John Simpson, jr. Gilbert Peck, one of the witnesses who did not appear in court yesterday to give evidence in the Scott Act case against Simpson, was alleged to have been bribed by the defendant to keep out of the way. Mr. Peck was apprehended yesterday on the strength of a warrant, and this morning gave evidence which proved the innocence of the defendant. The charge was dismissed.

Personal.

Mr. Jas. Little was called away to Paris, Ont., yesterday, by the sudden death of his sister.

Mr. W. Dixon last night gave an exhibition of his ventriloquial powers before a Lindsay audience. His efforts were well received.

Mr. Chas. Porter, of Porter Bros., the leading carriage makers of Peterborough, says the Herald, was in Omemee on Tuesday last. While in Lindsay on Wednesday Mr. Porter took orders for a number of rigs of different kinds.

Church Chimes.

Services in the Baptist church will be conducted to-morrow by the Rev. John M. Munro of McMaster Hall, Toronto.

The ordinance of baptism will be administered at St. Paul's church to-morrow morning.

The New Chancel.

Repairs to St. Luke's Church Chancel About Completed—Great Improvement.

For several weeks past, Mr. Henry Carveth, contractor, has been working on the repairs and improvements to the chancel of St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, designed by Mr. W. Blackwell, architect, and as a result the appearance of the church has been greatly enhanced. The chancel has been extended to connect with the school house, so that by means of a hall-way built alongside the chancel, a continuous passage may now be made through the church to the school room. A new organ chamber has been built about 11x12 feet, and the organ shifted from the corner to the centre of the chancel on the south side. Then the ceiling has been raised three or four feet, and is built of panelled and ribbed imitation cherry and walnut. The floor too has been raised several inches and the organ placed on a level with the chancel. Three new stained glass windows have been added, and the chancel window, by taking away the sash that enclosed it, has been enlarged in order to fill the frame. A number of new choir seats are also been added to the chancel, and a handsome new chandelier of about 40 jets will furnish ample light. The walls are intended to be frescoed, and a handsome new carpet will be placed on the floor. An enlargement has besides been made to the vestry, in which several new windows have been put. Off the passage, connecting the church and the school room, is a door opening on the grounds, which have been levelled and new drains and sidewalks built. In the school room a brick floor has been sunk, and a new chandelier will shortly be suspended. The work is all completed, except putting down the carpet and frescoing the walls, but these will be done as soon as convenient. The formal opening of the chancel will not take plac till Sunday, Dec. 12th, as the work will not be totally finished till Tuesday next.

Plain Workhouse Fare for the Evicted.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The London correspondent of the Mail and Express telegraphs that the British Government has decided to prohibit the guardians of the poor in Ireland from devoting special wards in the workhouses to the accommodation of evicted tenants. The Local Government Board has notified the New Ross Board of Guardians that unless they abandon the use of a special ward for this purpose, which was created by them in obedience to the command of the Nationalist leaders, who say the Local Government Board seek to convert the workhouses into garrisons against the landlords, they will be immediately suspended and vice-guardians appointed instead, to carry out the behests of the Tory officials.

A Martyr to the Cause.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 3.—William Dorsey, the Labor candidate in the recent election for Congress in the Twentieth District, has been discharged from his position as beater in the Union Rolling Mill. The company are understood to have objected to Dorsey's candidacy, but feared to excite enmity by discharging him at the time. He was absent on account of illness Monday, and this furnished a pretext for dismissal. It is thought the Amalgamated Association, of which he is a member, will take action. Dorsey cut down the Republican majority in his district from 3000 to 800 at the late election.

Strange Fruit on Texas Trees.

BRENHAM, Texas, Dec. 3.—At an early hour yesterday morning an armed mob came to town, overpowered the jailor and took out Steve Feldner, Alfred Jones and Ephraim Jones, three of the negroes implicated in the killing of Dewes Bolton at Flewelin's store, this county, on election night, and lynched them. It was so quickly done that the town was not aroused. The bodies of the three men were found hanging to a tree in the morning. There is no clue to the perpetrators. It is feared the affair will raise political excitement very high.

Cholera in the Argentine Republic.

BUENOS AYRES, Dec. 3.—During the past twenty-four hours there have been 17 new cases of cholera and 9 deaths in this city, 34 cases and 25 deaths at Rosario and 12 cases and 5 deaths at Cardova.

Fire at Alvinston.

ALVINSTON, Dec. 3.—Malone Bros.' grain warehouse, containing about 300 bushels of peas, was totally destroyed by fire last night Loss $2000; insured for $1200 in the Huron & Middlesex Company. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A Mad Family's Delusion.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Another murder resulting from superstition has been brought to light in Brittany. A widow and two sons and daughter having been told that an elder sister was possessed of the devil set upon her and atrociously tortured her to death by piercing her body all over with sharp instruments, the mother and one sister meantime praying beside the victim to exorcise the devil. When arrested they behaved like maniacs. They were all sent to an asylum.

Baron Leckendorf's Suicide.

VIENNA, Dec. 1.—The suicide of Baron Leckendorf, professor in the College of Agriculture, which was announced yesterday, was due to the failure of his intellect. A post mortem examination disclosed the fact that his brain was softening. A paper found on the Baron's desk showed he had been trying without success to solve a mathematical problem to be used in a lecture which he was to deliver.

The Belgium Mail Robbery.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 1.—The police authorities, feeling convinced that the thieves who stole the mail from the Ostend express on Saturday are in England, have abandoned the search on the Continent and have sent a detective to London to trace the robbers.

Received to Accept no Honors.

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.—L. D. Sullivan has been re-elected Lord Mayor of Dublin, and Mr. O'Keefe, a solicitor, has been elected Mayor of Limerick. Messrs. Sullivan and O'Keefe have pledged themselves to refuse any honors which may be offered by the Queen during the jubilee year.

Three Thousand Miners on Strike.

COALTON, O., Dec. 1.—All the miners in this, the seventh district, numbering from 2500 to 3000, came out this morning on a refusal by the operators to grant an increase of five cents per ton for mining. A long siege is expected.

Snow Storm at Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Dec. 1.—Four inches of snow fell this afternoon and evening; temperature 18° above zero.

The Salt Coal Ring Story Denied.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Charles Labbott, agent of the Columbus and Hocking Valley Coal and Iron Company, says the statement that a combination had been formed between the four great coal-carrying railroads and the Hocking operators to restrict the output and advance the price of soft coal has not a vestige of truth in it.

A Fact to be Remembered and that is we don't sell or propose to sell goods at cost, nor do we sell you the best All Wool Flannels at 18c. per yard, we sell you the goods as we advertise them. It would never do to sell Flannels that cost 30c. per yard at 18c.

WHY

Will people pay rent when houses and lots can be purchased on such easy terms as are offered by the undesigned. Come and inspect our work and see for yourselves how we construct our houses. Our chief aim and study is to build substantial, warm, frost and damp proof houses. I am offering good building lots, and will build solid brick houses, nine-inch walls, strapped and lath and plastered, two stories, for less money than you can buy frame or veneered buildings. We cordially invite those who anticipate renting or buying to inspect our work and prove for themselves that our houses are not merely built to sell. Every house I've sold gives first-class satisfaction, and I am determined that every house I build shall be a standing testimony to honest building. THE CAMPBELL CASE.

HER MAJESTY SAID TO BE VERY ANGRY AT THE REVELATIONS.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—On the opening of the Campbell divorce case to-day, Mr. Finlay, defendant's counsel, stated that Lord Colin Campbell believed that the testimony of Amy Wright, the nurse, that Lady Colin was suffering from disease at the time of her marriage, was false.

Baker, a groom in the employ of Sir Charles Foster, deposed that in June and July, 1883, he saw Lady Colin several times entering the Duke of Marlborough's house. Margaret Low, a housemaid in the service of the Duke of Argyll, testified to the lateness of Lady Colin's return home from her visits to the Duke of Marlborough.

A number of other witnesses were then called to testify to the Duke of Marlborough's visits to Lady Colin. Justice Butt begged of counsel not to prolong the case by the production of unnecessary evidence. "At the present rate the hearing of the testimony will last a month," said the justice.

Davis, a travelling servant, testified that he watched Lady Campbell in Paris and saw her at several hotels where she received visits from the Duke of Marlborough. The hearing was then adjourned.

The case will be prolonged another week. There are forty witnesses yet remaining to be examined. Since the disclosures in court of the peculiar and unconventional life of the lady there is a marked revulsion of feeling toward her. The strong sympathy which her case at first excited has gradually worn away. Whether she be actually guilty of the charges made against her by the defence or not, public sentiment has been arrayed against her on general principles. Under the worst evidence which the opposing counsel have elicited her bearing has been offensively unconcerned. She sits throughout each day beside her mother and sister and Lady Miles, listening to it all with the equanimity of a person not specially interested in the case. Her manner is so like that of Mrs. Crawford that, whatever may be the merits of the case, she has come to be regarded with similar aversion. The publication of the details of the proceedings is causing a clamor among respectable people for the hearing of all divorce suits in private. The newspapers in the meantime are reaping a mighty harvest from their immensely increased sales. The Carlton and other aristocratic clubs manifest an intense interest in the case. It is felt that it has become one of great social and political consequence to the aristocracy and that it is sapping the position of swelldom in England. "A few more Campbell divorce cases," says a leading society journal, "and there will be a revolution." The Queen is known to be greatly shocked and pained by the affair, although the Princess Louise warned her of what might be expected on seeing the outlines of the evidence. It is reported that Her Majesty has expressed her anger to the Duke of Argyll against the imprudence of permitting the divorce to become a scandal. The Prince of Wales takes the same view of the matter. Whistler's portrait of Lady Colin Campbell is the centre of attraction in the British Art Gallery. It is a full length, a harmony in white and ivory; and is the picture of a beautiful, stately and graceful woman, in evening costume, holding up the train of her dress.

ROSSA'S NEW CIRCLE.

He Forms An Alliance With Philadelphia Fenians and is Getting Ready for War.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5.—It is reported here that O'Donovan Rossa has formed an alliance with the Fenians in Philadelphia who have been cut off from the parent body. It has been learned that a secret meeting was held in this city on Thanksgiving day for the purpose of perfecting the organization of the new body. There were present at the meeting about twenty-five delegates, each of whom claimed to represent a division. An exciting session resulted. After a long debate it was found to be practically impossible to unite upon a local member, who should be the ruling spirit, and Rossa was selected. It is stated that the plans of the new organization differ somewhat from those of the former association, but the aims of both societies are identical. A portion of the revised program includes secret intrigues against the Canadian Government to the end that the people of Canada may become discontented and throw off England's authority altogether. If it is shown that this has a probability of success, emissaries are to be sent to Australia with the same purpose in view. The pet doctrine of Rossa is not, however, to be abandoned by any means. It is hinted in view of the recent coercive measures on the other side that measures will be taken to avenge the oppression of the peasants. The leaders mentioned deny that they have formulated the program given above, but it has gradually leaked out through the expressions of a number of their followers who are disgusted with the selection of Rossa as chief.

THE OPENING OF CONGRESS.

Both Houses to Receive President Cleveland's Address To-Day.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 5.—The second session of the forty-ninth Congress will begin at noon to-morrow. After prayer and roll call each House will appoint a committee to inform the other of its readiness to proceed to business. The new members who are to fill the vacancies caused by death and resignation will be sworn in. Upon the completion of the formal organization, a joint committee will wait upon the President to inform him that a quorum of each House is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make. The President's annual message will then be received, and after its reading the formal announcement in the Senate of the death of Senator [illegible] of the House of [illegible] will be made. The Senate will then adjourn and the House will immediately by adjournment [illegible] necessary of the deceased. The business of the session is expected to begin on Tuesday.

IRISH LEAGUE'S WAR.

THE MOVEMENT SAID TO BE THE MOST EFFECTIVE EVER KNOWN.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—To-night's reports from Ireland state that the rent movement, instead of being checked, as contemplated by the Dublin Castle officials, as the result of the proceedings against John Dillon, continues to spread, if possible, with increasing rapidity. The difficulty of the leaders, as stated in private telegrams from them to-night, is to restrain rather than stimulate the tenants. The latter in many places are forcing a rupture, while the league prefers to exhaust every effort to arrive at an amicable settlement with the landlords. The opinion is rapidly spreading among the tenants that their leaders will in a short time be imprisoned; that the Government prosecutions will be so strained as to prevent justice being done, and that the National League will be suppressed. This has contributed largely to making the movement of 1886 the most effective ever known in Ireland, and is daily bringing hundreds of fresh recruits into the Nationalist camp. If the Government is so misguarded as to prove by its action that these dark anticipations are well founded, the end of it will be the irretrievable ruin of the landlords. It will be too late to draw back when coercive measures have once been adopted as the deliberate policy of the Government. Nor will the Cabinet even be allowed a chance to pass the proposed Land Purchase bill as an escape from the dilemma into which they have been suffering the landlords to drive them, if repression is to prevail. The Liberals are pledged to oppose the proposed Tory settlement of the purchase question whenever it comes up. The Parnellites will be fully justified at that time in joining the Liberals in opposition to the measure, because the settlement of the land question by the tenants themselves, without help furnished by the Government than that offered by a coercive policy, is certain. In any case, the next session of Parliament will be the stormiest known for many years. All parties agree on that point. The Government is in for a row, no matter what course they adopt. Whether they give precedence to the cloture or coercion the result will be the same, the session will be entirely occupied with the Irish question, and all other public business must submit to further postponement. Nothing can prevent this short of the wholesale suspension of Irish members. The Unionists are in a bad frame of mind, and the resolutions to be submitted at next Tuesday's meeting will undoubtedly be of a violent character. Their agents represent that the Unionists are practically united, and those who dissent from the views of the majority will refrain from disturbing the harmony of the proceedings.

The Dublin agent of the Central News telegraphs that the Irish Executive, in consequence of the proceedings at yesterday's Cabinet council, is preparing for a determined struggle against the Irish National League. The proposed warfare, the telegram asserts, will include proclamations of all league meetings and arrests of the prominent anti-rent agitators. The agent adds that he has reason to believe that the issure of United Ireland has also been decided upon by the Government.

The coercive policy of the Government is approved by Lord Hartington. The Liberal-Unionist conference which meets on Tuesday will be asked to affirm the necessity of vindicating the law and the rights of property in Ireland. After the conference a banquet will be given. Applications for 3,000 seats have been received. This will be the first grand demonstration held by the Unionists.

A Scrub With the Police at Cork.

CORK, Dec. 5.—At a meeting addressed by William O'Brien in one of the public streets of this city to-day, a number of policemen present were stoned. The latter retaliated by drawing their swords and charging upon the crowd. The officers, finding their members unequal to the task of subduing their assailants, then ran to the barracks for assistance. The mayor appeared upon the scene and said he was responsible for the peace of the city, and would not allow the police to charge upon the people. Police Inspector Cotter, who had also arrived, placed his men in line and the stone throwing was renewed in the presence of the Mayor, some of the officers being struck by the missiles. Inspector Shannon arrived with further assistance and told the Mayor that he would not see his men made targets of, nor would he obey his orders. The Mayor then retired. Divisional Magistrate Capt. Plunkett had commanded the police to be present at the meeting.

MIDNIGHT—There was serious rioting this evening and a number of policemen and citizens were injured, the latter by bayonet thrusts. The city is now quiet. Twenty-three persons have been treated at the hospital for scalp wounds; one policeman had his skull fractured.

Police Must Not Assist Bailiffs.

A private house near by has caught and cannot be saved with the meagre facilities at hand for combatting with the fire. Scarcity of water and want of proper means for combatting fire render the situation more alarming, but hopes are entertained that it is now under control. PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

The recent adoption of the Mail of a prohibition platform will deceive nobody. The Mail is not sincere in the matter, because, in spite of its protestations, it gives the lie to its bona fides. In the whole present campaign it has not spoken one word in favor of a Reform candidate who comes out as a prohibitionist, and it has not withheld one word of praise from a Conservative candidate, no matter how pronounced he is against temperance. The Mail clamours for prohibition, yet it supports the Dominion Government, whose action in reference to the disposition of Scott Act fines the Dominion Alliance condemns in these words:—"That this council desires to express its deep regret at the orders in council issued by the Dominion Government relating to Scott Act fines, appropriating the same in a manner which not only fails to facilitate, but seriously impedes the due enforcement of the law." The Mail and other Conservative organs want to throw the whole responsibility of enforcing the Scott Act upon the Ontario Government. Yet the Mail's Government at Ottawa refuses to allow the Provincial Government to have the use of fines to be used in enforcing the Act. They are given over to the municipalities, and if the latter neglect to enforce the Scott Act, though they have the funds, the Conservative organs seek to throw the blame upon the Local Government. This is not fair, of course, but it is done, not in the pretended interest of temperance, but simply to embarass the Ontario Government. The game is too transparent, and few will be deceived by it when once it is exposed.

WHY?

Why should Protestants countenance any attempt to make ill-feeling with Roman Catholic fellow-citizens about the Separate Schools? What difference do they make to us? We are not compelled to support them. Roman Catholics even are not compelled to support them. They may do so or not as they see fit. The Separate School system is practically the same as it has been for years past. Why, then, this new crusade against it? Because the organs of Sir John believe that his only chance to retain power is by stirring up sectarian strife. Sir John, rather than relinquish office and see his Ontario allies unsuccessful in their attempts to reach the Treasury Benches, would set Protestants and Catholics at each others' throats. He and his followers would willingly turn Canada into a second Belfast. Is there any thinking Canadian so reckless, so unpatriotic, so wicked, so foolish, as to countenance the vile attempt?—an attempt which, if successful, will work tenfold greater disaster to Canada than did the Northwest rebellion with all its losses in blood and money.

Mistakes, Troubles and Disappointments of Married Life.

SERMON BY LAYMAN.

(Written for The Examiner.)

Marriage is intended to be a contract entered into by two persons, for their mutual benefit and advantage. A union of interests and feelings for success in life. A leaving of the old home and the commencement of a journey over a new road, on which they are expected to continue together for all time to come, and to live in peace and comfort and happiness. But in order to insure this state of things this contract should only be undertaken calmly and seriously, far from all imagination or false sentiment or feeling. It should be the result of long acquaintance and a thorough knowledge of each other's inclinations, habits and desires. People who contract marriage by quoting poetry or by gazing at the moon need not be surprised if afterwards they find out that poetry and the moon are poor helps to prosperity and happiness. And that when disagreements and troubles and hard times come upon them they are not going to better their condition by quoting poetry and looking at the moon. They will find that the days for such foolishness are over and that they have got to put on the harness and work. Affectations and playing the piano and warbling sentimental songs will not keep the wolf from the door nor increase their love for one another. They must come down to hard facts, and talk and act like sensible people. They must learn the value of time and money. And they will surely find out before very long that domestic peace and comfort do pend upon the exercise of good common sense and upon industry and economy. All these things show how the marriage contract should be created and maintained. It is too common a thing to see two young people billing and cooing and to give pledges of eternal love and constancy while they are separate and free. To have them say that they cannot live apart—and that their thoughts by day and dreams by night are ever of each other. They fancy that they are love sick and that their silly feelings and silllier conduct indicate a true, practical, everlasting guarantee of their union and future happiness; and when they do marry, what is the beginning of their new life? Among those of any pretensions, the first thing they must do is to waste means, which they can employ to better use, in taking what is called a wedding tour. Instead of settling down quietly in their new home, they must go abroad and squander their time and money in following a fashion which is too common, and which can only be done at a sacrifice of convenience and comfort, and without any corresponding advantage, except it be that they can feel they have followed a senseless, expensive and useless fashion. And thus the money which could be better spent in providing household comforts and in making provision for the future is wasted and gone. And very often the last dollar is used in this way. And thus they begin their new life. And if these young people have not already contracted expensive habits, their parents and friends do their best to encourage them in that direction. The wedding gifts, instead of being composed of solid, useful articles, must consist of shining silverware and rich ornaments, which are of no earthly use to young people just commencing life, and which can only tend to extravagance and trouble. And they must give receptions and parties, and fritter away their time and means in trying to make a show of pride and fine living. But this state of things cannot always last, and the day must surely come when they have got to provide for the real means of existence. There is no doubt that the greater part of the troubles of married life arise through hasty and inconsiderate marriages and through the love of romance. If people could only be brought to consider the solemn realities of married life and to look upon it seriously, to look upon it as a union for life in order to secure their future peace, prosperity and happiness, there would be fewer causes of complaint, and the future would be easier and better. Fine furniture and expensive habits and feelings will destroy more peace and comfort than can be remedied in many years. As a rule, young people begin where their parents leave off; they start out in life with all sail set, top gallant sails and all, and then the first little breeze that overtakes them overturns their frail craft, and leaves them a prey to the wind and waves. And all their hopes are gone; and they will remain gone until they learn to begin life again and do as reason and common sense dictate they should do. Let us take some examples of real life to show the practical effect of this mode of living; examples that we have every day before us, and what do we behold? Yonder is a husband and wife who once thought there would be nothing but misery if they were kept separate any longer. They imagined that they could not live apart and survive. So, full of protestations of enduring love, and full of expectations of future happiness, they were married. Like all others of this class, they had their honeymoon and wedding tour, and then they came home, as they thought, to enjoy a life full to overflowing with peace and comfort and happiness. The wife, now so surely married, does not always feel like toying and caressing as was once the case. And sometimes she thought it was too much trouble to be as careful of her dress as she once was. And sometimes something had gone wrong and she was out of temper. And there was not the same care in the household. She thought more of her own convenience, and wondered why her husband so often looked disappointed and displeased. And sometimes her manner and her words were not always the kindest. She wanted many things which her husband thought she could do without. You may be sure there was trouble brewing in that household. The poor, silly wife could not realize the effects of her ill-advised and thoughtless conduct. She could not see the little cloud in the distance or the feelings of displeasure which occasionally showed themselves in her husband's countenance. After a time she complained of his occasional absence, an absence which became more frequent as time wore on. Thus her complaints assumed another form and became scoldings and upbraidings. But matters grew worse, and by and by the husband was not seen for days together. And still the wife would not see the cause. Her fits of ill-temper became worse and more frequent. The husband neglected his business and contracted bad and vicious habits. The end soon came, and all their youthful visions of glory and happiness vanished. Then, when too late, the foolish wife saw her error. All she could do now was to look back upon the days of her courtship and marriage, and see just where she pursued the wrong road, which had led to all her subsequent troubles and sorrow. Take another case. The wife was young and trusting, and fondly believed all her husband's ante-nuptial protestations and promises. He had faults, one greater than the rest, but she thought she could win him over to herself by kindness and love. Her sun of happiness shone bright for a while, but it soon became darkened and her hopes were fast being driven away. She felt that her influence, if she ever had any, was gone. She wonders if her husband ever meant to carry out his many promises of good conduct or whether he only meant to deceive. Her life became gloomy and solitary, and the nights long and tedious. When alone she was often in tears, but she tried hard to bear up, and she still hoped on. It is needless to tell how things went from bad to worse, and how at last her life was given over to hardships and sorrow. At last, however, she was free. Her husband's vices and follies placed him in his grave, leaving a young wife behind to fight the world alone. Now, let us take still another, and happily, a better example, showing what married life might be when brought about through the aid of a sound judgment. Two neighbors lived near together; one had a son and the other a daughter. They were all sober, industrious people, and vain, foolish pride had no foothold in their households. They lived quietly and peacefully and happily. The son and daughter had early been taught the value of industry and economy. They knew the wishes and dispositions of each other. They married and began their married life pledged to follow out what had been so carefully taught them by their parents. They left the old homes for the new one and began their future life free from extravagance and folly; they did not live for fashion and pleasure, but they lived for themselves, making no one ashamed and setting no bad example. It is needless to say that their paths were paths of pleasantness and peace. Everything around them prospered, and they were looked upon as worthy of imitation and praise. And they lived happily and died the death of the righteous. Died as they had lived, trusting to meet again in the better land. The moral of all I have written upon the subject of marriage is easy to understand. One great fundamental natural law underlies and rules over all. In all other questions of a civil or social character justice and right must be recognized and must prevail. God's law gives the same justice to every human being, and all men's dealings, of whatever nature or kind, must be based upon religion and truth. And no where should this obligation more strongly prevail then in the marriage contract and in the dealings of the husband and wife with each other. This obligation is voluntarily recognized at the marriage ceremony and both parties agree to carry it out honestly and fully. Justice, simple justice, justice to the husband and justice to the wife have become religious duties, and woe to the man or woman who breaks the law.

Mothers,

do you not see the pallid face, once so bright, growing thinner? Do you not hear the hacking cough, and note the wasted, languid indifference, where once was mirth, brightness, and keen enjoyment for all the pleasures of life? Do not be mistaken or deceived. That child is dying of consumption—slowly, but surely. Yet thousands are living today who have been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which surpass all other medicines for the cure of that disease. One Price and Square Dealing to All!

This week, the public will receive the benefit of an extraordinary LOW PURCHASE of SEASONABLE OVERCOATS and SUITS, and any intending purchaser will miss it, if they do not call and examine them. We are determined to be the Poor Man's Friend, and if in fulfilling this mission, we break the back bone of these High Price Clothiers, I am sorry, as I wish them no harm. But having inaugurated this in PETERBOROUGH, I must bow to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. Always keep in mind, that the man who does as he ADVERTISES, and Refunds the Money if Goods are not Satisfactory, is GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN.

This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

"Really, Randal, you must rouse yourself. Surely you can tell me something. Did you meet with any agreeable people while you were away?"

"I met one person who interested me," he said, with weary resignation.

Mrs. Presty smiled. "A woman, of course?"

"A man," Randal answered; "a guest like myself at a club dinner."

"Who is he?"

"Capt. Bennydeck."

"In the army?"

"No; formerly in the navy."

"And you and he had a long talk together?"

Randal's tones began to betray irritation. "No," he said; "we were at opposite ends of the table—and the captain went away early."

Mrs. Presty's vigorous intellect discovered an improbability here. "Then how came you to feel interested in him?" she objected.

Even Randal's patience gave way. "I can't account for it," he said, sharply. "I only know I took a liking to Capt. Bennydeck." He left Mrs. Presty and sat down by his brother. "You know I feel for you," he said, taking Linley's hand. "Try to hope."

The bitterness of the father's despair broke out in his answer. "I can bear other troubles, Randal, as well as most men. This affliction revolts me. There's something so horribly unnatural in the child being threatened by death, while the parents (who should die first) are alive and well——" He checked himself. "I had better say no more, I shall only shock you."

The misery in his face wrung the faithful heart of his wife. She forgot the constitutory expressions which she had prepared herself to use. "Hope, my dear, as Randal tells you," she said, "because there is hope."

His face flushed, his dim eyes brightened. "Has the doctor said it?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Why haven't I been told of it before?"

"When I sent for you I heard that you had gone out."

The explanation passed by him unnoticed—perhaps even unheard. "Tell me what the doctor said," he insisted; "I want it exactly, word for word."

She obeyed him to the letter.

The sinister change in his face, as the narrative proceeded, was observed by both the other persons present, as well as by his wife. She waited for a kind word of encouragement. He only said, coldly: "What have you done?"

Speaking coldly on her side, she answered: "I have sent the carriage to fetch Miss Westerfield."

There was a pause. Mrs. Presty whispered to Randal: "I knew she would come back again! The Evil Genius of the family—that's what I call Miss Westerfield. The name exactly fits her!"

The idea in Randal's mind was that the name exactly fitted Mrs. Presty. He made no reply; his eyes rested in sympathy on his sister-in-law. She saw, and felt, his kindness at a time when kindness was doubly precious. Her tones trembled a little as she spoke to her silent husband.

"Don't you approve of what I have done, Herbert?"

His nerves were shattered by grief and suspense, but he made an effort this time to speak gently. "How can I say that," he replied, "if the poor child's life depends on Miss Westerfield? I ask one favor—give me time to leave the house before she comes here."

Mrs. Linley looked at him in amazement.

Her mother touched her arm; Randal tried by a sign to warn her to be careful. Their calmer minds had seen what the wife's agitation had prevented her from discovering. In Linley's position the return of the governess was a trial to his self-control which he found it hard to dread; his look, his voice, his manner, proclaimed it to persons capable of quietly observing him. He had struggled against his guilty passion—at what sacrifice of his own feelings no one knew but himself—and here was the temptation, at the very time when he was honorably resisting it, brought back to him by his wife! Her motive did unquestionably excuse, perhaps even sanction, what she had done; but this was an estimate of her conduct which commended itself to others. From his point of view—motive or no motive—he saw the old struggle against himself in danger of being renewed; he felt the ground that he had gained slipping from under him already.

In spite of the well-meant efforts made by her relatives to prevent it, Mrs. Linley committed the very error which it was most important that she should avoid. She justified herself, instead of leaving it to events to justify her. "Miss Westerfield comes here," she argued, "on an errand that is beyond reproach—an errand of mercy. Why should you leave the house?"

"In justice to you," Linley answered.

Mrs. Presty could restrain herself no longer. "Drop it, Catherine!" she said, in a whisper.

Catherine refused to drop it; Linley's short and sharp reply had irritated her. "After my experience," she persisted, "have I no reason to trust you?"

"It is part of your experience," he reminded her, "that I promised not to see Miss Westerfield again."

"Own it at once!" she broke out, provoked beyond endurance; "though I may be willing to trust you—you are afraid to trust yourself."

Unlucky Mrs. Presty interfered again. "You're quite right, Herbert. Keep out of harm's way, and you keep right."

She patted him on the shoulder, as if she had been giving good advice to a boy. He expressed his sense of his mother-in-law's friendly offices in language which astonished her.

"Hold your tongue!"

"Do you hear that?" Mrs. Presty asked, appealing indignantly to her daughter.

Linley took his hat. "At what time do you expect Miss Westerfield to arrive?" he said to his wife.

She looked at the clock on the mantelpiece. "Before the half-hour strikes. Don't be alarmed," she added, with an air of ironical sympathy; "you will have time to make your escape."

He advanced to the door, and looked at her.

"One thing I beg you will remember," he said. "Every half-hour while I am away (I am going to the farm) you are to send and let me know how Kitty is—and especially if Miss Westerfield justifies the experiment which the doctor has advised us to try."

Having given those instructions he went out.

The moment was near Mrs. Linley. She took on it, [illegible] of the house [illegible] of the [illegible] and the coachman.

Sydney Westerfield was still in possession of her friend's heart!

Her mother was surely the right person to say a word of comfort to her. Randal made the suggestion—with the worst possible result. Mrs. Presty had not forgotten what she had been told—at her age, in her position as the widower of a cabinet minister—to hold her tongue. "Your brother has insulted me," she said to Randal. He was weak enough to attempt to make an explanation. "I was speaking of my brother's wife," he said. "Your brother's wife has allowed me to be insulted." Having received that reply Randal could only wonder. This woman went to church every Sunday and kept a new testament, bound in excellent taste, on her toilet table. The occasion suggested reflection on the system which produces average Christians at the present time. Nothing more was said by Mrs. Presty. Mrs. Linley remained absorbed in her own bitter thoughts. In silence they waited for the return of the carriage and the appearance of the governess.

XVIII.

Pale, worn, haggard with anxiety, Sydney Westerfield entered the room, and looked once more on the faces which she had resigned herself never to see again. She appeared to be hardly conscious of the kind reception which did its best to set her at her ease.

"Am I in time?" were the first words that escaped her on entering the room. Reassured by the answer, she turned back to the door; eager to hurry up-stairs to Kitty's bedside.

Mrs. Linley's gentle hand detained her.

The doctor had left certain instructions, warning the mother to guard against any accident that might remind Kitty of the day on which Sydney had left her. At the time of that bitter parting the child had seen her governess ... in same walking dress which she wore now. Mrs. Linley removed the hat and cloak and laid them on a chair.

"There is one other precaution which we must observe," she said; "it must ask you to wait in my room until I find that you may show yourself safely. Now come with me."

Mrs. Presty followed them, and begged earnestly for leave to wait the result of the momentous experiment at the door of Kitty's bedroom. Her self-asserting manner had vanished; she was quiet, she was even humble. While the last chance for the child's life was fast becoming a matter of minutes only, the grandmother's better nature showed itself on the surface. Randal opened the door for them as the three went out together. He was in that state of maddening anxiety about his poor little niece in which men of his imaginative temperament become morbid and say strangely inappropriate things. In the same breath with which he implored his sister-in-law to let him hear what had happened, without an instant of delay, he startled Mrs. Presty by one of his familiar remarks on the inconsistencies in her character. "You disagreeable old woman," he whispered as she passed him, "you have got a heart after all."

Left alone, he was never for one moment in repose, while the slow minutes followed each other in the silent house.

He walked about the room, he listened at the door, he arranged and disarranged the furniture. When the nursemaid descended from the upper regions with her mistress' message for him, he ran out to meet her, saw the good news in her smiling face, and, for the first and last time in his life, kissed one of his brother's female servants. Susan—a well-bred young person, thoroughly capable in ordinary cases of keeping her temper, and looking as if she expected to feel an arm round her waist next—trembled with terror under that astounding salute. Her master's brother, a pattern of propriety up to that time, a man declared by her fellow-servants to be incapable of kissing a woman unless she had a right to insist on it in the licensed character of his wife, had evidently taken leave of his senses. Would he bite her next? No; he only looked confused, and said (how very extraordinary!) that he would never do it again. Susan gave her message gravely. Here was an unintelligible man; she felt the necessity of being careful in her choice of words.

"Miss Kitty stared at Miss Westerfield—only for a moment, sir—as if she didn't quite understand, and then knew her again directly. The doctor has just called. He drew up the blind to let the light in, and he looked, and he says: "Only be careful——" Tender-hearted Susan broke down and began to cry. "I can't help it, sir; we are all so fond of Miss Kitty, and we are so happy. 'Only be careful' (those were the exact words, if you please), 'and I answer for her life.' Oh, dear! what have I said to make him run away from me?"

Randal had left her abruptly and had shut himself into the drawing-room. Susan's experience of men had not yet informed her that a true Englishman is ashamed to be seen with the tears in his eyes.

He had barely succeeded in composing himself when another servant appeared (this time a man) with something to say to him.

"I don't know whether I have done right, sir," Malcolm began. "There's a stranger down-stairs among the nurses who are looking at the rooms and the pictures. He said he knew you. And he asked if you were not related to the gentleman who allowed travelers to see his interesting old house."

"Well?"

"Well, sir, I said 'Yes.' And then he wanted to know if you happened to be here at the present time."

Randal cut the man's story short. "And you said 'Yes' again, and he gave you his card. Let me look at it."

Malcolm produced the card and instantly received instructions to show the gentleman up. The name recalled the dinner at the London club—Capt. Bennydeck.

A Small Blaze.

The fire bell at the corner of George and Dublin streets rang out an alarm Saturday afternoon about 3.30. The fire was discovered to be in the house of Mr. John Henry, on Dublin street, west. It appears Mrs. Henry left the house after dinner, filling the stove with wood before doing so. Between the stove and wall was the wood-box, also full of wood, which became ignited and blazed brightly. A passer-by observed the situation and rang the bell, when some employees of Baptie's mill near by burst open the door and extinguished the flames before much damage was done. The town bell was not rung.

A Lively Runaway.

This morning a horse belonging to Mr. W. Fitzgerald ran away from the lime kiln near the C. P. R. depot, leaving the "better half" of the waggon and a barrel of lime behind. The animal careened up George street with two wheels in tow, turned down Simcoe street in the wake of a buggy, and followed it through the gangway next Mr. Flavelle's store. The man in the buggy had to "hustle" in order to keep ahead of the runaway, but having the inside track, as it were, he succeeded in evading his pursuer, which was captured on the market square.

The Salvation Army.

The "Blue noses" from Nova Scotia who arrived Saturday night were: Capt. Archer, (in command); Capt's. Fielder, Wilson, Creight and Jessup; Lieut. Mercie, and Cadets Coke, McCarthy, Carmichael and Courrier. Capt. Kimball and party, mentioned in Saturday's issue proceeded to Kingston Saturday night, and joined Capt. Archer's party in Toronto yesterday, where a big farewell was held. The officers are being sent to the Northwest to begin the work of Salvation. Sunday meetings of the local corps are now held in the Opera house. The house was about filled at yesterday's meetings. To-night a singsong concert will be held in the barracks; Tuesday night a married couple's meeting; Thursday night a House Rule meeting, with the saved Irish Canadian in the chair. Christmas Eve all the officers of Peterborough division will participate in a big jubilee here.

Ye Olden Time.

A fine drove of cattle was driven through the village, says the Bobcaygeon Independent, on Tuesday, by Mr. Wainright, of Peterborough, who was on his way with them to Gilmour's Depot. Shantying has lost all its old glory, there being little left now but the bad language, and even that is of a much milder character than it used to be. In the old days the fare was pork, bread, beans and tea. Each man had a tin plate and a pannikin, and they all sat around the glowing caboose. Ah! those were something like days. Now, the whole thing is changed. The roaring, flashing caboose fire is replaced with an iron stove, that sits in the middle of the board floored shanty as calm and as soulless as a cast iron clam. The men sit at a table, with knives and forks, spoons and crockery, and feed themselves with such effeminate grub as apple pie, and have a bill of fare as varied as any hotel. Spittoons will be the next thing, and then rocking chairs, and in another year or so, the men will sport berlin wool slippers in the evenings, and fine a man three plugs of tobacco for swearing. The introduction of the stalled ox to the commissariat department, was disastrous to the old style shantying.

Police Court.

MONDAY, Dec. 6.

Inspector Darling charged C. Glynn, of Havelock, with a first infraction of the Scott Act. Fined $50 and costs.

Three persons were on Saturday afternoon fined $1 and costs each for indecent exposure of person. They were drunk at the time.

Following is the criminal statistics for the month of November up to date; Breach Canada Temperance Act, 9 convictions; indecent exposure, 4; larceny, 3; vagrancy, 3; assault 2; profane language, 1; non-payment of wages, 1; breach cow by-law, 1.

Personal.

This week Mr. Mack McGregor, of Peterborough, took possession of the Bradburn House, Omemee. He is well known throughout this country and will, no doubt, receive a fair share of public patronage.

Dr. O'Shea, of Campbellford, a former resident of Peterborough, it is feared cannot recover from his illness.

Mr. John Millar, B. A., was in Napanee yesterday.

Keene.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Mrs. W. W. Millar has moved into her pretty cottage opposite Dr. McCrea's residence.

Mrs. Alex. Gillespie is slowly recovering from a dangerous illness.

Another sudden death occurred here last Saturday night. Mr. David Weir, a young man, son of Andrew Weir, was apparently in his usual health during the day, and working. In the night he went down stairs, presumably to get a drink. While down, the family heard him fall, and on going to him him he was found in a dying state, and expired almost immediately. He had a slight cut or bruise on his head where he struck some projection when he fell, but the supposed cause of death is that he was subject to apoplexy, and this disease had culminated its forces fatally at this seizure.

The river is frozen over, and skaters are again in their element.

The curling club purpose having their section of our rink flooded at once.

James McIntyre, a young man of this village, who has long been ailing with his lungs, died rather suddenly week before last, and was buried in Keene cemetery. He had great taste for music, and seemed to derive much enjoyment from the violin.

The body of John McGivern, who was lost on Rice Lake, has not yet been found. He was under the influence of liquor when he left Keene to cross the lake, and would not be persuaded to stop.

(Held over from last week.)

Literary Notices.

The Art Interchange of December 4th, 1886, contains as its principal attraction a large, boldly painted study in color, by the well known artist, T. de Thulstrup. This shows a sturdy Norwegian peasant girl coming down a mountain side, pulling a daisy to pieces and repeating to herself the little legend, "He loves me—he loves me not?" This is an excellent color sketch, and is admirably characteristic of the artist. Those who admire the charming studies of peasant life which have brought so much fame to Mr. de Thulstrup, will doubtless welcome this opportunity to possess one of his character studies. Other designs in this issue are very boldly designed pattern of poppies for decorating a parlors or bed spread. Two charming designs for Christmas cards deserve special commendation. Of these the more unique shows four cherubs trumpeting the "glad tidings" to the four corners of the earth; the head, shoulders and wings of the cherubs beings given. A second card represents a quaint little girl feeding chickens in the snow; this has a conventionalized chrysanthemum border; either of these highly decorative designs will be useful for painting or sketching on Christmas cards or souvenirs. Some dainty little designs of grasses for after dinner coffee cups, a composed grape design for decorating fruit plate, and some single sprays of grasses and flowers for decorating cards, sachets, bon-bon boxes, are among the other designs. An account of Christmas novelties is also given, as are manifold hints for fancy articles for church fairs; instructions in painting and embroidery hints for decorative novelties, art notes and book news. Price of this issue, 20 cents. Published by Wm. Whitlock, 37 and 39 West 22nd street, N. Y.

Rather a Unique Case All Round.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 2.—Major J. L. Foley was appointed Police Commissioner yesterday in place of Robert Morgan, who resigned because his business, that of manufacturing playing cards, was suffering from a boycott placed upon his cards by gamblers in revenge for the commissioners having closed the gambling places in Cincinnati.

The Boarders Will Feel Joyful.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 2.—Eight proprietors of second-rate hotels and restaurants in this city were arrested yesterday for using oleomargarine on their tables without displaying the placard "Oleomargarine used here," as required by law, under the penalty of $50 fine. The cases were continued one week under $200 bonds. These will be regarded as test cases.

Gold Fever in New York State.

DENNING, N.Y., Dec. 2.—Here in Ulster County a gold fever excitement has broken out. A number of persons say they have discovered the precious metal in county and state lots. The prospectors believe there are millions in it. Previous finds in the Shawangunk mountains amounted to nothing.

The Railway Bylaw Carried in Guelph.

GUELPH, Dec. 2.—The voting on the bylaw to raise $175,000 for the building of the Guelph Junction Railway (a branch of the Canadian Pacific Railway), resulted in the measure being carried. It required a two-fifths vote of the qualified electors to secure the passage of the bylaw, or about 500 votes. The returns show that 747 voted for and 145 against it.

Anti-Saloon Republicans.

CORTLAND, N.Y., Dec. 1.—The Republican Anti-Saloon Convention was held here yesterday. Prominent among the speakers were Gen. Thomas W. Conway, Senator Blair of New Hampshire, Rev. Daniel Dorchester of Boston, Mrs. J. Ellen Foster of Iowa, ex-Secretary Windom of Minnesota, Albert Sutkins of Kansas and Rev. Dr. Bell of Buffalo. General Conway, Chairman of the State Committee, reported 30,000 Republicans enrolled. Edgar P. Hill of New York was elected permanent President.

The Whirlpool Freaks.

BUFFALO, Dec. 1.—George Haslett and Miss Sadie Allen will leave for New York on Friday, where they will go on exhibition in the Globe Museum at a salary of $300 a week for two weeks. The torpedo barrel will be shipped from Suspension Bridge. Miss Allen has entirely recovered from the effects of her trip through the whirlpool last Sunday.

Fatal Fire at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—At 1 a.m., in a fire in the Merchants' Exchange Hotel, one inmate was fatally burned and a dozen others had a close call for their lives, while twenty or thirty men and women were forced to flee from the building partly dressed. There were about twenty rooms on the fourth floor. They were simply partitioned off from each other and from the hall by pine partitions. There were windows only in the front and rear, and the only stairway leading down to the lower floor was in the rear. It was in a large room at the head of the stairs that the fire started. The firemen were quickly on hand and in a few moments had the fire under control. G. H. Smith, a salesman, aged 30 years, was found near the head of the stairs, badly burned, and will probably die. The damage to the building will not exceed $1000.

Will Dump it Into Canada Probably.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—The tea experts appointed by Collector Seeberger to examine the tea imported by Frank C. Fernald and condemned by Inspector Langley, have reported. The whole lot of 208 packages was condemned by Mr. Langley, and the Board of Experts sustained him as to 170 packages. There were thirty-three cases which were decided to be without adulteration and entitled to entry. The condemned lot cannot be sold or used in the United States. If the importer desires to ship it out of the country he will be permitted to do so, and will be given six months to take such action. At the end of that time, if the tea is still in the hands of the appraiser, it will be destroyed.

Graves Wants $125,000 Damages.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 4.—Patrick Graves, the man who was arrested for the murder of old Mrs. Wheller, on complaint of her husband, entered a heavy suit for damages in the Common Pleas Court to-day. The Whellers were misers and Mrs. Wheller was estimated to be worth $200,000. She was murdered, and her husband said Graves was the murderer. The judge discharged Graves and held Wheller for the crime. Graves asks for $125,000 damages. Wheller is also very rich and is now under bonds of $30,000 to answer the charge of manslaughter. He is 81 years old.

A Washington Theatre Burned.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 4.—Shortly before 3 o'clock this morning a fire was discovered under the stage of Herseog's Opera House, which in a short time spread so rapidly that it was impossible to save the edifice. The loss on the building is $115,000. The losses by occupants are estimated at $45,000.

Capt. Ead's Ship Railway.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 4.—Capt. J. B. Eads, who is visiting here, stated to a reporter to-day that the gentlemen interested in the Panama ship railways project had decided to abandon the acceptance of Government aid trammelled by Government restrictions. The project will be prosecuted by private enterprise.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. eodw41tf

An Eventful Fact to be remembered is our Ulster and Mantle Cloths and the prices which we are selling them at.

A Fact of Integrity and that is we keep faith with the public in every article we advertised.

A Fact to be Remembered and that is we don't sell or propose to sell goods at cost, nor do we sell you the best All Wool Flannels at 18c. per yard, we sell you the goods as we advertise them. It would never do to sell Flannels that cost 30c. per yard at 18c.

LABOR COMMISSION

LONG PROMISED, IT HAS BEEN FORMED AT LAST.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—The Ministerial tour in Western Ontario has been productive of at least one good measure, the Cabinet having decided at a council to-day to appoint a royal commission to enquire into the relations between labor and and capital. It is understood the following gentlemen were named commissioners with power to add to their number, by Government passing order-in-council: Hon. James Armstrong, C.M.G., late Chief Justice of St. Lucia, W.I.; A. T. Freed, editor of the Hamilton Spectator; S. R. Heakes, boat builder, of Toronto; John Armstrong, printer, of Toronto; Jules Helbrunner, journalist, of Montreal; M. Walsh, carpenter, of Halifax, and J. A. Clarke, builder, of Carleton, N.B. This body, it will be seen, is purely a workingmen's commission, its members being four workingmen, two journalists in active work, and a legal light. It is understood the commission will begin to take evidence at once.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

It Deals Very Briefly with the Fisheries Dispute.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Congress met at noon to-day, when the President's message was read in both Houses. The message, after speaking of the friendly relations existing between the United States and all other powers, says that the questions involved in the fisheries dispute are of long standing and grave consequence, and the action of the Canadian officials during the past season towards United States fishermen had been such as to seriously threaten the continuance of mutually beneficial and friendly relations. However, efforts were being made to secure a satisfactory settlement of the question, with the reasonable hope that before the close of the present session of Congress the announcement may be made that an acceptable conclusion has been reached. The message then deals with the subject of taxation to the effect that the present condition of affairs constrains the people to demand that by the revision of the revenue laws the receipts of the Government shall be reduced to the necessary expense of its economical administration. The remainder of the message refers to nearly all the topics of public discussion, principally to the labor question and the silver question, regarding the last of which it advocated suspension or restriction of coinage.

A BRUSH WITH CATTLE THIEVES.

A Texas Sheriff Encounters Difficulties in Attempting an Arrest.

FORT ELLIOTT, Tex., Dec. 4.—Sunday morning Capt. Arrington, Sheriff of Wheeler County, accompanied by C. B. Wellingham, Superintendent of the Hartford Land and Cattle Company, started out to arrest John Leverton and James Wells for stealing cattle belonging to the Turkey Track ranch. Wednesday morning they arrived at the little cabin occupied by Leverton, 200 miles from Mobeetie. When they entered Leverton grabbed his gun and aimed at the captain. Arrington was too quick for him, and broke his arm with a shot from his revolver. In falling Leverton's gun was discharged and the ball struck Mr. Wellingham three inches above the right knee, inflicting a painful wound. Leverton then grabbed his gun with his left hand and fired three more shots, one of which passed through the handkerchief Capt. Arrington wore around his neck. The Captain then broke Leverton's other arm with a second shot from his revolver. Leverton scrambled to his feet and made his exit through a rear door, and was 100 yards from the cabin when the Captain saw him, and thinking him to be Wells, shot and killed him almost instantly. Wells was captured a few miles from there near the Canadian River. Leverton was an old Chicago crook, and Wells is said to have come from New York. The had long been wanted by they officers.

A TROUBLED LIFE ENDED.

Suicide of Hamilton Rest Hickson, Once a Swell in Buffalo Society.

BUFFALO, December 6.—Rest Dickson, a society swell whose mesalliance with a policeman's daughter about two years ago created such a sensation in the best circles of Buffalo society, suicided by taking a dose of potassium cyanide. The young man was barely 20 years old, and it is presumed his serious troubles caused him to commit self-murder. His family at one time had him placed under medical care in a retreat to cure him of his infatuation for Ida Stiles. He got out and subsequently married her. Later on he separated from his wife, and last summer was arrested at Niagara, Ont., for wife desertion and tried at St. Catharines on that charge. His widow has a suit now pending against his mother for alleged alienation of her husband's affection, damages being placed at $20,000. No modern romance writer has equalled the perfectly true story of the love, life and death of this man, and critics would pronounce the story correctly told as an exaggeration of fact.

A TROUBLED LIFE ENDED.

Stabbed in the Heart.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Condemio Figueria sailor on the Mexican bark Maria, which was lying at Burling slip, was murdered to-night in the forecastle of the vessel by being stabbed in the heart. Pasisio Moren Mendoza and Isfelo Amavela, fellow sailors, were arrested, accused of committing the murder. The bark Maria arrived in this port last Monday. At 11 o'clock to-night some [illegible] arose among the men [illegible]

COLIN'S EVIDENCE.

HIS MEETING WITH AND HIS MARRIAGE TO MISS BLOOD.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Lord Colin Campbell testified in his suit for divorce to-day that he first met his wife in the month of September, 1880, at Inveraray, the chief seat of the Argyll family, and the capital of Argyll County, Scotland. The acquaintance soon resulted in an engagement of marriage. He next saw Miss Blood in London during October. At this time witness was suffering from fistula. An operation was performed upon him, but it failed on account of the fever he had, and which was aggravated by anxiety respecting his engagement. He was not suffering in any sense from an infectious disease. Miss Blood frequently visited him. When he was sent away on a voyage Miss Blood sent him a letter in every mail. In April, 1881, another operation was performed and it was also a failure. His father's opposition to his engagement was at this time causing witness constant anxiety. Witness knew before he married that Miss Blood was acquainted with the Duke of Marlborough. She told witness once that she had been to the theatre with her sister and several others, including the Duke of Marlborough. Witness replied: "I don't think you were in good company." Witness had known Chief Shaw a long time, but not Gen. Butler and Dr. Bird. Witness was married to Miss Blood in July, 1881. In the October following his doctors released him from the prohibition he had been under because of his malady. Lord Colin, continuing, said he heard while staying at Argyll Lodge, his father's London residence, that the Duke of Marlborough had called at the Lodge. He then said he did not know the Duke. Witness remonstrated with the plaintiff for riding out with Chief Shaw and she became violent. When witness was ill at Bournemouth Lady Colin left him without assigning any reason. She usually dined out and generally spent her time away. She never complained to witness that their relations had any ill effect on her health and witness had long talk with his wife in December, 1881, about the Duke of Marlborough and Chief Shaw. She then promised that they should not visit her any more. Witness and plaintiff ceased their relations in June, 1882. On the afternoon of the day that Lady Miles had the interview with defendant, Lady Colin came to witness' room. She was crying and she threw her arms about his neck. Then she burned before his eyes the letter he had sent her through Lady Miles, but made no mention of the fact that she had kept a copy of it. Witness had never advised plaintiff to use precautions against infection. In July, 1883, while staying at the Zion House, witness asked plaintiff to spend the night in his company, but she refused. He upbraided her for her conduct with other men, and she became very violent and she said to him, "If you put me in a divorce court you will get the worst of it." The case was then adjourned.

The Snow Storms Forsake Canada for Lower Latitudes.

COLUMBIA, S.C., Dec. 6.—For the last sixty hours the heaviest sleet storm ever experienced in this city has been in progress. The whole surface of the country is covered from three to six inches. The city street railway has been obliged to suspend operations. All the trains are delayed. In some places in the State snow has fallen instead of sleet and is ten to fifteen inches deep. It is feared that if the sleet and snow storm continues great numbers of cattle will perish.

Cave-in From Weight of Snow.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 6.—The roof of the stock house of the Dayton Iron Furnace Company caved in Saturday night on account of the heavy fall of snow. The building is 200 feet square, and more than half the roof caved in. Usually there are 100 men in the house, but at the time of the collapse only a foreman named Kerner and half a dozen negroes were at work. They were all badly injured, and two of them will die. Kerner was fatally injured.

THE ROCK ISLAND EXPRESS STEAL.

Brakeman Schwartz Who is Suspected of Having Been Concerned in It.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—In an interview last night Henry Schwartz, the Rock Island brakeman who is suspected of complicity in the express robbery of last March, denied that he had confessed to the railway officials that he was a bigamist. The woman with whom he has been living, he claims, he never married. He also says that at no time did he admit having ever been in possession of a certain lot of $5 bills, which the Rock Island officials had shown him. Schwartz still refuses to make an explanation of the manner in which he procured the large amount of money which has been spent by him in the past few months.

It is believed the Rock Island officials have a good deal more evidence bearing on the case than they are willing to disclose. It is not at all unlikely that other arrests will follow speedily. The story told by Newton Watt, who acted as bagageman on the night of the robbery, has never been accepted by the authorities as a satisfactory one, and he, too, has been under close surveillance. His relations with Schwartz are very intimate.

Moen's son. Miranda is Wilson's sister and Jeremiah her husband. "Wilson's" mother denies that he is Moen's son and says he is a son of Jonas Wilson.

MEXICAN EDITORS JAILED.

The Penalties of Political Opposition in the Land of Revolutions.

NOGALES, Ariz., Dec. 5.—Much excitement has been created here by the report of the arrest of the Mexican editors who are in opposition to Torres, the present Governor of Sonora, Mexico. The Governor has had a stiff fight on his hands ever since he assumed the office, and the opposition was a formidable one. Last evening, by order of the Government, David O. Viele, Alexander Wallace and Miguel Campello, editors of a Spanish paper called El Sonorense, published at Guaymas, were placed under arrest and taken to Hermosillo, where they were lodged in jail. At the same time Augustine Pasqual ra, Gabriel Pereda, attorneys, and J. M. Salcedo, editors of El Pueblo, a newspaper published in Hermosillo, were arrested and lodged in jail. The charge against these gentlemen is opposition to the State Government. Grave complications are anticipated.

THE LIBERAL LEADER.

We have the pleasure of announcing that Hon. Edward Blake, leader of the Liberal party in Canada, Hon. Wilfred Laurier, the leading Liberal of our sister province of Quebec, and Hon. T. B. Pardee, Ontario Commissioner of Crown Lands, will address the electors of the county and town in Bradburn's Opera House on the afternoon and evening of Friday, Dec. 17th. Not only will the reputation of these distinguished gentlemen as orators, attract a large attendance, but the important interests with which they will deal, will at the present crisis, make all who take an interest in the affairs of the country, anxious to hear their eloquent deliverances on the leading questions of the day. Hon. Mr. Laurier will deliver addresses in both the English and French languages during his stay here. Remember the day, Friday, December 17th, afternoon and evening, in Bradburn's Opera House.

MOWAT OR MEREDITH?

The issue before the people in the present elections is whether the Administration of the Hon. Mr. Mowat shall be sustained, or whether another shall be formed by Mr. Meredith who is the nominal leader (under Sir John) of the Opposition in this province. For the past fourteen years the Mowat Administration has guided the destinies of this province, and as the record shows, with great administrative ability, great economy, combined with liberal expenditure for praiseworthy objects. It is claimed by the Opposition that the financial policy of the Mowat Administration has been one of extravagance. The chief points insisted on are in the items of civic government and legislation. The increase cost of "legislation" is due, as has been repeatedly shown, to the increased outlay for sessional writers, in the preparation and printing of voluminous returns, for which the opposition are largely responsible; and in civic government the increased cost is also due to increased work requiring to be done. The increased annual expenditure in other departments is due to the fact that increased grants have been made on services which involve a direct distribution of revenue to the people, and are such as is required under an expanding country to maintain the efficiency of these services. For instance, take the departments of Education, Agriculture and Arts, Hospitals, Charities and Asylums, Administration of Justice, and Colonization Roads. The total expenditure on these in 1871, the year before the present government came into power, amounted to $795,838, and in the year 1885, to $1,736,343, an increase of $940,503. It will be noted by the tax payer that this increase in expenditure is due to increased payments which are really a part of a regular distribution of surplus revenue, and to the creation of new services coming within the same category. It will be seen that it is impossible to carry on these various services, to maintain new and enlarged lunatic asylums, and to provide for the administration of justice over the increasing area of newly settled districts, without largely increasing the annual expenditure. Any retrenchment in these departments would directly result in increased local and municipal taxation. Suppose that for the past fourteen years the duty of maintaining and caring for lunatics had been thrown entirely upon the municipalities. What would the taxpayers have had to pay directly? For the past fourteen years the cost of the support of these unfortunates (who have to be cared for by some one) has been $6,372,926. And these, cared for by the municipalities, would have cost much more, for it is obvious that their support is much more cheaply effected by gathering them in centres than by distributing them among hundreds of municipalities. To show how unfounded are the cries of extravagant expenditure, the supply bills of the last three sessions of the present Parliament may be mentioned. Though the total proposed expenditures in these years amounted to very nearly nine millions, the Opposition, led by Mr. Meredith, could only find the comparatively trifling sum of less than thirty thousand dollars to object to—less than three mills on the dollar. While the increase of the annual expenditure in Ontario has, in fourteen years, been only nine per cent., the increase in Quebec under Conservative rule eighty-three per cent. Quebec started with a clean sheet in 1867 and she has since piled up a net debt of nearly nine million dollars ($8,815.43), while Ontario, with liberal expenditures on necessary services, not only has no debt, but has a surplus of $6,706,000, a difference of fifteen millions and a half between the application of Liberal and Conservative methods. These few remarks cover only a meagre portion of the grounds on which the Mowat Administration are entitled to a renewal of the people's confidence. Now, as to the objections which Mr. Meredith makes that he should supplant Mr. Mowat; the manner in which he would look out for the interests of the province, may be inferred from his past record. When Sir John attempted to seize upon 100,000 square miles of our territory, Mr. Meredith, who now wants to be appointed trustee, gave him all the support and aid in his power. If Mr. Meredith had succeeded this province would have been deprived of sixty five million acres of land. If this is worth one dollar per acre, the loss to the province would have been, of course sixty five millions, and the cost of defending the interests of Ontario against Mr. Meredith and Sir John already amounts to $76,000, with the cost of other suits pending, to be added. Mr. Mowat has been the champion and defender of the rights of the Province and Mr. Meredith has been the betrayer of and the aggressor upon the rights of Ontario. The people are now to decide between the faithful steward and the false friend.

The Nicholl's Hospital.

To the Editor of the Daily Examiner:

If anything is going to be done by the people to get rid of the expense of keeping up the Nicholl's hospital it has got to be done now, and before the town elections. This can only be done by electing councillors pledged to do this, and who will carry out their pledges. In the first place, not to grant another cent towards these expenses, to discharge all the staff of servants and other officials at once and then to petition parliament to rescind the act passed inconformity with Mrs. Nicholl's deed of trust, and then, when this is done, to return the property to Mrs. Nicholl's. If the ratepayers but do their duty the rest will follow in its order, and then they can breathe freely, because they will know that one great cause of increase of taxation is removed, and next fall they will save this money and apply it to better use, but the ratepayers must distinctly understand that if this is not done, and that if they remain inactive, it will be assumed that they do not disapprove of the existance of the hospital with all its consequential expenses, and that then nothing will be done and things will go on from bad to worse, and that every succeeding year will witness an increase of expenses and a consequent increase in the taxes. Are the people willing to have this so? Are they willing every year to give their money, in the shape of taxes, to keep up an expensive hospital for the mere pleasure of providing a refuge for paupers and strangers, who will be sure in the time to come, as in the past, to avail themselves of their kind invitation to come here and live sumptuously at their expense? The ratepayers will have to adopt one or other of these courses, and they will have to do this now or forever after hold their peace, for every year's continuance of this institution will only serve to fasten it more strongly upon the town and thus render its removal the more difficult. If the unwilling taxpayers neglect their opportunity before the coming elections, I for one, shall say that my estimate of human nature has been all wrong, and I will leave them for the future to take care of themselves. This year's expenses of this hospital, according to reliable information, amount to the sum of five thousand dollars. Instead of the founder of this hospital supplying the furniture, as was said she would do, it was kindly left to the trustees of the town to do it, and they did it most generously and to the tune of two thousand dollars or more. And they also built a laboratory, the cost of which I do not know, and they continue to supply it with medicines obtained without tender. The trustees suffer themselves to be completely ignored by their chairman, who does, some of them say, as he likes, and the result is that we might as well be without trustees altogether. I am also informed that, in order, so far as possible, to keep down the complaints of the people, the Council only laid on a rate sufficent to raise three thousand dollars, leaving the other two thousand dollars to be raised next year. And it is worthy of mention that all the supplies of the hospital are obtained without tender. The hospital, if allowed to stand, will become a regular running sore to the town, and the burden for its support will be intolerable. Further remarks in another letter. RATEPAYER.

Mothers,

do you not see the pallid face, once so bright, growing thinner? Do you not hear the hacking cough, and note the wasted, languid indifference, where once was mirth, brightness, and keen enjoyment for all the pleasures of life? Do not be mistaken or deceived. Yet thousands are living today who have been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which surpass all other medicines for the cure of that disease. What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. eodw41tf

We are determined to be the Poor Man's Friend, and if in fulfilling this mission, we break the back bone of those High Price Clothiers, I am sorry, as I wish them no harm. But having inaugurated this in PETERBOROUGH, I must hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. Always keep in mind, that the man who does as he ADVERTISES, and Refunds the Money if Goods are not Satisfactory, is GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN.

GOUGH, the Wonderful Cheap Man, Arcade Buildings, Peterboro.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Some will have it that the Scott Act is a failure; others protest that it is not. This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of

GOOD FURS

come from such places as Toronto, Rochester, Chicago and Winnipeg to get their wants supplied from our manufacture, and are thereby the gainers. We sell better goods at retail prices than can be bought at wholesale. Highest prices paid for raw furs.

HELLO! BROWN,

"What are you looking so mad about, this morning?"

"Well, I'll tell you, Jones. I bought a very fine Tent from TURNER, and one of my friends wanted to borrow it."

"And did you lend it?"

"Well, I guess not. The last Tent I had got used up by lending. I told him to go to J. J. TURNER, the great Tent maker, and he would rent or sell him a tent."

"You did right, Brown.'

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

XIX.

The fair complexion of the captain's youthful days had been darkened by exposure to hard weather and extreme climates. His smooth face of twenty years since was scored by the telltale marks of care; his dark beard was beginning to present variety of color by means of streaks of gray, and his hair was in course of undisguised retreat from his strong, broad forehead. Not rising above the middle height, the captain's spare figure was well preserved. It revealed power and activity, severely tested perhaps at some former time, but capable even yet of endurance under trial. Although he looked older than his age, he was still personally speaking an attractive man. In repose his eyes were by habit and and a little weary in their expression. They only caught a brighter light when he smiled. At such times, helped by this change and by his simple, earnest manner, they recommended him to his fellow-creatures before he opened his lips. Men and women taking shelter with him, for instance, from the rain found the temptation to talk with Capt. Bennydeck irresistible; and, when the weather cleared, they mostly carried away with them the same favorable impression: "One would like to meet with that gentleman again."

Randal's first words of welcome relieved the captain of certain modest doubts of his reception, which appeared to trouble him when he entered the room. "I am glad to find you remember me as kindly as I remember you." Those were his first words when he and Randal shook hands.

"You might have felt sure of that," Randal said.

The captain's modesty still doubted. "You see, the circumstances were a little against me. We met at a dull dinner, among wearisome, worldly men, full of boastful talk about themselves. It was all 'I did this,' and 'I said that'—and the gentlemen who were present had always been right; and the gentlemen who were absent had always been wrong. And, oh, dear, when they came to politics, how they bragged about what they would have done if they had only been at the head of the government; and how cruelly hard to please they were in the matter of wine! Do you remember recommending me to spend my next holiday in Scotland?"

"Perfectly. My advice was selfish—it really meant that I wanted to see you again."

"And you have your wish, at your brother's house! The guide-book did it. First, I saw your family name. Then I read on and discovered that there were pictures at Mount Morven, and that strangers were allowed to see them. I like pictures. And here I am."

This allusion to the house naturally reminded Randal of the master. "I wish I could introduce you to my brother and his wife," he said. "Unhappily, their only child is ill——"

Capt. Bennydeck started to his feet. "I am ashamed of having intruded on you," he began. His new friend pressed him back into his chair without ceremony. "On the contrary, you have arrived at the best of all possible times—the time when our suspense is at an end. The doctor has just told us that his poor little patient is out of danger. You may imagine how happy we are."

"And how grateful to God!" The captain said those words in tones that trembled—speaking to himself.

Randal was conscious of feeling a momentary embarrassment. The character of his visitor had presented itself in a new light. Capt. Bennydeck looked at him—understood him—and returned to the subject of his travels.

"Do you remember your holiday time when you were a boy, and when you had to go back to school?" he asked, with a smile. "My mind is in much the same state at leaving Scotland and going back to my work in London. I hardly know which to admire most—your beautiful country or the people who inhabit it. I have had some pleasant talk with your poorer neighbors; the one improvement I could wish for among them is a keener sense of their religious duties."

This was an objection new in Randal's experience of travelers in general.

"Our highlanders have noble qualities," he said. "If you knew them as well as I do you would find a true sense of religion among them; not presenting itself, however, to strangers as strongly—I had almost said as the devotional feeling of the lowland Scotch. Different races, different temperaments."

"And all," the captain added, gravely and gently, "with souls to be saved. If I sent to these poor people some copies of the new testament, translated into their own language, would my gift be accepted?"

Strongly interested by this time in studying Capt. Bennydeck's character on the side of it which was new to him, Randal owned that he observed with surprise the interest which his friend felt in perfect strangers. The captain seemed to wonder why this impression should have been produced by what he had just said.

"I only try," he answered, "to do what good I can whesever I go."

"Your life must be a happy one," Randal said.

Capt. Bennydeck's head drooped. The shadows that attend on the gloom of melancholy remembrance showed their darkening presence on his face. Briefly, almost sternly, he set Randal right.

"No, sir."

"Forgive me," the younger man pleaded, "if I have spoken thoughtlessly."

"You have mistaken me," the captain explained; "and it is my fault. My life is an atonement for the sins of my youth. I have reached my 40th year—and that one purpose is before me for the rest of my days. Sufferings and dangers which but few men undergo awakened my conscience. My last exercise of the duties of my profession associated me with an expedition to the polar seas. Our ship was crushed in the ice. Our march to the nearest regions inhabited by humanity was a hopeless struggle of starving men, rotten with scurvy, against the merciless forces of nature. One by one my comrades dropped and died. Out of twenty men there were three left with a last flicker in them of the vital flame when the party of rescue found us. One of the three died on the homeward voyage. One lived to reach his native place and to sink to rest with his wife and children round his bed. The last man left, out of that band of heroes, lives to be worthier of God's mercy—and tries to make God's creatures better and happier in this world, and worthier of the world that is to come."

Randal's generous nature felt the appeal that had been made to it. "Will you let me take your hand, captain?" he said.

They clasped hands in silence.

Capt. Bennydeck was the first to speak again. That morbid element of humanity, which is sometimes in priests, and which is generally the resource of idle women, seemed to be troubling him once more—just as it had troubled him when he first found himself in Randal's presence.

"I hope you won't think me vain," he resumed; "I seldom say so much about myself as I have said to you."

"I only wish you would say more," Randal rejoined. "Can't you put off your return to London for a day or two?"

The thing was not to be done. Duties which it was impossible to trifle with called the captain back. "It's quite likely," he said, directing pleasantly to the impression which he had produced in speaking of the highlanders, "that I shall find more strangers to interest me in the great city."

"Are they always strangers?" Randal asked. "Have you never met, by accident, with persons whom you may once have known?"

"Never—yet. But it may happen on my return."

"In what way?"

"In this way. I have been in search of a poor girl who has lost both her parents. She has, I fear, been left helpless at the mercy of the world. Her father was an old friend of mine—once an officer in the navy, like myself. My last letters suggest a hope of tracing her. There is reason to believe that she is or has been employed as a pupil-teacher at a school in the suburbs of London, and I am going back, among other things, to try if I can follow the clew myself. Good-by, my friend, let us hope to meet again. When you are in London you will always hear of me at the club."

Heartily reciprocating his good wishes, Randal attended Capt. Bennydeck to the door.

On the way back to the drawing-room he found his mind dwelling, rather to his surprise, on the captain's contemplated search for the lost girl.

Was the good man likely to find her? It seemed useless enough to inquire—and yet Randal asked himself the question. Her father had been described as an officer in the navy. Well, and what did that matter? Inclined to laugh at his own idle curiosity he was suddenly struck by a new idea. What had his brother told him of Miss Westerfield? She was the daughter of an officer in the navy; she had been pupil-teacher at a school. Was it really possible that Sydney Westerfield could be the person whom Capt. Bennydeck was attempting to trace? Randal threw up the window which overlooked the drive in front of the house. Too late! The carriage which had brought the captain to Mount Morven was no longer in sight.

The one other course that he could take was to mention Capt. Bennydeck's name to Sydney, and be guided by the result.

As he approached the bell, determined to send a message up-stairs, he heard the door opened behind him. Mrs. Presty had entered the drawing-room, with a purpose, as it seemed, in which Randal was concerned.

EGAN'S IMPERIAL TRUSS

Read the following extract from a letter of a well-known citizen of St Catharines,—hundreds like it:

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two spiralean trusses made in York State, costing me $60. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child sure; and 80 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. When writing please mention this paper. Address

At the Rink.

About 100 skaters disported themselves at the rink last night and "showed off" to the spectators by cutting the Dutch roll and grape vine, or performing the spread-eagle and great flop acts with awkward grace, according to their respective ability. A Fatal Accident.

Saturday night Mr. David Weir, of Keene, met with an accident which deprived him of life. He walked down stairs and out of the front door, but in doing so, slipped on the lower steps and fell with great force against the lock on the door, inflicting a fatal wound on his right temple. Others of the family hearing the noise rushed out to his assistance, and found him unconscious. A doctor was immediately sent for, but in about an hour from the time he fell, death had claimed him.

A Butcher's Mishap.

Saturday afternoon Mr. Robert Howden, butcher, was dressing a quarter of beef. The meat was frozen, and in order to make an easier cut, he pressed the point of the knife, which was thrust through the beef, with his left hand. His hand slipped, and the point of the knife caught in the palm, making such a deep gash that the blade protruded from the back of his hand. Some blood vessels were severed. It is an ugly wound, but no serious consequences are feared.

The Salvation Army.

At Lindsay the other day the captain and several officers of the Salvation Army were arrested for "obstructing the streets," after being ordered by the police to move from in front of a hotel, where they were holding knee drill. This the Salvationists refused to do, and, as a consequence, were arrested. The local corps are most obliging in this way, and whenever requested to desist from holding street meeting meetings, promptly betake themselves to their barracks or a less public place of worship. This is as it should be.

The Late Dr. O'Shea.

A Promising Young Man Carried Off by Death—He Died Last Evening at Campbellford.

Intelligence was received in town this morning that Dr. O'Shea, of Campbellford, a former and well known resident of Peterborough, had passed over to the majority. Mr. O'Shea was born in Asphodel, near Norwood, about 35 years ago, and was a son of the late Thomas O'Shea. He labored as a public school teacher four or five years in the county of Peterborough, taking the degree of M.D. at Queen's College, Kingston, in 1880. He first commenced practice at Dublin, Ont., afterwards settling in Peterborough, where he remained two or three years. While here he was married at St. Peter's Cathedral, to a daughter of the late Mr. James Henry. About a year ago he removed to Campbellford, where he was engaged in a lucrative practice until about two weeks ago, when his fatal illness first appeared. Last evening he passed away, leaving a young wife and infant child. Deceased is a grandson of Mrs. Doris, living on Elm street, and cousin of Mr. O'Shea, grocer, corner of Hunter and Water streets. The remains are to be taken to Asphodel this afternoon and interred by the side of deceased's father.

Third Ward.—John Irwin, deputy returning officer; James G. Macdonald, poll clerk; polling place, office of the Rathbun Company.

Fourth Ward.—William Lee, deputy returning officer; John Sawers, poll clerk; polling place, the shop of William Lee.

COASTING AND TOBOGGANING.

Mr. Rutherford introduced a by-law to prevent coasting or tobogganing on the public streets of Peterborough, and also to prevent the cruel of practice of compelling dogs to draw sleighs and other weights, and providing penalties for infractions of the law. The first clause was passed after some discussion as to the propriety of shutting off the children's sport. It was considered by some that if certain limits were placed on the children, where there could be no danger, the by-law would be improved. The clause relating to the practice of attaching dogs to sleighs was incontinently bounced, the majority of the councillors being of opinion that it would be folly to attempt to legislate in the matter. The by-law was passed.

Mr. Kendry moved, seconded by Mr. Hartley, that a check be issued for Mr. Newton's taxes, he being unable to pay the same. Referred to the Court of Revision.

Mr. Cahill moved, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the town treasurer be authorized to pay the pay list Nos. 20 and 21, also the account of J. MacNamara.—Carried.

Mr. Menzies moved, seconded by Mr. Hartley, that the charity committee be authorized to apply for admission to the Barnardo Home for the children of David Menzies.—Carried.

Mr. Davidson moved, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that the clerk of this council be authorized to notify George Portsmith, of Smithtown, that he must take care of his aged mother, or the town would take action to compel him to do so; also Mr. John Walsh, of Ashburnham, be similarly notified.—Carried.

The application of William Appleyard for remission of taxes was referred to the finance committee.

The council adjourned for one month.

Sam Jones is not the only one of his family proficient in the use of language vigorous if not strictly orthodox. The Savannah News says the evangelist has a brother preaching in the north of Georgia who employs a dialect that will "almost take the bark off a hickory tree."

His Holiness Replies.

Montreal, Dec. 6.—Some months ago an address, signed by thousands of Canadian Catholics, was forwarded to the Holy Father, thanking him for the advice tendered them and the Catholic world in his encyclical letter, Immortale Dei, and wishing him long life. His Holiness has forwarded a reply through the Papal Secretary of State and Cardinal Taschereau, thanking the signers of the address for their good wishes, and expressing the hope that they will remain faithful to the teachings of the Church.

Not Anxious to Testify.

Ottawa, Dec. 6.—The merchants of this city do not manifest great anxiety so far to testify before the railway commission. On Saturday afternoon but one was present, making four in all examined, and the commission had to adjourn until to-day. This morning it assembled at 11 o'clock, but no witnesses were in attendance, and another adjournment had to be made.

Johnson, the Sprinter, Defeated.

LIBERAL UNIONISTS.

A MONSTER CONFERENCE IN LONDON YESTERDAY.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—A monster conference of Liberal Unionists was held in London to-day. The Marquis of Hartington acted as chairman. Among the distinguished persons present were the Earls of Derby and Northbrook, Baron Rothschild, Mr. George J. Goschen, ex-Attorney-General James and numerous noblemen. Letters of regret were read from Lord Tennyson, the Duke of Argyll and John Bright.

In his letter John Bright says: "I do not attend because I might say something which would give pain. I fear to speak, or even to write, respecting Mr. Gladstone's course which astonishes and greatly pains me, especially his speech to the Irish deputation which lately called upon him. It seems that Mr. Gladstone has gone so far in his wrong course that there is no hope of his return. I deplore and condemn such action, and if present might say something which would widen the breach. Mr. Gladstone's Irish allies are driving matters to an extremity and yet no word comes from Mr. Parnell or Mr. Gladstone to restrain them."

Mr. Chamberlain" wrote: "There is no hope of reuniting the Liberal party unless Mr. Gladstone's scheme of Irish Government is abandoned."

Lord Hartington, in his address to the convention, said the policy which Mr. Gladstone advocated was directly opposed to the opinions of the entire Liberal party and even of all the principles under him. The Liberal Unionists were as true exponents of Liberal principles as were the majority who followed Mr. Gladstone, and in maintaining the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament they were better representatives of those principles. Their association was formed, Lord Hartington continued, to preserve the character of its members as Unionist Liberals, and by organization they had achieved a success which would have been impracticable otherwise, and had only been achieved after organization by the formation of the alliance with the Conservatives. "Siege would be laid to the Gladstone position, which had not been taken by storm, and the Liberal Unionists would have to work until either they were defeated, or they obtained a more decisive victory. The time had not yet arrived when a line of action in Parliament would be laid down. The Liberal Unionists must depend for their line of parliamentary policy upon the action of the Government. The speaker believed there would be found no difficulty on the main point, the maintenance of the Union. The present conference would prove to Liberal Unionists everywhere that they were acting with the full support of Liberal opinion in the party. Mr. Gladstone, Sir William Vernon Harcourt and Mr. John Morley based their speeches upon the grant to Ireland of an executive Government, but these speeches all ignored the arguments of the Liberal Unionists against such a policy. Mr. Gladstone assumed that the Government were competing with him in his scheme for Ireland, but the Government were opposed to anything of the kind. The removal of the present Government would result in the election of Mr. Gladstone, who would settle the Irish question in his own way. We must always remember this, when questions arise which might result in displacing the Government. The Liberal Unionists are interested in sustaining the Government. Questions had arisen which gave the Conservatives a common interest with a section of the Liberals and would forces them to adopt some reforms. It was necessary to maintain the union between the Government and the Liberal Unionists. The question of municipal reform, for instance, was one which the Unionists should give the Government an opportunity to consider. Referring to the situation in Ireland, Lord Hartington said the present anti-rent agitation was not spontaneous. It has, he maintained, been created for political purposes, and, was simply anarchy. If speeches like John Dillon's were not checked the result must be the subversion of every principle of liberty in Ireland. "We are told," said the speaker, "that the English democracy will not stand these evictions, but I think the English democracy will ask who is responsible for them. Mr. Gladstone," added Lord Hartington, "may not be able to control John Dillon, but Mr. Gladstone can speak the one word which will dissolve the alliance between the agitators of Dillon's class and the Liberal party. The English people are awaiting the word, which, if delayed, will seriously endanger the good name of the Liberal party." (Great cheering.)

The Earl of Selborne moved that the conference affirm its determination to make every effort to uphold the Union. The resolution was carried by acclamation.

The Duke of Devonshire moved and Mr. Goschen seconded a resolution to establish [illegible] (Great cheering.)

A woman in Rutland, Ont., formerly named Mary Jane Lamb, aged and respected in her native town, Wednesday.

ROSSA'S REIGN OVER.

THE FENIAN BROTHERHOOD EMPHATICALLY REPUDIATE HIM.

New York, Dec. 7.—At a meeting held in this city to-day by the General Council of the Fenian Brotherhood it was decided, in view of the erroneous statements made by O'Donovan Rossa regarding the severance of his official connection with the brotherhood, to make a statement to the public giving the reasons which rendered, as they say, the removal of Rossa "an absolute necessity." The document recites at great length Rossa's unsuccessful attempt to pack the recent convention of the brotherhood, refers to his past transgressions, which were condoned by the council, and says the leniency then shown towards him he interpreted as weakness on the part of the council and made him think the brotherhood was his personal property. Rossa is charged with having persistently disobeyed all the clauses of the constitution which relate to financial affairs, which obstinate disobedience elicited from the revolutionary directory the following declaration, a copy of which was served upon him.

Headquarters of the Fenian Brotherhood:
NEW YORK, Nov. 2.

We, the Revolutionary Directory of the Fenian Brotherhood, hereby declare that Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa, Chief Executive, holds money in his possession belonging to the brotherhood in violation of the constitution and in defiance of this body, who are the guardians of the funds of the organization. That we, together with the treasurer, have repeatedly demanded this money of the brotherhood from him and he has persistently refused to pay it over to the treasurer.

(Signed by the revolutionary directory.)

"O'Donovan Rossa," the document goes on to say, "knows in his soul that he acts falsely and deceitfully when he endeavors to make it appear that the United Irishmen Society did all the skirmishing work that has been done during the last six years. He knows that there has not been a club, circle or camp of the United Irishmen Society in existence within the last five years. That body was born in Philadelphia in 1880 and it died inside of a year. How much O'Donovan Rossa's conduct as 'Executive Secretary,' had to do with the death, there are those no doubt who knew. His attempt to now resurrect the corpse of this poor body, so as to make it appear that he has an 'organization' at his back can be well and correctly understood when taken in connection with his present appeal for a new skirmishing fund."

Further on, it says: "O'Donovan Rossa says he will still work with the good men of the Fenian brotherhood. The only bad men who ever got into the secrets of the brotherhood since the days of that trio of wretches, Corydon, Massey and Nagle, were his (O'Donovan Rossa's) 'special friends,' 'Red Jim' McDermott and Phelan of Kansas City. Neither of those men belonged to the organization, but he fraternized with them unknown to the council. To McDermott, who would not be allowed in the brotherhood, he gave, unknown to the council, credentials virtually making him an agent of the brotherhood. The result was the life-long imprisonment of Featherstone and others and the driving of men from their comfortable homes into cold and cheerless exile. Against the express commands of the council he took Phelan to his heart of hearts and made arrangements whereby Phelan could mess skirmishing agents within the jurisdiction of the English law. * * * * No misfortune has befallen the brotherhood of late years for which O'Donovan Rossa is not personally responsible." Regarding his proffered resignation to the council it says the resignation was not entertained for the reason that the council could not conscientiously allow him to escape the consequences of his acts in any such manner. They preferred to allow the matter to go to the convention, and there, where he could charge no clique or conspiracy, let his actions be dealt with. The convention did so. An investigating committee of five, on which were four of his personal friends, unanimously found him guilty of fraud, treachery, treason, persistent violation of the constitution in financial matters and gross indiscretion. The convention unanimously adopted this report. The report, which was signed by each member of the committee, says: "We find the foregoing charges sustained by the evidence, and we respectfully submit the same to be used by the council only in defending the brotherhood from any attack that may be made upon it." The document says in conclusion: "Rossa has refused to give up the keys of the postoffice box rented and paid for by the brotherhood since 1885, and he has informed a committee of our organization that he would retain all moneys coming to the said box or letters or cards intended for the brotherhood."

BULGARIA'S REPLY TO THE PORTE.

The Bulgars will not Accept Prince Nicholas of Mingrelia.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 7.—The Porte has advised the Bulgarian Regency to accept Prince Nicholas of Mingrelia as successor to Prince Alexander. The reason given is that his election is the only means to pacify Bulgaria.

SOFIA, Dec. 7.—The Bulgarian Government has replied to the Porte that Bulgaria will never accept Prince Nicholas of Mingrelia for the throne and that if the Porte proposes a proper candidate the Government will consider the question of new elections for the Sobranje.

Dr. Weir Again Remanded.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 7.—Dr. Weir of Oscoda, Mich., again appeared before Judge Elliott this afternoon, and was formally charged with the murder of Mabel Clark. After W. M. Featherly of Oscoda and several other witnesses had given their evidence, Weir's solicitor asked for some time to enable him to obtain certain evidence necessary for the defence. The judge acceded to his request, and remanded Weir back to jail for eight days.

Prince Luitpold at Berlin.

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—Prince Luitpold, Regent of Bavaria, arrived here to-day. He was met at the railway station by Emperor William, accompanied by the Crown Prince Frederick William, the other royal princes and a number of court officials. The Emperor and Crown Prince embraced Prince Luitpold, kissing him repeatedly. Cheering crowds lined the route to the palace.

Nine St. Leger winners have been imported into America, the first of which was the celebrated Phenomenon, by Herod, who won in 1793, he being imported in 1803, and died upon landing. Another good one was Spadille, the son of Highflyer, and winner in 1787, who was imported to Virginia. Barefoot was probably the best St. Leger winner that had come to America. He won in 1823, after a false start, and had to run the race over again. His owner challenged the Derby winner of the year, Emilius, and it was declined. Barefoot was a great success here, and through his daughter, Motto, we get Sensation, Onondaga, Stratford, etc. Barefoot came to Massachusetts in 1829. Rowton, son of Oscan, won in 1829, and was imported by the Merritts of Virginia in 1835. CONFLICTING COUNSELS.

There is great disturbance in the Ontario Conservative camp. Mr. Meredith and the Mail are at loggerheads upon the religious discord cry. The Mail and Inspector Hughes, who have been conspiring together in order to wreck the Public and Separate school system, have come to the parting of the ways and the organ has denounced both the action of the Toronto School Board and the Inspector. Even Mr. Carnegie has repudiated the Mail, and has twice publicly stated that he did not oppose an amendment of the school law whereby Roman Catholics are allowed representation on High School Boards, which the Mail claims is a slavish concession. Now, these distinguished persons seem to be at cross purposes, the only point in which they agree being the necessity of ousting Mr. Mowat. Their policy is no policy, only one of stirring up discord and trimming their sails to catch the popular breeze. They do not work from any principle, and that is the reason their opinions and statements clash. Of course, nothing consistent can be expected of Mr. Meredith. He blows hot and cold in a breath, and veers about like a weathercock as the wind blows. In 1883, in his place in the Legislature, for instance, he said:—

I recognize the right of the Roman Catholic authorities to give their advice and to make enquiry with respect to what books are to be used in our High Schools in which their children are taught.

But the wind blew from Ottawa and caught increased force as it passed the Mail building, and we find Mr. Meredith in his address to the electors of London, saying:—

Any interference with the management or control of the Public School by Separate School supporters is opposed to the principle upon which our provincial system of education was founded, and is not to be permitted.

And yet again Mr. Meredith denounces the Mail no later than last Friday. In his Cobourg speech he asserts that the party who raises the religious cry in a country "like this, where we have people of different races and religions, is an enemy not only to his country, but to his God." Then to make confusion worse confounded, we have the Dominion Government contradicting all the Mail and its co-adjuters have advanced on the school question. In the large guide book, written by a then employee of the Toronto Mail newspaper, recently issued by the Dominion Minister of Agriculture, professing to contain accurate "information for intending settlers," and bearing the date, Ottawa, 1886, we find the following:—

One of the chief features of the Province of Ontario, as also one of its chief attractions as a home for settlers, is its admirable system of public education. This has been brought to its present perfection by much care and study, the systems in the most advanced countries in Europe having been carefully studied and their best points appropriated. The schools are non-sectarian. The children of all denominations are admitted without distinction. Provision is, however, made to allow the Roman Catholics to have Separate schools.

All this confusion arises from the condition that in trumping up bogus charges against the Mowat Administration in reference to school matters, the calumniators do not presume to argue from facts or take measures to agree upon their inventions. Anything to defeat Mowat, justifies in their minds any violence to truth and consistency.

MR. CARNEGIE REPUDIATES HIS OWN COMMON SENSE.

(From the Globe.)

In the Globe of Wednesday last there appeared an editorial paragraph stating, with respect to the change in the School Law granting Roman Catholics representation on the High School Boards, as follows:—

"A few days ago Mr. Carnegie, at a meeting of his own in Peterborough, was asked his opinion about this change in the law. His reply was that 'he favored it' and that Mr. Fraser had advanced such arguments as convinced him of his fairness.'"

This statement Mr. Mowat accepted as true (as we will presently prove it to be), and inserted it in his memorandum printed on Thursday last,

On Saturday Mr. Mowat received the following unmannerly, but thoroughly characteristic, letter from Mr. Carnegie:—

PETERBOROUGH, Dec. 3, 1886.

HON. OLIVER MOWAT, Toronto.

DEAR SIR,—I observe that in a memorandum on the "No Popery Cry," published by you in the Toronto Globe of yesterday, you seize upon an alleged statement of mine (first heard of by me on seeing it in the same Globe of the preceding day), to the effect that I had stated at a meeting in this county that I had been convinced by the Hon. Mr. Fraser of the "fairness" of the provision made by your Government and its mechanical majority in the Legislature for the appointment of a High School trustee by the trustees of the Separate Schools.

To this statement, now that you have endeavored to bolster up a bad cause with it, I desire to give an emphatic denial, and I think I have a right to ask that you shall cause this denial to be given the same publicity as your memorandum.

Yours truly,
JAMES CARNEGIE.

Now it can prove by those who [illegible] that the remarks [illegible] suggested to Mr. Carnegie were actually made. The only point about which we are for the moment in ignorance is the name of the place where the statement was first made. It may not not have been in Peterborough County but just outside the borders thereof, and Mr. Carnegie may be sheltering himself under this miserable quibble; but it was made at a meeting in the early part of last week by Mr. Carnegie, and repeated by him at Peterborough on Nov. 30.

Our first piece of evidence consists of the fact that a shorthand report of Mr. Carnegie's first speech was made, and that our report was taken from that.

The second is that the Peterborough EXAMINER, without having had access to that report, represents Mr. Carnegie in his second speech as speaking thus:—

"He had voted for Roman Catholic representation on High School Boards because Hon. Mr. Fraser's arguments had convinced him."

And third, that the Peterborough Review, Mr. Carnegie's own paper, makes him speak in identical terms, as follows:—

"Though he did not like the principle, yet when Mr. Fraser stated that not a Roman Catholic in Ontario sat on a High School Board, he (Mr. Carnegie) thought it only right that they should, when they were taxed to support it, and he did not oppose the measure."

The above furnishes absolutely conclusive proof that Mr. Carnegie did use the remarkably sensible language, against the imputation of which to him he now churlishly protests.

We learn, however—so scrupulously careful is the Attorney General not to take the slightest advantage of an opponent—that he has stricken out from a pamphlet, now being printed, containing his Memorandum, all reference to Mr. Carnegie and his piece of unwonted wisdom. This is a practical reproof of a kind which Mr. Carnegie, perhaps more than any other Ontario politician, needs to lay to heart.

[It may be added that the first occasion on which Mr. Carnegie stated that he did not oppose the legislation permitting Roman Catholics representation on High School Boards, was at a meeting held in the Temperance Hall, Smith, on Nov. 22; the second occasion was on Tuesday evening, Nov. 30 in the Opera House. There is no doubt that Mr. Carnegie, on both occasions, did use the language attributed him. The only ground on which he can justify his denial is by the "miserable quibble" that he did not use one or two of the words employed in reporting his remarks, the substitution, however, in nowise altering the fact that he asserted that he did not oppose the legislation in question.]

Mothers,

do you not see the pallid face, once so bright, growing thinner? Do you not hear the hacking cough, and note the wasted, languid indifference, where once was mirth, brightness, and keen enjoyment for all the pleasures of life? Do not be mistaken or deceived. That child is dying of consumption—slowly, but surely. Yet thousands are living to-day who have been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," which surpass all other medicines for the cure of that disease. Send ten cents for pamphlet and testimonials. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, New York. 6dw49

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. eodw41tf

WEATHER NOTES.

If our local dissolution has had any effect upon our departed month in bringing snow and rain and a large amount of rough weather, we may expect something of unusual occurrence before 5 p.m. of the 28th, as the latter end of this report will show. The beginning of the month brought a cold snap. In November, rain fell on 13 days to the depth of 2 inches and 12-100 of an inch. Snow fell on 12 days to the depth of 7¼ inches. Dashes of hail on 1 day, fog on 1 day, and three of the severest gales experienced for some time and bright northern lights on 4 nights. Our warmest day was on the 3rd at 3 p.m., the thermometer standing at 76° in the shade. The coldest on the morning of the 30th, the thermometer dropping to 2° above zero, leaving the mean temperature of the month at sunrise and sunset 33 28-30°.

A COLD DIP.—On the morning of the 3rd Dec. the thermometer stood at 3° below zero, the 4th at 14°, it never rising to zero during the day, and at sunset 2° below, and on the morning of the 5th at 16° below.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

XX.

Strong as the impression was which Capt. Bennysleek had produced on Randal, Mrs. Presty's first words dismissed it from his mind. She asked him if he had any message for his brother.

Randal instantly looked at the clock. "Has Catherine not sent to the farm, yet?" he asked, in astonishment.

Mrs. Presty's mind seemed to be absorbed in her daughter. "Ah, poor Catherine! Worn out with anxiety and watching at Kitty's bedside. Night after night without any sleep; night after night tortured by suspense. As usual, she can depend on her old mother for sympathy. I have taken all her household duties on myself till she is in better health."

Randal tried again. "Mrs. Presty, am I to understand (after the plain directions Herbert gave) that no messenger has been sent to the farm?"

Mrs. Presty held her venerable head higher than ever when Randal pronounced his brother's name. "I see no necessity for being in a hurry," she answered, stiffly, "after the brutal manner in which Herbert has behaved to me. Put yourself in my place—and imagine what you would feel if you were told to hold your tongue."

Randal wasted no more time on ears that were deaf to remonstrance. Feeling the serious necessity of interfering to some good purpose, he asked where he might find his sister-in-law.

"I have taken Catherine into the garden," Mrs. Presty announced. "The doctor himself suggested—so, I may say ordered—it. He is afraid that she may fall ill next, poor soul, if she doesn't get air and exercise."

In Mrs. Linley's own interests Randal resolved on advising her to write to her husband by the messenger; explaining that she was not to blame for the inexcusable delay which had already taken place. Without a word more to Mrs. Presty he hastened out of the room. That inveterately distrustful woman called him back. She desired to know where he was going and why he was in a hurry.

"I am going to the garden," Randal answered.

"To speak to Catherine?"

"Yes."

"Needless trouble, my dear Randal. She will be back in a quarter of an hour, and she will pass through this room on her way upstairs."

Another quarter of an hour was a matter of no importance to Mrs. Presty! Randal took his own way—the way into the garden.

His silence and his determination to join his sister-in-law roused Mrs. Presty's ready suspicions; she concluded that he was bent on making mischief between her daughter and herself. The one thing to do in this case was to follow him instantly. The active old lady trotted out of the room, strongly inclined to think that the Evil Genius of the family might be Randal Linley after all!

They had both taken the shortest way to the garden; that is to say, the way through the library, which communicated at its farthest end with the corridor and the vaulted flight of stairs leading directly out of the house. Of the two doors in the drawing room, one, on the left, led to the grand staircase and the hall; the other, on the right, opened on the back stairs, and on a side entrance to the house, used by the family when they were pressed for time, as well as by the servants.

The drawing-room had not been empty more than a few minutes when the door on the right was suddenly opened. Herbert Linley entered with hurried, uncertain steps. He took the chair that was nearest to him, and dropped into it like a man overpowered by agitation or fatigue.

He had ridden from the farm at headlong speed, terrified by the unexplained delay in the arrival of the messenger from home. Unable any longer to suffer the torment of unrelieved suspense, he had returned to make inquiry at the house. As he interpreted the otherwise inexplicable neglect of his instructions, the last chance of saving the child's life had failed, and his wife had been afraid to tell him the dreadful truth.

After an interval he rose and went into the library.

It was empty, like the drawing-room. The bell was close by him. He lifted his hand to ring it—and drew back. As brave a man as ever lived, he knew what fear was now. The father's courage failed him before the prospect of summoning a servant and hearing, for all he knew to the contrary, that his child was dead.

How long he stood there, alone and irresolute, he never remembered when he thought of it in after days. All he knew was that there came a time when a sound in the drawing-room attracted his attention. It was nothing more important than the opening of a door.

The sound came from that side of the room which was nearest to the grand staircase—and therefore nearest also to the hall, in one direction, and to the bed-chambers in the other.

Some person had entered the room. Whether it was one of the family or one of the servants he would hear in either case what had happened in his absence. He parted the curtains over the library entrance and looked through.

The person was a woman. She stood with her back turned toward the library, lifting a cloak off a chair. As she shook the cloak before putting it on she changed her position. He saw the face, never to be forgotten by him to the last day of his life. He saw Sydney Westerfield.

XXI.

Linley had one instant left in which he might have drawn back into the library in time to escape Sydney's notice. He was incapable of the effort of will. Grief and suspense had deprived him of that elastic readiness of mind which springs at once from thought to action. For a moment he hesitated. In that moment she looked up and saw him.

With a faint cry of alarm she let the cloak drop from her hands. As helpless as he was, as silent as he was, she stood rooted to the spot.

He tried to control himself. Blindly knowing what he said he made commonplace excuses as if he had been a stranger. "I am sorry to have startled you; I had no idea of finding you in this room."

Sydney pointed to her cloak on the floor, and to her hat on a chair near it. Unconsciously she was repeating what she had seen him do when he first entered the room. He [illegible] her into the room, he did the [illegible] her [illegible] and [illegible]. He [illegible] Sydney [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Poisoned by Blue Vitriol.

Yesterday afternoon a little girl named Payne, one of Miss Sim's pupils in the South Ward School, fell off her chair in a fit, which, it is believed, was brought on by a piece of blue vitrol which she had in her mouth along with some candy. It is said she picked up the vitrol on the ground near the Grand Trunk station, where it had doubtless been emptied out of a battery. The child is very low, but, under Dr. Pigeon's care, will likely recover. The child had a similar attack a year ago.

He has had several years' experience in school teaching, as head master, etc. During the two weeks in which he has had the actual management of the Collegiate Institute here, Mr. Long has shown that he is a capable and earnest instructor, well fitted to take charge of the large and important school to which he has been assigned. Board of Education.

[illegible] to Mr. [illegible] Teachers in the Central School.

The regular meeting of the Board of Education was held in the school building Tuesday night. The following members were present:—Mayor Stevenson, Chairman; W. A. Morrow, Secretary; Messrs. Burnham, Sawers, Sproule, Weir, Wrighton, Rutherford, Deane, Errett and Dumble.

Mr. Rutherford laid a complaint against one of the teachers for too severe punishment, which, it was said, gave a boy 100 strokes with a strap. Discussion on the subject disclosed that another boy was whipped till his hands were cut, and that still another had been severely handled. The members assembled about the board spoke very warmly on the unnecessary punishment which was sometimes inflicted. In the case referred to, however, it was shown that the lad had been very obstinate and could be overcome in no other way.

COMMUNICATIONS.

An extract from the annual report of Inspector Seath on the Collegiate Institute was read, which, after reviewing the equipment of the school, closed with the following remarks:—

"The accomodations are much improved; but as I have pointed out, they are still defective, especially in the matter of playgrounds and waterclosets. Part of the Public school is on the same flat as the Institute. I have no doubt, however, that the Board has done as much as can be expected in the meantime, but it should bear in mind when making its estimates for 1887 that the school does not yet fulfill Collegiate Institute requirements as to accommodations and equipments."

The report of the attendance at the various schools for November was presented as follows:—

	No. on Roll	Ave. Att.
Collegiate Institute	143	123
South Ward School	210	185
West	195	167
Central School	700	569

THE LATE DR. TASSIE.

Chairman STEVENSON referred to the sudden death of the late Dr. Tassie, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, stating that Mr. Long had been appointed head master pro tem. till the Board could meet again. The school had suffered a serious loss in Dr. Tassie's death, and it was fortunate a man like Mr. Long was at hand to take charge. As far as he could learn, the school was getting along nicely under the new management. He hoped the Board would make some resolution to overcome the difficulty.

Mr. DUMBLE then moved the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. Errett:—

That the sudden and unexpected death of Dr. Tassie, Principal of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, calls from us an expression of profound and deep sympathy with his bereaved wife and family.

Though but about two years with us, by his dignified and courteous bearing he won the respect and esteem of all, while the fact that for so long a period he had occupied a prominent position as an educator of Canadian youth, makes his removal a matter of widespread regret to the many hundreds of Canadians who, in his famous Galt school and elsewhere, had enjoyed the privilege of his careful and skilful training.

This Board deeply regrets the death of a kind and good man, and unites in the hope that He who holds the issues of life may sustain and comfort his sorrowing wife and family.

And resolved further, that this resolution be inscribed on the minutes and a copy transmitted to Mrs. Tassie.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.

Mr. DUMBLE, chairman of the Committee on Appointments, presented the report of his committee, which stated that, in accordance with the general usage of this Board, they have recommended the promotion of teachers where qualified, and so filled the vacancy caused by Miss Johnston's resignation. The report recommended that Miss Hall be appointed to Miss Johnston's place, Miss Keele to Miss Hall's, Miss Errett to Miss Keele's place, and that Miss Errett's place be filled by Miss Richardson.

Mr. SAWERS moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Deane, that Miss Aldridge be appointed to fill Miss Keele's place, instead of Miss Errett.

The yeas and nays were taken as follows:

YEAS.—Messrs. Deane, Rutherford, Weir, Wrighton and Sawers.—5.

NAYS.—Messrs. Dumble, Errett, Sproule, Burnham and Stevenson.—5.

The amendment was declared lost.

The report was also put to the Board and declared lost.

APPLICATIONS.

Applications were then read from Mr. Long, of Peterborough, and Mr. L. Lapp, of Uxbridge, for the position of head master of the Collegiate Institute.

Miss Sim applied for promotion, and Miss Canna for a position on the staff of teachers. Both were referred to the Committee on Appointments.

MR. LONG APPOINTED.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Deane, that in the opinion of this Board Mr. Jas. Long, M. A., be and is hereby appointed Principal of the Collegiate Institute, at the same salary, thus filling the vacancy caused by the death of the late Dr. Tassie.—Carried unanimously.

Mr. Errett moved, seconded by Mr. Dumble, that the following polling places and returning officers for the same be appointed:—for First Ward, Joseph Lundy; Second Ward, Charles Cameron; Third Ward, John Irwin; Fourth Ward, William Lee; and that the same polling places used for the municipal elections for this year, be used for the school elections.—Carried.

A GRANT.

On motion, widow of the late Dr. Tassie was granted a month's salary, and Mr. Earle was allowed for the time he was obliged to remain off duty from a broken leg.

Mr. Rutherford moved, seconded by Mr. Deane, that the report of the committee on appointments be re-considered.—Lost.

The Board then adjourned.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1886.

"A GROSS CHEAT."

Our down-street contemporary, in its last evening's issue, contains a most bitter and scurrilous attempt to stir up discord and strife in a peaceful community. No more disgraceful and dastardly attack was ever made upon the character of any public man than the Review's shameful assault on Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, with a view to hold him up as an avowed rebel, a perjured privy councillor, and defender of murder." What are the grounds for this assault? Hon. Mr. Laurier is credited with asserting that if he had had to suffer the same provocation, and injustice and robbery of rights as the half-breeds of the North-West, he, like them, would have resisted the cruelty and injustice of the Dominion Government. The Metis had their rights withheld from them for seven or eight years, all peaceful means, such as petitions and delegations, were disregarded, and when the lands they had settled and improved were turned over to a partizan colonization company, and all hopes of peacefully securing their rights vanished, they had recourse to armed resistance. The Dominion Government itself offered the strongest justification of this course, by yielding to force what they had denied to justice, and taking steps at once to grant the half breeds the very rights, the withholding of which drove them to arms. It was in view of these facts that Hon. Wilfrid Laurier is said to have used the language so coarsely condemned of the Review. But be it in whatever company. The puerility of the attack is shown by the admissions of Sir John himself. Speaking of Sir George E. Cartier Sir John said:

"He was a Frenchman every inch of him, but he was a true patriot. As a young man he carried his musket to the rebellion of 1837."

It is also a matter of history that the Earl of Chatham, whose loyalty even the Review, will not, perhaps, question, exclaimed in the British House of Commons:

"Were I an American, as I am an Englishman, while a foreign troop was landed in my country, I should never lay down my arms, never! never! never!"

Will our contemporary denounce all Sir George Cartier, and the Earl of Chatham, who stand in exactly the same position as Hon. Mr. Laurier, "avowed rebels, perjurers and defenders of murder." No; the object is to stir up race strife and embitter public feeling, and no journal, laying the least claim to respectability, would be guilty of such a disgraceful attack on any statesman, as has been directed against the leader of the Liberals of the Province of Quebec, a man who is honored among his compatriots from Hull to Gaspe, and who has been received elsewhere with the cordial respect due a great orator, and the leading statesman of our sister Province of Quebec. The Review, in making the base attack it has made, grossly insults every French Canadian and every Reformer in the Dominion. Reformers know too well the price that has been paid for the liberty we now enjoy to be deceived by the bitter rant of the local organ. They know that our civil and religious liberty in Canada is based on the blood of the patriots, who did not shrink from laying down their lives for the benefit of their country, and they will not consent now to be a party to the reviving of old time strife and bitterness.

It may not be out of place to contrast the course of the Review, who greets the Liberal leaders coming to Cobourg with coarse insult, with the treatment extended by THE EXAMINER to Sir John and his colleagues on their recent visit. Though we did not agree on one point, politically, with them, they were respectfully treated, as was due the leading men of one of our great political parties, and to the due a large portion of our fellow citizens who delighted to honor them. We respected their preferences as we expect ourselves to the great mass of them—to respect ours, and we believe responsible Conservatives will not sympathize with the base attempt that has been made to grossly insult their Liberal fellow citizens with whom they live in peace and concord. In its shameless attack, the Review has overshot the mark. Where it expected to arouse indignation and bitter feelings, its coarse abuse and bitter jibes will only arouse the contempt of the insulted and bring the blush of shame to the cheek of of those honorable Conservatives whom it seeks to associate with its slanderous broadside of abuse.

MR. MEREDITH supports the policy of Sir John Macdonald in all points and, of course, he has never yet pronounced disapproval of the Dominion Government's course in increasing the expenditure on immigration from $329,000 in 1878 to $660,000 in 1885. Yet he pretends to oppose the Ontario Government for spending too much money for immigration purposes, though not one cent is paid from Ontario coffers. The chief inducements for thrifty farming immigrants, and the class MR. MEREDITH would most encourage to settle in Ontario, are the free grants of land in Manitoba and the North-West.

MR. MEREDITH'S RED RAG BUG.

The most charitable conclusion about Mr. Meredith, says the Hamilton Times, is that he has lost his head. He argued before the Tories of London last night that the principal issue in the present Ontario campaign was the conduct of Sir Oliver Mowat's Government both honestly and fairly administered the affairs of the province, but whether Riel should or should not have been hanged!

No, no, Mr. Meredith; you cannot work into power by tagging 'tended the apron string of Sir John Macdonald, neither can you gain the coveted distinction of being a great leader by raising an issue over the settlement of which an Ontario Administration has no power whatever. You never have been Premier, Mr. Meredith, or you would know that a man who has to manage the affairs of this province—who has to resist the attacks on its autonomy made by Ottawa Bunglers—who has to combat the anti-provincial sentiments of men like yourself, Mr. Meredith, who go back on their province to help the Ottawa wirepullers out of a tight place—have enough to do without entering into a fight over the remains of a dead man.

THE Toronto Mail asserts that the Scott Act is not enforced in the counties surrounding Brockville, and holds Hon. G. F. Fraser personally responsible, and the organ in Prescott takes the same ground. What are the facts? asks the Recorder. During the past six months, principally the past six weeks, R. R. Phillips, inspector for Leeds and Brockville, has made 28 prosecutions and secured 26 convictions, realizing fines amounting to about $1,200. Capt. Chapman, inspector for Grenville, has made 15 prosecutions, securing 10 convictions, realizing about $1,000 in fines. Inspectors who have accomplished this amount, our contemporary argues, be considered failures.

REV. DR. CORNBASE writes to say that the Scripture selections now read in the Public Schools were approved of by the Presbyterian Synod, and that the Ontario Government were thanked for having seconded to the wishes of the Church. The very men who, it is remarked, now snarl at the course pursued by the Minister of Education then coincided in the resolution upholding his action! In these circumstances, Dr. Cochrane says he strongly objects that "Mr. "Ross should be so bitterly and unjustly "attacked for doing what was approved of "by the Synod of the Presbyterian Church, "where the agitation for the reading of the "Bible originally began."

THE Hamilton Times, one of the foremost and most ably conducted Liberal journals in Canada, has filed a new claim to public approbation by appearing in an entire new typographical dress. But there is no change in its open, straightforward political utterances, nor in its attitude of active aggression against all forms of political post hamburg and corrupt method. Long may it flourish.

THE CRISIS IN FRANCE.

A Motion for a Revision of the Constitution Defeated in the Chambers.

PARIS, Dec. 7.—President Grevy again conferred with M. Floquet this afternoon on the subject of the formation of the new Cabinet.

In the Chamber of Deputies to-day M. Michelin, an Extremist, moved urgency for a revision of the constitution, which, he said, was the only way of escaping from the present political confusion. M. Barodet opposed the motion, declaring that harmony among the different sections of the Republican party in France was the best security which the country could have when a crisis occurred. M. Michelin's motion was rejected by a vote of 431 against 41.

Ulster Royalists Dissatisfied.

DUBLIN, Dec. 7.—The Ulster Loyalist Anti-Repeal Union has sent to the Marquis of Londonderry a vote of resolutions expressing dissatisfaction at the weakness of the Irish Executive in dealing with the defiant and shameless conspiracy to defraud one class of the Irish people and to demoralize another, and assuring the Government of the Union's cordial support in any attempt to crush the conspiracy.

George Answers the Archbishop.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Henry George has written a reply, nearly four columns in length, to Archbishop Corrigan's denunciation of his (George's) land theories in a recent pastoral letter.

All Lost But the Dog.

ASBURY PARK, N.J., Dec. 7.—The schooner John T. Lang of New York went ashore this morning off the Highlands. The life-saving crew succeeded in boarding the vessel, but there was only a dog there. The crew are supposed to have been swept overboard by the heavy seas. The schooner will probably prove a total loss.

Another Seminole War Feared.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 8.—For months bad feeling has existed between the Seminole Indians in Dade and Monroe counties and a band of cowboys encamped on Lake Okeechobee. The Indians claim that these employes of the South Florida cattle kings drive off and kill their cattle and hogs. Three weeks ago shots were exchanged between the parties. The Indians have since been having war dances in the Everglades. Many settlers have removed their families to the islands for safety. A gentleman from Titusville says the people on the outskirts of the Everglades fear a massacre of the whites unless the trouble is adjusted in a few days. The Seminoles number 500 fighters, and could very capture all the Everglades.

A Fatal Dynamite Explosion.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Dec. 8.—A terrible explosion of dynamite occurred at Black Loose Tunnel, on the Prince extension, yesterday afternoon, by which two men were instantly killed and three wounded, one fatally. The killed are: W. A. Cape, Ironton, and Michael Mulvaney, Maryland, Ohio. James Gribbing was frightfully wounded, and A. S. Kemp and John Gray received bruises and cuts. The explosion was caused by drilling in an old hole in the heading of the tunnel, when the drill struck several forgotten dynamite cartridges at the bottom of the hole, causing the catastrophe. The bodies of the killed were brought to this city.

Failures on the Oil Market.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Six underwriters were announced on the petroleum exchange to-day, the unfortunate brokers being Frank Kilmer, W. T. Whitney, Julius John, H. Louis, jr., W. Wagner, and A. W. Tapp. Kilmer found means to meet his engagements and resumed business, and it was thought some of the others would do what he did. In the afternoon the excitement subsided to a considerable extent and although occasional comparatively weak spells were still noticed, the prevailing impression was that the worst was over. Quotations opened as follows: Opening 78, closing 80, highest 78, lowest 78.

The Crisis in France.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—M. Floquet, President of the Chamber of Deputies, who yesterday undertook to form a Ministry, has advised President Grevy to summon M. Goblet to form a new Ministry. If M. Goblet refuses, as it is believed he will, M. Floquet will again undertake the task.

Under pressure from President Grevy, M. Goblet has consented to form a Cabinet.

Prince Alfonso to Visit Spain in Style.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—The Temps says that Prince Alfonso, brother of the King of Portugal, intends to visit Spain in the course of the present month. The Spanish Government has made preparations for the reception of the Prince, and will place a special train at his disposal.

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup is the best medicine, no doubt but it is largely responsible for the enormous sales of worm exterminators. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty six cents per dozen has been added to the price of the former, thereby giving customers nearly eighty cents more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have each the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of [illegible] bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles free, 10c. regular size 75c. [illegible]

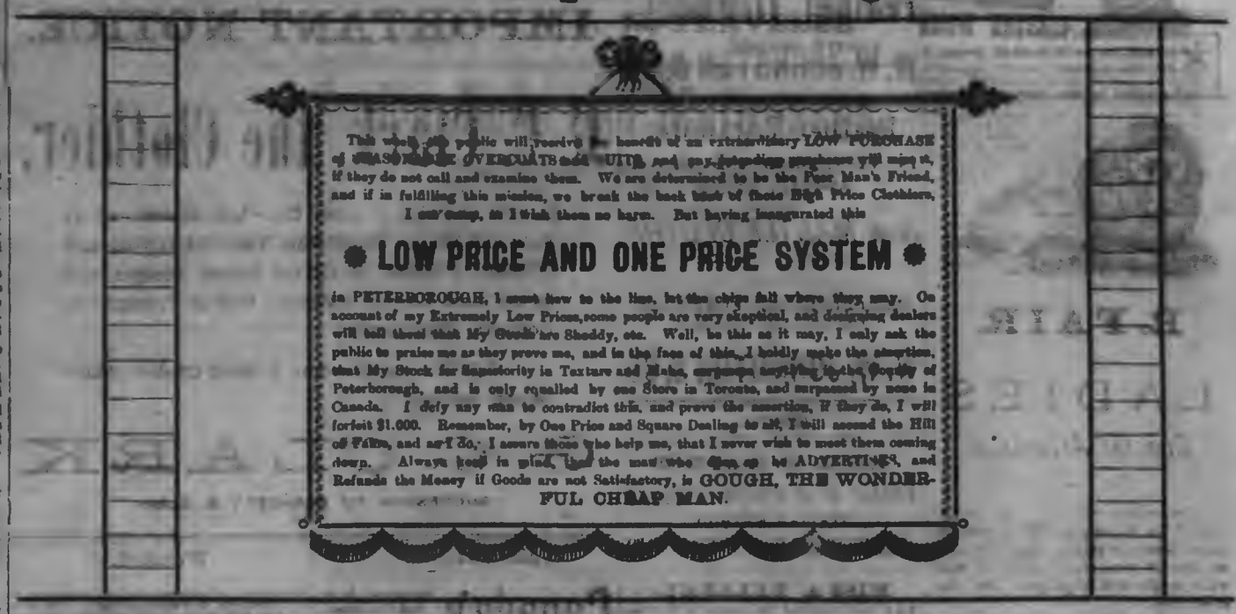
One Price and Square Dealing to All!



This week the public will receive the benefit of an extraordinary LOW PURCHASE of [illegible] OVERCOATS and SUITS, and any [illegible] anywhere will agree with me, if they do not call and examine them. We are determined to be the Poor Man's Friend, and if in fulfilling this mission, we break the back bone of these High Price Clothiers, I can't help, as I wish them no harm. But having inaugurated this
LOW PRICE AND ONE PRICE SYSTEM
in PETERBOROUGH, I must bow to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. Always keep in mind, that the man who puts up to ADVERTISES, and Refunds the Money if Goods are not Satisfactory, is GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Some will have it that the Scott Act is a failure; others protest that it is not. This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of

GOOD FURS

come from such places as Toronto, Rochester, Chicago and Winnipeg to get their wants supplied from our manufacture, and are thereby the gainers. We sell better goods at retail prices than can be bought at wholesale. Highest prices paid for raw furs.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

The letter in which he spoke warned Sir to persist in leaving him, while her pecuniary remained firm. "I had arranged with Mrs. Macdonald," she wrote, "that what went in creasing agitation; his eyes rested on her eagerly with a wild look in them. She made a resolute effort to speak to him collectedly—she called him "Mr. Linley"—she bade him good-by.

It was useless. He stood between her and the door; she disregarded what she had said as if he had not heard it. "Hardly a day passes," he went on, "but I hear something of you."

"You shouldn't tell me that!"

"How can I see you again—and not tell you?"

She burst out with a last entreaty. "For God's sake, let us go!"

His manner became suddenly subdued; his tones softened. He looked at her as one of others that was most perilous to her—he appealed to her pity. "Oh! Sydney, it's so hard to part with you!"

"Spare me!" she cried, passionately. "You don't know how I suffer."

"Oh, I know it—no words can say what I feel for you! Are you sorry for me, Sydney? Have you thought of me since we parted?"

She had striven against herself, and against him, till her last effort at assistance was exhausted. In reckless despair she let the truth escape her at last.

"When do I ever think of anything else! I am a wretch unworthy of all the kindness that has been shown to me. I don't deserve your interest; I don't even deserve your pity. Send me away—be hard on me—be brutal to me. Have some mercy on those innocent creatures whose life is one long, hopeless effort to forget you!" Her voice, her look, maddened him. He drew her to his breast; he held her in his arms; she struggled faintly as he strove to kiss her lips. "Be true to me, darling, darling!" he whispered, "or you will remember how weak I am. Oh, Herbert, I'm dying—dying—dying!" Her voice grew fainter and fainter; her head sank on his breast. He lifted her face to his—and repeated words of love. He kissed her again and again.

The curtains over the library entrance moved noiselessly when they were parted. The footsteps of Catherine Linley were inaudible as she passed through and entered the room.

She stood still for a moment—petrified with horror.

Not a sound warned them when she advanced. After hesitating for a moment she raised her hand toward her husband's head to tell him of her presence by a touch. She drew it back, suddenly recollecting that her own face was in darkness, and that she might be mistaken.

Then, and then only, they knew what had happened.

Face to face [illegible] every tie that had once united them appeared to sunder in an instant. The first word [illegible] whose resistless hand [illegible] in ruin.

"Catherine—"

With inexpressible pity [illegible] brightly out of the darkness [illegible] ped him.

"Not a word!"

He refused to be silenced. "It is I," he said. "I only who can be blamed."

"Spare me!"

"Spare [illegible] cure."

Herbert [illegible] your side."

Her eyes turned from him and rested on Sydney. "[illegible] to say to [illegible] me, if you can. Listen to me, if you can."

Sydney lifted her head. She looked vacantly at the [illegible] window, behind which she saw [illegible] standing between her husband and her governess—Miss Henry Dobbs.

"Mrs. Wragge told you [illegible] of my child's life." She paused. Sydney looked by the arm—and put her in the room with one hand while he [illegible] with the other. She pointed to her husband, and spoke to Sydney: "Take him!"

Sydney [illegible] out of the room [illegible] without a word.

South Ward Entertainment.

Last night a very pleasant and successful entertainment was given in the Church of England Sunday School room, South ward, under the auspices of the ladies of the district. The room was well filled, and a good programme was rendered as follows: Violin solo by Mr. A. V. R. Young, with organ accompaniment by Miss Gray; song by Mr. Orde, "The Tar's Farewell;" dialogue by Misses May and Ella Martin; song by Miss Ballantyne, "O, Sing to Me, Bobbie"—encored. Mr. John Millar gave an excellent and entertaining exhibition of his powers of mind-reading, successfully making several mixed tests. A humorous song by Mr. Ardagh, "Father O'Flynn," was encored; it was followed by a song by Mr. H. A. Hammond, "Riches in the Cradle of the Deep;" duet, Miss Shaw and Mr. Orde; humorous reading, Mr. Walter Hooper, "She was too Fastidious;" song, Mr. Hawley, "Thy Voice is Weak"—encored. Mrs. Orde of Ashburnham, very kindly and effectively filled the position of accompanyist. The evening passed pleasantly, all private parties seemed well pleased with the entertainment.

SCOTT ACT CONVENTION.

A Representative Gathering on the Temperance Question.

How the Scott Act Works in the County—The Inspectors and Commissioners Strongly Condemned—The Mayor and Police Force Come in for a Share of the Blame.

About a hundred representative citizens and farmers of Peterborough and surrounding country attended the convention called for Wednesday afternoon in the old Music Hall.

The chairman, Dr. Fife, in calling the meeting together, announced that the purpose of their meeting was to consider the Scott Act and the improvements suggested they had done and what they were going to do. He called upon several gentlemen to tell how the Act was working in their respective districts.

DOING GOOD WORK.

Dr. Massie, of Keene, stated that in Keene the temperance people were doing nothing, because, so far as the hotels were concerned, there was not much of anything to do. The doctor related that one hotel-keeper who had been bitterly opposed to the Act, had, since it became law, observed it well. If any violations of the Act were going on, it was done discreetly. He also told how a confirmed inebriate in Keene had been reformed since the Act came in force, and was now in good circumstances. He considered that the Act was well enforced there.

Mr. A. B. Kidd, of Dummer, said that the Act was not carried out very well in Warsaw village. He could safely say that he had not seen a single drunk in the village since the Act came in force. One chronic drunkard, to his knowledge, had been cured.

Mr. Cameron, of Asphodel, could only answer for Westwood and vicinity. Where he lived the Act was being strictly enforced. He could not speak for Norwood.

ONLY TWO I-SEENED.

Mr. Metcalfe, of Westwood, stated that since the Act had come in force he had seen just two drunks in the village. Where they got their liquor he could not say; he thought the Act was enforced very well.

Mr. Graham, of Smith, reported that there were no villages or towns in his township, which had always been a temperance community. The Act seemed to be enforced as far as he could judge.

Mr. Manning, of Selwyn, had heard that liquor was being sold at Bankhorn as much as ever. The Inspector had been notified, but had taken no action. He had also been notified of two Lakefield cases, which had not been proceeded with.

Mr. Paul, of Bridgenorth, reported a very few slips since the Act came in force. The Act may be violated, but it is done very, very slyly.

Mr. Priest, of Lakefield, stated that the Scott Act was doing good work there. He had no doubt liquor was sold. The doctors were also violating the privileges given them; they were making out prescriptions where there was no need of it whatever. Mr. Priest spoke of a family who had been greatly benefitted by the Act.

Mr. Cameron announced that back in Apsley the Act was being strictly enforced. A reliable friend was his informant.

Mr. Jennings corroborated Dr. Massie's statements regarding the operation of the Scott Act in Keene.

A DIFFERENT STORY.

Dr. Massie undertook to answer for Norwood. He had been at the village several times. The Conservative candidate for the East Riding said, in a speech at Norwood Tuesday night, that the Act was not enforced in the village, and gave it as his candid opinion that, if anything, there was more general drunkenness than formerly. The speaker saw him Wednesday morning, and had told him squarely that he (Mr. Stephenson), as Reeve of Norwood, was largely responsible for this state of affairs. The speaker learned from the temperance people of the village that the men placed at the head of temperance work in Norwood had proved a failure. He thought it was a disgrace to the temperance party these such a state of affairs existed.

Mr. Stratton Sr. gave the meeting an account of a new kind of drink which would be of some benefit if they would only keep out one ingredient. He referred to Brandilla and Brandille, which were attempted to be brought into the country through the Custom House. The first was composed of cod liver oil and pure brandy—the other was the "pure quill."

THE ACT IN PETERBOROUGH.

Mr. J. W. Flavelle then interested the audience with an account of the operation of the Scott Act in Peterborough. He went back to the beginning of the Act in Peterborough, particularly as there had been a great deal of misapprehension throughout the country in regard to the work in town. A few men had put their heads and hands together and agreed that they would do all in their power to secure a proper enforcement of the Act. At a public meeting four or five thousand dollars were subscribed for that purpose, and to this end the Association employed an inspector at their own expense. He had nothing but the kindest words in regard to Mr. Rossiter and the unremitting attention he paid to his work. The Scott Act would have been almost a total failure were it not for him. In addition to his services, they employed private detectives, who were doing the work the inspectors should do. The Magistrate held the view that as the Scott Act did not make any provision for placing the fines, one-half of these fines should go to the prosecutor and the other half to the public treasury. The Association had at first been the prosecutor in the cases in order to gain these fines. The speaker said he could not conscientiously [illegible]

THE DOMINION GOVERNMENT

[illegible] any other purpose than to deliberately make the enforcement of the Scott Act a hard matter, as they passed an act of legislation to take all fines arising from the Scott Act and make them a part of the Dominion treasury. For six months this unfortunate piece of legislation was enforced, and then the lines were backed up and Peterborough like many other towns, suffered severely. A few weeks ago the government passed an order transferring these fines to the town. A deputation of temperance men recently visited Mr. Thos. White at Ottawa, and left with the understanding and expectation that the money would again go to the private prosecutors. For some reason that order-in-council was never passed, and the result of it was the Association did not get a cent of the fines. They had spent in the neighborhood of $1,000 for the enforcement of the Act, which resulted in between 70 and 80 convictions, resulting fines to the extent of over $4,000, about $1,000 of which had never been paid, the convicted parties leaving the country in order to avoid paying their fines, "and," he said, "I hold the mayor utterly inexcusable, that he deliberately winks at violations of the law." The speaker referred to the opposition the Association met from the mayor, the police force and the Town Council—barring four faithful friends. Then the Inspectors, Messrs. Cochrane and Darling, particularly the former, came in for a share of castigation. They were very derelict in their duty. The speaker cited several cases where information had been put in the hands of the inspectors, who failed to proceed with the case at all. The temperance people had been

ARMED BY BOTH POLITICAL PARTIES, and by the mayor of this town. For these reasons he felt very sure that after an honest effort they should have their pants thoroughly ornamented by those who have been helping votes [illegible] the county [illegible] to the public treasury. The Association had [illegible] to the public treasury. The Association had [illegible] to the public treasury. The Association had

HIGH COMMISSIONER.

IS SURPRISED AT CLEVELAND'S REMARKS REGARDING FISHERIES.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—In an interview in London yesterday with the Tribune's correspondent, Sir Charles Tupper, High Commissioner for Canada, said with regard to that portion of the President's message bearing upon the fisheries: "I have read with great surprise that part of the message which endeavors to place the responsibility for the irritation arising from the protection given Canadian fisheries upon Canadian officials. The Government of Canada had given the fishermen of the United States the free use of the fisheries for a year, upon condition that the matter should be submitted to the Senate for friendly settlement by an international commission. The Gloucester fishermen declared incapability to the negotiating of any treaty under which they would be entitled to fish in Canadian waters, on the ground that they did not require to go into Canadian waters to obtain fish."

"The Senate rejected the proposal for an international commission and we then, in the most temperate manner possible, enforced the treaty of 1818, upon which our Government was thrown back by the action of the United States, with the result that the season has been most disastrous for American fishermen, who now ask the Government of the United States to double the high import duties already imposed on Canadian fish. They have discovered that the abrogation of the treaty has only injured themselves. The President had good grounds for challenging the action of the Senate in rejecting his proposals, but none for his endeavor to throw upon the Canadian officials the responsibility for the inability of American fishermen to find fish outside the three-mile limit. The Canadian Government sought protected Canadian waters from illegal invasion by United States fishermen. What is really needed is the freedom by fishermen of the waters of both countries, on reciprocal terms. Some arrangement, in short, similar to that made under the reciprocity treaty of 1854."

Bayard's Letter on the Fisheries.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Chas. Levi Woodbury, who was one of the counsel for the owners of the vessel in the first case against the Canadian Government, and who, a few months ago, could see no good at all in Secretary Bayard, said to-day that he was very much pleased with Secretary Bayard's letter. "Secretary Bayard has been energetic" said he. "and there is very little comfort for Canada in that document."

ATTACKED BY AN EAGLE.

Two Men Have a Battle With an Enormous Bird of Freedom.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 9.—Prof. W. F. Carr and Samuel Curtis, who were surveying on Nicollet-avenue, near the Washburn Home, were attacked yesterday afternoon by a large eagle. The bird dropped down like a bullet, and, knocking Curtis' cap from his head, assailed him with great fury. The man caught up a crowbar, and for a few minutes defended himself in an unequal combat, calling lustily for his companion. Prof. Carr coming up, the savage bird turned upon him, caught him by the leg, threw him down, tore his trousers and, striking his talons in the fleshy part of his leg, inflicted a serious wound.

The bird then mounted to the collar of the unfortunate man and seemed determined to tear him away bodily, but just at this crisis other men came up, and by their united efforts the bird of liberty was finally conquered and summarily put to death. It measured seven feet from tip to tip, and his talons were over four inches long.

The capture of the eagle goes far to explain the fact that lately the farmers near the Washburn Home have missed sundry pigs and sheep.

BLOWN TO FRAGMENTS.

The Disastrous Effects of the Explosion of a Boiler.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 9.—A special to the Record from Jersey Shore, Pa., says: A Beech Creek railroad engine, which had just left the shops and come to a standstill near the station house, exploded this afternoon from an unknown cause, killing Knight and Wearner, engineers; Ramsey, fireman, and Field, machinist; Stoddick, a machinist, was seriously injured. All were young men recently married with the exception of Knight, who leaves a wife and five children. The body of Engineer Knight was gathered up in small fragments and the body of the fireman was also badly mutilated. The body of Field had been blown clear through the roof. It is thought five others perished in the burning mill and were probably consumed. The engine was entirely demolished.

CAMPBELL SCANDAL.

COUNSEL FOR THE INNOCENTS OPEN THEIR CASE.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Lord Colin Campbell's side of the divorce case was concluded this morning.

The Duke of Marlborough's counsel opened for the defence. He said the Duke was fearless of threats, and would appear as a witness and swear that the charges were groundless. The alleged case against the Duke consisted of ordinary incidents. The small talk of society had been turned into allegations of impropriety. The only exceptions were the incidents at Purfleet and Leigh Court, and he would treat of these especially. Lady Colin's life was devoted to charitable works and was inconsistent with the charges brought against her. Even if the Purfleet and Leigh Court allegations were true, could the jury say these had been adultery? The correspondence with Lord Blandford related chiefly to the borrowing of books. Lady Colin was engaged in literary pursuits. She wrote books and worked at journalism and she frequently found it necessary to borrow books of reference. The Leigh Court charges rested entirely upon the evidence of Rose Hare, whom nobody could trust. The Duke's counsel declared that Lady Campbell and the Duke did not occupy adjoining rooms at Leigh Court. Lord Colin knew the facts of the Purfleet incident long before the last trial, yet he then stated that he had no suspicion against his wife. If Lady Campbell had been guilty of adultery she could not have obtained a judicial separation. If Lord Colin was honorable how could he now without further evidence bring this trumped up charge? The counsel admitted that Lord Blandford was at Purfleet, but declared that he was there alone. Lady Campbell would account for every hour of her time between Saturday, Aug. 13, and Monday, Aug. 14. He trusted the jury was not prejudiced against the Duke of Marlborough on account of his previous appearance in the divorce court. The Duke had not opposed Lord Aylesford. On the contrary, he had made what amend he could by offering to marry Lady Aylesford and settling $10,000 on her child.

Mr. Gully on behalf of Captain Shaw said his client would deny, upon oath, that he had ever had improper relations with Lady Campbell. The story of O'Neil was an absolute fabrication. Capt. Shaw was an old friend of the lady's family and a man of unsullied life. The hearing was then adjourned.

RUSSIA'S POSSIBLE ALLIES.

An Absolute Necessity That Looks to Two Republics for Aid.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 9.—The Novoe Vremya declares that: "Only France and the United States can be relied on for Russia's future political combination. It is often said that no alliance can be made with a Republic because diplomatic secrets are impossible in a Republic, but diplomatic secrets are laughed at now as mere childish bugaboos, and Prince Bismarck is the first to laugh at them. The Republics of Rome, Venice and Holland brilliantly proved their diplomatic capacities, and the United States cannot now complain of their diplomacy. For a hundred years they have pursued one and the same line of policy, and this Republic, which keeps up no navy and an army of only about two divisions, enjoys the fullest security, and no one dares to attack her or touch American citizens who are engaged in business in every part of the world."

THE EFFECTS OF THE STORM.

Wrecks and Other Disasters—The Storm Not Yet Abated.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The steamer Avondale is stranded on the rocks near Dagmar and the bark Pegasus has been wrecked at Holyhead. The crews of both vessels were saved. The storm yesterday was the worst in the Bristol Channel. Sea-walls were demolished and many goods-cars were overturned. The storm has not yet abated on the northwest coast. The sea is running mountains high at Holyhead. Ballinamore Castle fell in yesterday, and Miss Cody, one of the inmates, was killed.

The gale raged at Kilrush for eighteen hours. All the public buildings there were damaged. The loss to peasants is estimated at $75,000.

The steamers City of Berlin, Catalonia and Nova Scotian, which were due at Queenstown yesterday, arrived twenty-four hours late. Liverpool pilots say the weather has been the severest they have ever experienced.

THE GERMAN ARMY BILL.

The Government Desires the Immediate Passage of the Bill.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Gen. Bronsart von Schellendorf, Minister of War, met the Commission on the Military Bill to-day. It is reported that he said the Government desired the immediate passage of the bill for the purpose of mobilizing the army. The military year begins on April 1, and it was impossible for the War Department to make the necessary changes in proper time unless the bill was passed by Jan. 1. He put aside entirely all purely political questions, being in a position to defend the bill on military grounds alone. He described in detail the relative defensive power of Germany, Russia, France and Austria. In conclusion he urged the commission to assent to the bill at the earliest possible moment.

Prince Luitpold to-day received a number of Bavarian members of the Reichstag. He advised them to support the military septennate bill. Baron Frankenstein replied that they would conscientiously examine the bill, if only for financial reasons. Prince Luitpold answered that the subject of finance ought not to dominate great political questions.

Female Students in Trouble.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 9.—One hundred female students who were concerned in the recent attempt to hold a memorial service at the tomb of the Liberal leader, Dobrolimboff, have been deprived of their passports to prevent their running away. Eighteen have already been expelled from St. Petersburg without knowledge of their ultimate fate. Others, who belong to high families, will probably not be molested.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—At a meeting of persons sympathizing with the Scotch crofters, held at Exeter Hall last evening, it was resolved to send a memorial to the Queen, setting forth the grievances of the crofters. Resolutions were adopted sympathizing with the Irish plan of campaign. The meeting dispersed cheering for Parnell and Dillon.

Wholesale Arrests of Socialists.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—Wholesale arrests of Socialists have been made in Rendsberg, Pinneberg, Ottensen and Altona. The prisoners are chiefly young workmen who are charged with being affiliated with socialistic clubs. There are nearly 100 in custody. Several of those arrested were liberated after an examination.

Cholera Increasing at Calcutta.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Cholera is increasing at Calcutta, and it is feared it will become epidemic.

Foundering of a Steamer.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—A steamer, supposed to be the Captain McClintock of Dublin, was seen to founder to-day off Point Lynas.

The Assets Run Small.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Shepard & Co., dealers in iron and paper stock, called a meeting of creditors to-day. Their liabilities are $94,000, assets $8 cash and $75 in office furniture.

H. L. Down, employed in the Michigan Central Railway machine shops at St. Thomas, had a narrow escape from death. He was working at a boring machine when his coat became entangled in the boring, and it required all his strength to get free. Several severe wounds were inflicted on his arm.

The Wilmington Steamship Company, known as the electric line of steamers, which has been carrying freight between Wilmington, Chester and New York for twenty years, has been withdrawn and their vessels are for sale. Reduced railroad freights have made the line unprofitable as that for these years the boats have been run at a loss.

It is believed grave difficulties will soon arise between the United States and Mexico, growing out of the position taken by President Cleveland against the right of Mexico to try Americans committing crimes against Mexican law while on American soil.

A. O. Norton of New Haven, Conn., a leading merchant, was fined $40 and costs yesterday for giving his customers a chance to guess at the number of seeds in a squash. The nearest guessers were to receive prizes. He was arrested on the charge of disposing of goods by chance. An appeal will be taken.

George Wright, Boston's one best player, approves of the new pitching rules on the ground that they will tend to free batting, and therefore make games more interesting. "I tell you, says he, the time has come when all the players must take a hand in the game. Instead of the pitcher putting out the last three men, let some of the fielders help to do the work. When the public has seen a few games you will see larger crowds and more interest taken in the game."

THE FACTORY ACT LEGISLATION.

To the Mowat Administration belongs the credit of passing legislation (47 Vic. Cap. 39) for the protection of employes in factories. This act, which came into force on December 1st, places the factory laborers of Ontario in as good a position in respect of protection as is enjoyed by the laborers of any country in the world. It provides, amongst other things:—That the employment in a factory of a child, a young girl, or a woman, in such a way that the health is likely to be permanently injured, shall be an offence punishable by imprisonment or fine; that no boy under twelve, and no girl under fourteen, shall be employed in any factory, and that children under fourteen and women shall not be employed more than ten hours a day, or sixty hours a week; that women and children shall not be allowed to clean machinery while it is in motion; that working extra hours in a time of emergency shall be done only with the consent of the Inspector under the Act; that factories shall be kept in proper sanitary condition; that machinery, and other sources of danger to employees shall be properly guarded; that each factory shall be supplied with the means of extinguishing fires, and also with fire-escapes if the building is a high one; and that the inspector shall be notified promptly when loss of life results to employes through fire or accident. The Act clothes the inspector with the powers necessary to enable him to discharge his duties efficiently, and provides a simple means of enforcing its provisions.

The Act, it will be remarked, was passed in 1884, but it was not declared in force till the first of the present month, the object of the delay being a desire to secure either concurrent Dominion legislation or a decision of the Supreme Court that would preclude the possibility of a dispute as to the validity of the Act. The opponents of the Mowat Administration say there were no good grounds of delay. Let us inquire. The Dominion Government have been trifling with the subject for years, with no other reason apparently than a desire to keep the Ontario Government from taking action, and thus deprive the working classes of protection from the dangers and injustice which employers, who might be unscrupulous, would inflict upon them. In 1883 a measure was promised in the Speech from the Throne, which stated that the House of Commons would be "specially invited" to consider a measure regulating factory labor and the protection of the working man and his family. A Government bill was introduced and—withdrawn. So tender was the solicitude of the Dominion Government for the working man and his family that in 1884 the Speech from the Throne again alluded to the matter, and promised that the bill of the previous session should be re-introduced. It was introduced and—withdrawn. The factory-owners seem to have brought pressure to bear during the interval, for in 1885 no Government bill was brought in, but Dr. Bergin, a Government supporter, brought in a Factory bill. Sir Hector Langevin moved the adjournment of the debate on it, which was never resumed, and the bill was withdrawn. In 1886 the Speech from the Throne did not allude to the matter, Dr. Bergin's bill was re-introduced and—withdrawn without debate, and Hon. Mr. Thompson, Minister of Finance, said the Government was "thinking" of it. This is the record of the Dominion Government in this matter. While it has been "thinking" about it, Mr. Mowat has acted and has brought in force his act for the benefit of the working men and their families. Sir John has "worked" the working men for their votes, and Mr. Mowat protected them and their families. Behold the difference between profession and practice.

Some Conservative journals and politicians seem to have neither sense of shame nor conscience. For instance, they have the assurance to accuse Hon. D. Mills of being a "boodler" because he received pay from the Ontario Government for legal services. But they omit to state that Sir John is responsible for the necessity of employing him. He was retained as counsel in the legal contest rendered necessary by Sir John Macdonald attempting to seize 100,000 square miles of Ontario's territory. If Sir John had not attempted to rob this province, it would not have been necessary to incur an expense of about $150,000, which the contest has cost the country. The cost of the province in the Boundary matter is already $75,000, and it is probable the cost to the Dominion Government is as much more. It would become anti-provincial politicians to have very little to say about this matter.

The Conservatives of West Victoria have nominated Mr. John Crews as an opponent to Mr. D. J. McIntyre, for the local Legislature. Will he be a crusade candidate?

Ladies' and Children's Hosiery and Gloves all sizes and various qualities. J. ERSKINE.

A TRIFLING CONTRAST.

The following table will show the Silver man, th point of economical expenditure of the public moneys, between Conservative and Reform rule. In the past three years under Conservative rule the public expenditure has been as follows:—

1883	$ 23,107,703
1884	25,227,750
1885	23,716,875
	$[illegible]
Average per year	$ 24,107,776

1883	$ 24,433,272
1877	[illegible]
1878	23 [illegible]
	$ 71,549,551
Average per year	$ 23,849,917
Average of three years Conservative period	$ 24,107,776
Average three years Liberal period	23,849,917
Increase per year	$ 11,258,859

If Minister of Finance McLelan, could control the country's cash as easily as he can dispose of an opposing candidate, he would not have a six million dollars deficit to boast of. A Col. Blair came out as Commons candidate for Colchester N. S., and he is described by the Montreal Star as the "only man who could defeat Mr. McLelan." Mr. McLelan's, however, takes no risks. He has put Col. Blair "out of the way"—not in vulgar homicidal way—but by giving him a fat office with a fat salary to be paid by the people's money. One rival to the Finance Minister's re-election having thus profitably (to himself) been shelved, there will, consequently, be no lack of other rivals willing to be similarly sacrificed. The re-election of the Finance Minister at the present rate, promises to be a rather costly affair for the people. Mr. McLelan had better impose a prohibitory tariff on candidates in Colchester.

Mr. THOMAS DIXON CRAIG has been selected by the Conservatives to contest East Durham for the Local Legislature.

Literary Notices.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE; published monthly, with illustrations. SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE will be in the widest sense a magazine of general literature, and each number will be fully illustrated.

Some of the most notable papers to appear during the first year are a series of unpublished letters of Thackeray of very great autobiographical value; ex-Minister E. B. Washburne's reminiscences of the seige and commune of Paris; glimpses at the diaries of Gouverneur Morris, Minister to France at the close of the last century (giving descriptions of social life and characters at the time); a collection of contemporary letters describing early New York and New England society.

There is much excellent fiction, including a serial by Harold Frederic; stories extending through several numbers by H. C. Bunner, J. S. of Dale, and others; and short stories by R. L. Stevenson, Joel Chandler Harris, T. A. Janvier, Miss Jewett, Octave Thanet, M. H. Boyesen, Miss Crosby, and a host of others.

Notable special papers to be published very early are General P. A. Walker's on Socialism, Dr. Wilson Hayes Ward's on Babylonian Cylinders, Mr. John C. Ropes's on the Portraits of Cæsar, Captain Greene's on Coast Defence, etc., etc.

Scribner's Magazine will be published at $3 a year, or 25 cents a copy. Subscriptions may be sent to any newsdealer or bookseller, or to Charles Scribner's Sons, publishers, 743 and 745 Broadway, N. Y.

Mr. Wm. Bryce, publisher, Toronto, has issued another number of his "Popular Series" of interesting fiction—"Little Lord Fauntleroy," by Francis Hodgson Burnett, a little volume well worthy the attention of lovers of light literature.

What True Merit Will Do.

The unprecedented sale of Boschee's German Syrup within a few years has astonished the world. It is without doubt the safest and best remedy ever discovered for the speedy and effectual cure of Coughs, Colds and the severest Lung troubles. It acts on an entirely different principle from the usual prescriptions given by physicians, as it does not dry up a cough and leave the disease still in the system, but on the contrary removes the cause of the trouble, heals the parts affected, and leaves them in a purely healthy condition. A bottle kept in the house for use when the diseases make their appearance, will save doctor's bills and a long spell of serious illness. A trial will convince you of these facts. It is positively sold by all druggists and general dealers in the land. Price 75 cents, large bottles. eodw41tf

One Price and Square Dealing to All!

This week the public will receive the benefit of an extraordinary LOW PURCHASE of SEASONABLE OVERCOATS and SUITS, and any intending purchaser will miss it, if they do not call and examine them. But having inaugurated this in PETERBOROUGH, I must bow to the line, let the chips fall where they may. On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. Always keep in mind, that the man who does as he ADVERTISES, and Refunds the Money if Goods are not Satisfactory, is GOUGH, THE WONDERFUL CHEAP MAN.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY.

Some will have it that the Scott Act is a failure; others protest that it is not. This point we do not intend to argue, but hold that each is a failure to protect the body against the coming blizzards without Furs. So variable are the opinions of people, that some, attracted by cheap Excursions, try Toronto for good bargains, and in general are sold. But others of good judgment, and understanding the real value of

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

"This time to-morrow whom he first met at the club," Mrs. Presty remarked. "Well, Catherine, I suppose there is some more of it. What's the matter? Bad news?"

"Something that I wish Randal had not written. Read it yourself—and don't talk of it afterward."

Mrs. Presty read:

"I know nothing whatever of my unfortunate brother. I have only this to add—that I regret very much to find you have been so shamefully wronged by Kitty's conviction that he is already beginning to suffer the penalty of his crime plead my excuse. Herbert's nature is, in some respects, better known to me than it is to you. I am persuaded that your hold on his respect and his devotion is shaken—not lost. He has been misled by one of those designing females, disastrous and even dangerous in their rebellion, to which men are liable when they are led by no better influence than the influence of their senses. It is not, and never will be, in the nature of women to understand this. I fear I may offend you in what I am now writing, but I must speak what I believe to be the truth at any sacrifice. Bitter repentance—if he is not already feeling it—is in store for Herbert when he finds himself tied to a person who cannot bear comparison with you. I say this, pitying the poor girl most sincerely, when I think of her youth and her wretched past life. How it will end I cannot presume to say. I can only acknowledge that I do not look to the future with the absolute despair which you naturally felt when I last saw you."

Mrs. Presty laid the letter down, privately resolving to write to Randal and tell him to keep his convictions for the future to himself. A glance at her daughter's face warned her, if she said anything, to choose a new subject.

The second letter still remained unnoticed. "Shall we see what the lawyer says?" she suggested—and opened the envelope. The lawyer had nothing to say. He simply inclosed a letter which had arrived at his office.

Mrs. Presty's first possible cause for which emotion expresses itself outwardly by a change of color, she turned pale, nevertheless, when she looked at the second letter. The address was in Herbert Linley's handwriting.

XXIV.

When she was not eating her meals or asleep in her bed absolute silence on Mrs. Presty's part was a circumstance without precedent in the experience of her daughter. Mrs. Presty was absolutely silent now. Mrs. Linley looked up.

She at once perceived the change in her mother's face and asked what it meant. "Mamma, you look as if something had frightened you. Is it anything in that letter?" She bent over the table and looked a little closer at the letter. Mrs. Presty had turned it so that the address was underneath, and the closed envelope was visible still intact. "Why don't you open it?" Mrs. Linley asked.

Mrs. Presty made a strange reply. "I am thinking of throwing it into the fire."

"My letter?"

"Yes, your letter."

"Let me look at it first."

"You had better not look at it, Catherine."

Naturally enough, Mrs. Linley remonstrated. "Surely I ought to read a letter forwarded by my lawyer." Why are you hiding the address from me? Is it from some person whose handwriting we both know? She looked hard at her silent mother; reflected, and guessed the truth. "Give it to me directly," she said; "my husband has written to me."

Mrs. Presty's heavy eyebrows gathered into a frown. "Is it possible," she asked, sternly, "that you can still find enough of that man to care about what he writes to you?" Mrs. Linley held out her hand for the letter. Her wise mother feared it desirable to try persuasion next. "If you really won't give way, my dear, humor me for once. Will you let me read it to you?"

"Yes, if you promise to read every word of it."

Mrs. Presty promised (with a mental reservation), and opened the letter.

As the two first words she stopped and began to clean her spectacles. And her own eyes deceived her, or had Herbert Linley actually addressed her daughter, after having been guilty of the grossest wrong that a husband can inflict on his wife, as "Dear Catherine"? Mr. Linley rubbed the words when she put her spectacles on again. Was he in his right senses, or had he written in a state of intoxication?

Mrs. Linley waited, with a preoccupied mind; she showed no signs of impatience or surprise. As it presently appeared, she was not thinking of the letter addressed to her by Herbert, but of the letter written by Randal. "I want to look at it again." With that brief explanation she turned at once to the closing lines which had offended her when she first read them.

Mrs. Presty hazarded a guess at what was going on in her daughter's mind. "Now your husband has written to you," she said, "are you beginning to think that Randal's opinion may be worth considering again?" With her eyes still on Randal's letter, Mrs. Linley merely answered: "Why don't you begin?" Mrs. Presty began as follows, leaving out the familiarity of her son-in-law's address to his wife:

"I have had much to fall forgiveness for venturing to write to you, in consideration of the subject of my letter. I have something to say concerning our child. Although I have [illegible] I still feel that every [illegible] Kitty [illegible] are more strong together than [illegible] to that name. Bad as I am, my heart has that tender place left in it still. I cannot endure separation from my child."

Mrs. Linley rose to her feet. The first vague anticipations of future atonement and reconciliation suggested by her brother-in-law, no longer existed in her mind. She foresaw but too plainly what was to follow. "Read faster," she said, "or let me read it for myself."

Mrs. Presty went on: "There is no wish on my part to gain you by any needless alienation to my claims as a father. My one desire is to enter into an arrangement which shall be as just toward you as it is toward me. I propose that Kitty shall live with her father one-half of the year, and shall return to her mother's care for the other half. If there is any valid objection to this I confess I fail to see it."

Mrs. Linley contemplated afford no longer. "Does he see no difference," she broke out, "between his reputation and mine? [illegible] section—in God's name what expectation is [illegible] strike? And he threatens to separate us for six months in every year! And he takes credit to himself for an act of exalted justice on his part! Is there no such feeling as shame in the hearts of men?"

Under ordinary circumstances her mother would have tried to calm her. But Mrs. Presty had turned to the next page of the letter at that moment when her daughter spoke.

What she found written on that other side prohibited a startling effect on her. She crumpled the letter up in her hand and threw it into the fireplace. It fell under the grate instead of into the grate. With unusual activity for a woman of her age, she ran across the room to burn it. Younger and quicker, Mrs. Linley got to the fireplace first and seized the letter. "There is something more!" she exclaimed. "And you are afraid of my knowing what it is."

"Don't read it!" Mrs. Presty called out.

Those were her own sentiments left to read: "If your maternal anxiety suggests any [illegible] I may add that I have [illegible] Call Dutch cold water little [illegible] under my roof. You will remember how fond Miss Westerfield was of Kitty, and you will believe me when I tell you that she is as truly devoted to the child as ever."

"I tried to prevent you from reading it," said Mrs. Presty.

Mrs. Linley looked at her mother with a strange, unnatural smile.

"I wouldn't have missed this for anything!" she said. "The cruelest of all separations is proposed to me—and I am expected to submit to it because my husband's mistress is fond of my child!" She threw the letter (dust-begrimed) with a frantic gesture of contempt and burst into a fit of hysterical laughter.

The old mother's instinct—not the old mother's reason—told her what to do. She drew her daughter to the open window and called to Kitty to come in. The child (still amusing herself by fishing in the lake) laid down her rod. Mrs. Linley saw her running lightly along the little pier, on her way to the house. That influence effected what no other influence could have achieved. The outraged wife controlled herself for the sake of her child. Mrs. Presty led her out to meet Kitty in the garden, waited until she saw them together, and returned to the breakfast-room.

Herbert Linley's letter lay on the floor; his diary [illegible] picked it up. It could do no [illegible] now, and there might be reasons for keeping the husband's proposal. "Unless I am very much mistaken," Mrs. Presty concluded, "we shall hear more from the lawyer before long." She locked up the letter, and wondered what her daughter would do next.

In half an hour Mrs. Linley returned—pale, silent, self-contained.

She seated herself at her desk, wrote literally one line, signed it without an instant's hesitation, and folded the paper. Before it was secured in the envelope, Mrs. Presty interfered with a characteristic request. "You are writing to Mr. Linley, of course," she said. "May I see it?"

Mrs. Linley handed the letter to her. The one line of writing contained these words: "I refuse positively to part with my child. Catherine Linley."

"Have you considered what is likely to happen when he gets this?" Mrs. Presty inquired.

"No, mamma."

"Will you consult Randal?"

"I would rather not consult him."

"Will you let me consult him for you?"

"Thank you—no."

"Why not?"

"After what Randal has written to me I don't attach any value to his opinion." With that reply she sent her letter to the post and went back again to Kitty.

After this, Mrs. Presty resolved to wait the arrival of Herbert Linley's answer, and to let events take their course. The view from the window (as she passed it, walking up and down the room) offered her little help in forecasting the future. Kitty had returned to her fishing, and Kitty's mother was walking slowly up and down the pier, deep in thought. Was the thinking of what might happen, and summoning her resolution which so seldom showed itself on ordinary occasions?

ST. CATHARINES, Sept. 20th, 1886.

GENTLEMEN,—Being over 70 years of age, and over 30 years ruptured, looked upon my case as hopeless, especially as I tried various appliances without success, among others, recently, two springless trusses made in New York State, costing me $20. Nothing would retain my Hernia. I have worn your truss over four months, night and day, with great satisfaction and comfort; even to bathe in it the rupture has never come down, it holds me perfectly secure under all circumstances. You may publish it for the benefit of other sufferers. Yours truly, CAPT. B. KING.

This new Spiral Spring Pad Truss has taken ten years to make it perfect; is guaranteed to hold the very worst case during the hardest work or severest strain. It will cure every child here; and 30 out of every 100 of adults. Be warned—don't waste your money on useless appliances, but send stamp for our treatise; it contains full information, your neighbors' testimony, price list and questions for you to answer. LOCAL NEWS.

Close Calls.

Yesterday afternoon a lad named James Menzies, employed in the EXAMINER office, was standing behind the large power press on which the daily issue was being printed, when his coat was caught in a large cog wheel, and the boy was drawn under the press with a jerk, cutting his face and covering it with ink. The press and engine were stopped suddenly by the folds of the coat among the cogs, most fortunately for the lad. When released from the press his coat was a coat no longer—one side was a bunch of rags and ribbons. Had the press been going at its usual rate of speed, nothing could have saved the lad from being crushed.

About five o'clock yesterday afternoon Herbert Holland, a boy employed in the Lock Works, had a narrow escape from sudden death. He was being let down by the "tackle" from the third floor. This tackle is used like an elevator for hoisting or lowering heavy weights to and from the upper stories. It is also used by the employees themselves in the same way. Holland was being let down by Charlie Taber from the third floor, and had scarcely started when the whole tackle gave way, and both it and the boy were dashed to the floor beneath, a distance of about 40 feet. Taber, with great presence of mind, pulled the tackle to one side, thus saving young Holland's life, for had the 30 lbs. of cast iron struck the lad on the head, as it certainly would have done but for Taber's prompt action, Holland would probably have been killed. As it was, the lad was rendered insensible for a time, but under Dr. Kincaid's care has about recovered. Happily no bones were broken.

Curling.

Yesterday afternoon a curling match was played at the rink here between Peterborough and Lindsay clubs, which resulted in a victory for the visitors. The majority, to parody Mercutio's remarks respecting his wound, though not so big as the Dominion deficit, 'tis enough:—

It is probable, therefore, that the next House will consist of fifteen Liberals and twenty Conservatives—a very narrow majority for an unpopular Premier to conduct a Government upon. In the House lately dissolved Mr. Norquay had a majority of at least seventeen.

An important event as indicating the drift of public opinion is the defeat of the Boodle candidate, Scarth, in South Winnipeg, by Mr. Luxton. A few days ago Sir John Macdonald wrote a letter beseeching all his friends to vote for Scarth.

Dramatic Recitals.

Mrs. T. Charles Watson's Elocutionary Entertainment, Under the Auspices of the P. A. A. A.

At the Opera House last night the celebrated elocutionist, Mrs. T. Charles Watson, charmed a small audience with a fine exhibition of her talent in that line. This was not Mrs. Watson's first visit to Peterborough, and those who went to the Opera House last night were fully prepared for an excellent elocutionary treat, in which expectation they were not in the least disappointed. Every number on the programme was greatly admired and applauded. Mrs. Watson possesses a pretty, expressive countenance, and a voice capable of assuming intensest scorn and indignation, or melting into winsome gayety, at once convulsing the audience with laughter, or filling their hearts with sadness. In "Caddie Doon," a little Scotch literary gem, the tender instincts of a loving mother were faithfully represented. "Shakespeare's Wooing of Anne Hathaway," "David Copperfield's Courtship of Pretty Dora," "Uncle Joe," and "Jenny Kegleheart," were all tales of love, some sorrowful, others happy, in which Mrs. Watson's delineations of human passion were most realistic. The "Lay of the Hunt Cup," descriptive of a neck-and-neck race between two celebrated horses as told by the rider of the winning animal, was thrilling indeed. In it all the exciting incidents usually connected with such events were brought out with great force and effect. "Money Musk," given by special request, descriptive of a Western husking bee, was followed by Mark Twain's "Experiences of Niagara." Both pieces were well received. But perhaps the most laughable of all was the experience of a Dutchman in setting a hen, as detailed in "How Sockery sat a Hen." It was so good that in order to satisfy the audience Mrs. Watson recited "Sockery's Baby," which was without equal in the whole world—from Sockery's point of view. The reciter kept the marked attention of the audience throughout, and was loudly applauded. Mrs. Watson is without doubt the finest elocutionist in Canada.

What the Cat Said.

The office cat strolled into the EXAMINER sanctum this morning and related the following, which, he said, had been whispered in his ear by a little bird:

The other night a dashing young clerk in a down-town gents' furnishing store hied himself away to Little Lake to enjoy the giddy pleasure of a skate. He valiantly buckled on his armor, grasped his skates and left the store with flying footsteps, forgetting in his eager anxiety to lock the door behind him. The "boss" came along shortly afterwards and found the door unlocked, with the key in it. Next morning the d. y. c. came in for a severe "blowin' up" from the justly indignant employer. Willie won't forget to lock the door next time.

The cat also said that a young shoemaker cut the "figure 8" so many times last night on the lake that his head was turned, for, after concluding his antics and deciding that it was time to start for home, he stepped a few minutes, and, looking carefully around, took his bearings and struck out for Peterborough. After skating far enough to reach Lakefield, to the shoemaker's mind, he at last struck soil. But where was Peterborough? Not a light or sound was there. Why did Peter—borough itself out of sight in this miraculous fashion? Inexplicable mystery! Nothing daunted, however, the young man loosened his skates and started inland, soon coming to a railway track. This he followed for a mile or so till he reached a diamond, caused by the crossing of two tracks, and here he inquired for lost Peterborough. He was given explicit directions, and, after a weary tramp, he reached his home before midnight. On thinking the matter over, the young shoemaker has come to the conclusion that he must have landed in Otonabee township, about three miles from town. He was a weary, but a wiser boy, after his little mistake.

The Town's Health.

Annual Report of the Medical Health Officer—Freedom from Epidemic Diseases—A Necessity for Better Drainage.

At a meeting of the Board of Health Wednesday night there were present: Mr. T. Menzies, chairman, Mayor Stevenson, and Messrs. Edg. Pearce, R. W. Errett and Dr. Clarke.

The annual report of the Medical Health Officer, Dr. Clarke, was read and adopted, after which the Board adjourned. Following is the report:—

To the Chairman and members of the Peterborough Board of Health:

GENTLEMEN,—In presenting the third annual report of the Medical Health Officer I would congratulate you on the freedom of the town during the past year from epidemic disease, on the low death rate we have experienced, and on the increasing compliance on the part of the public with the provisions of the Health Act. While we have not been free from diseases which are due to removable causes I believe their extent and severity have been as moderate as in any town in the Province, and have been considerably limited by the sanitary precautions that have been used. I will refer as briefly as possible to the various points that demand our attention.

SLAUGHTER HOUSES.

These have been inspected at frequent intervals and found generally satisfactory. Complaints have been made several times about one or two, and on investigation have been found not altogether without cause. I am glad to say, however, that the owners have promised to remove them before next spring.

HOG PENS.

There has been a large decrease in the number of these since the Board commenced operations. But every year a few have been found hidden away here and there within the proscribed distance from the dwellings, in some cases giving rise to considerable trouble. If there were better and more economical ways of getting rid of kitchen refuse there would be less temptation to keep hogs.

REMOVAL OF GARBAGE.

This has been more systematically attended to this year, several persons finding employment in the work. The greatest difficulty is where vegetable matter, in state of decay, is allowed to collect. Indeed, in some places, it would require the constant presence of a sanitary inspector to keep things in order. The advantage of a public scavenger paying regular visits is apparent. In such a case refuse would be gathered up and exposed instead of being spread out or concealed.

DISPOSAL OF EXCRETA.

Earth closets are gradually being substituted instead of privy vaults, and will continue to increase in number as their sanitary value is recognized. The majority of vault closets are cleaned out once a year according to law. Some are emptied several times a season, the excreta being used for fertilizing purposes principally. The old prejudice against this is gradually wearing away. It will be necessary next spring to provide a nuisance ground, as the old one has not been available of late.

WELLS.

I have examined many samples of well water this season, and am glad to say that there is a marked decrease in the amount of organic matter present. This is, no doubt, due to the greater cleanliness above ground, filth and rubbish being removed before the surface becomes saturated. Another cause, in some cases, is the yearly cleansing which the law requires. But I am of opinion that many wells are used from year to year without annual purification, or the work is done in a perfunctory manner to evade inspection. Where wells have been found highly impure they have been closed up.

COMPLAINTS.

A large number of complaints have been made during the past year. To many the duties of a health officer appears to be of the most comprehensive kind. The blowing of steam whistles or the too early crowing of fowl are supposed to be proper questions for the investigation of the Board. Many are neighbors' quarrels, and many are just and proper complaints. Your officers have investigated and rectified these in the simplest and quietest manner possible. All that has generally been found necessary is to state the law clearly to the offending party, and there is usually very little further trouble.

SEWERAGE.

Most of the complaints in the centre of the town have arisen from causes which a good system of sewerage would remove. Having referred to this before, I need but say that the extension of the water works system not only creates, by the freer use of water, a necessity for better drainage, but provides facilities for it as well. Some of the drains have required frequent charges of disinfectants to keep them in good order.

CONTAGIOUS DISEASES.

The principal matter to note under this head during the past year is the prevalence of diphtheria. Peterborough has not been alone in this respect, almost the whole province having suffered. A circular relating to the number of cases, their causes, best means of prevention, etc., was filled out at the request of the Provincial Board, and with others formed the basis of a paper read by the Provincial Secretary at the meeting of the American Public Health Association in Toronto last October, which I regret I was not able to attend. The number of cases in town throughout the year, as nearly as can be ascertained, is about 75, 22 houses having been placarded. Among these there were only 8 deaths, all of them being children. I believe bad water and bad drainage to be the principal causes. In a thinly settled town where the lots are large and admit of a good distance between well and privy vault there may be no danger, but as the town fills up the lots become smaller and houses more crowded, and in consequence the well and closet are apt to be in dangerous proximity. Unless earth closets are generally used this will be attended with considerable risk, and to avoid it I should strongly recommend boiling or filtering all water for drinking purposes. An instance may be given of the perils of impure water. Diphtheria broke out in a family. Everything appeared to be in good order and no cause could be at first assigned. On closer examination it was found that the kitchen slop pipe connecting with the waste pipe from the well had rusted through, thereby allowing the contents of the former to trickle down alongside of the pump. As it was impossible to determine the amount of contamination the well had to be closed. All cases cannot be traced so exactly as this. The most rigorous examination in some houses where the disease had occurred, failed to detect any source of danger. But there must have been a sanitary leak somewhere and this shows how careful families with young children should be during the prevalence of diphtheria. Whatever cases have appeared rigid isolation has been resolved upon, the other children kept from school, and when the disease has subsided the house and clothes have been disinfected with sulphur, chloride of lime or carbolic acid under the direction of the medical attendant or the officers of the Board. Cases this year have been pretty faithfully reported. I am glad to say that at present the disease appears to be dying out.

TYPHOID FEVER.

There have been fewer cases of this disease during the past year than for some years previous. Sanitary measures are evidently beginning to have their effect. Two deaths have occurred from typhoid, and one from typho-malarial fever.

SCARLET FEVER.

There have been a few cases but, fortunately, no deaths.

MORTUARY STATISTICS.

In 1885 the Dominion Government included Peterborough among the towns in which mortuary statistics are collected. We thus have the exact death rate of the town, which was 18.46 per thousand last year. Where we consider that if our [illegible] fixed upon by the Registrar-General of England as a standard to be aimed at by sanitarians, now we may congratulate ourselves on succeeding so little. During the same year the ratio in the city of Toronto was 20.61 per thousand.

A RETROSPECT.

On the whole, I think we can look back on the two or three years since Boards of Health were inaugurated with considerable satisfaction. To be sure we have had no large municipal measures put in operation, but there has been a vast deal of individual work, and without such all municipal measures would be useless. It has been said that few persons will pay any attention to health considerations until the fear of death is staring them in the face. I am glad to be able to say that the state of affairs is rapidly passing away in Peterborough. The public enlightening have been sharpened, and as this process goes on a firmer demand will arise for those more important measures of sanitary reform, which will prove an inestimable boon to the town, and assist in no small degree the operations of the Board.

Respectfully submitted,
J. CLARKE, M.D.,
Medical Health Officer.

THE PACIFIC CABLE SCHEME.

A Company Formed With a Capital of Two Million Pounds.

OTTAWA, Dec. 10.—Within the past month immense strides have been made towards the realization of the Pacific cable scheme, and much interest has been aroused in Canada owing to its political significance, the avowed object of the company being to establish communication between England and her Australian colonies entirely independent of existing lines.

The company, which has been formed under the name of "The Pacific Telegraph Company, Limited," with a capital of £2,000,000 in £10 shares, registered its articles of incorporation in London a few days ago. A subsidy of £50,000 per annum is expected from the Home Government, and it is estimated that the various Colonial Governments will contribute. The Haiwaiian Government is also to give an annual subsidy of $30,000.

There are eleven governments concerned, and the sanction of each will have to be obtained before operations are begun. The length of the whole system of wires will be nearly 15,000 miles.

HAMILTON HAPPENINGS.

Death of Mr. David Steele, who was Injured in a Runaway Accident.

HAMILTON, Dec. 10.—Mr. David Steele, who, while driving to Barton last night in company with Mrs. H. A. Mackelcan, was thrown from his vehicle and had his skull fractured, died at 5 o'clock this morning at the residence of Thomas Orchard, into whose house he was taken after the accident. He never recovered consciousness after the fall. The deceased was born in Newfoundland thirty-two years ago and received his primary education in Scotland. He came to this city when quite young with his father's family, and after graduating at the Collegiate Institute studied law with Mr. Thos. Robertson. About four years ago he went into business for himself, and had built up a large practice. He was a prominent member of St. Thomas' Church, where he sang in the choir. He was one of five brothers, one of whom, R. T. Steele, lives on Jackson-street, this city, and another James, in Toronto. The funeral will take place to-morrow.

Caldecott, Burton & Co., wholesale dry goods merchants of Toronto, have subscribed $50 towards the new building of the Young Men's Christian Association.

THOUGHTS OF CHRISTMAS.

Two weeks from to-day and Christmas morning will have dawned; already the preparations are well advanced for its celebration. As in all the past, happiness and mirth, mingled with a deeper and more sacred joy, will prevail; a spirit of charity and forgiveness will be evoked, old feuds will be forgotten and old friendships united in a closer bond. While one half of the world is rejoicing in continued prosperity, it must be remembered that the other half has not the same bright prospect to cheer it. Honest families that have worked hard and struggled long have found the world go hard against them. They may have succeeded in keeping the wolf away, but they cannot look forward to those extra comforts that help to make Christmas the happy season it is. While thousands of children are rejoicing over their Christmas gifts, from out the chorus of merry laughter and gratified expectation will come little voices, tremulous with grief that their owners have been forgotten. Everybody should contribute to relieve the necessities and increase the comforts of the poor—most of all the little ones should not be forgotten. A happy Christmas day will gladden a poor man's heart through half the year. Preachers, tell your congregations of the beauty of brotherly love, and of the necessity for liberality at this time of the year. He who loves his fellow men stands first in the estimation of God. Employers, deal fairly with your workmen. Give them an extra week's wages, a turkey, a dollar, something, anything—to show that you take an interest in them and want them to be happy on Christmas Day. Mothers, don't forget the little stocking hung up at the foot of the bed; remember how you used to look forward to Christmas, and how disappointed you were if the stocking hung limp when you opened your eyes in the morning. Brothers, remember the sisters who are so proud of you with some little present. Each one can do something to make some one else cheerful on Christmas Day, and every effort to make others happy adds to our own contentment. Here are some lines gleaned from an old magazine that are appropriate:

Amidst the freezing sleet and snow
The timid robin comes.
Let no rude hand drive him not away,
But scatter out your crumbs.

And heave your door upon the latch
For whosoever comes:
The stranger they, more welcome give
And scatter out your crumbs.

All leaves is gone, none are the poor.
[illegible] with winter clothes
[illegible] all rude woes.

LADY COLIN'S EVIDENCE.

SHE DENIES THAT SHE EVER ACTED IMPROPERLY WITH ANY MAN,

And Gives an Absolute Denial to the Evidence of the Scotch Who Made Damaging Statements Against Her.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—On the resumption of the Campbell divorce case to-day Mr. Murphy, counsel for Gen. Butler, defended his client against the allegations that he had been criminally intimate with Lady Campbell. He said Gen. Butler had visited Lady Colin but once, that was on April 13, when there was not a single suggestion of impropriety either by act or word. He denounced the witnesses who had testified for the defence and declared that perjury was rife and stalking abroad. The counsel for Dr. Bird then spoke in his defence. He said the charges which had been brought against his client, including adultery and procuring and concealing a miscarriage, if they were proved, Dr. Bird's credit, reputation and position would be destroyed. He declared it was monstrous that such charges should have been made on such flimsy evidence as the defence had offered. The witness, continued Dr. Bird's counsel, had had three years' coaching by detectives and solicitors; they had become partisans and had testified with an anxiety to convict Lady Colin that was not exceeded by that displayed by her husband. In the trial in 1864 the medical evidence showed that Lady Colin's condition was due to Lord Colin and no suggestion was made of her having had a miscarriage. Dr. Bird, counsel said, attended a concert with Lady Colin, who was taken ill. He (counsel) could not say whether it was true that Lady Colin had leaned her head upon Dr. Bird's shoulder in the cab, but it would be discreditable to the Doctor if he had not allowed a sick patient to rest her head upon his shoulder. Counsel alluded to Dr. Bird's delicate position in attending Lady Colin, who was suffering from a disease the nature of which her servants did not know. When he consented to attend such a case he risked meeting some day with a Colin Campbell sensation. Dr. Bird was not accused until he had brought an action for his fees.

Lady Colin Campbell was then called. She entered the witness box amid profound silence. She was very pale and testified in a slow, distinct voice. She said that until the family meeting at Thurloe-square, in 1883, she had exchanged letters daily with her husband when absent. Before their marriage Lord Colin asked her if she would consent, when married, to their occupying separate rooms. She consented, and Lord Colin asked her not to divulge the fact that he had made this request, but she insisted upon telling her mother. The nature of his illness was unknown to her until May, 1883. She never pressed Lord Colin to marry her, but her mother disliked long engagements. Continuing, Lady Colin said she was educated in Italy and spoke Italian and French before she learned the English language. She sang, painted and wrote books. She was also a journalist. She sang at forty charity concerts, not one of which Lord Colin attended, and she taught night classes of factory girls, visited the poor in the day time and served soup for two hours, and worked daily among the poor of Saffron Hill. Lord Colin knew of every engagement and of her work among the poor and he never objected. She went into society alone at her husband's express wish. In order that the fact of his illness should be unknown he wished it understood that he was engaged in the House of Commons. Lord Colin accepted engagements for both and then desired her to go alone. Her husband went to Scotland in 1882 without a nurse and she attended him. She left him there in order to visit her mother. He was better at that time and pressed her to go. She felt ill the first five days after the consummation of the danger. In November, 1881, she was very ill, and was never free from symptoms until 1885. Her sickness was of varied intensity; sometimes she suffered great pain. She spoke to her husband about her condition and he said:

"It's of no consequence; all women have that sort of thing."

In February, 1882, Lord Colin returned home. On one occasion while sitting beside her couch he began to cry and said that people were very cruel in saying that he ought not to have married on account of his health. The same evening Lord Colin said it was better to be on the safe side, and he told her what precautions to take. She followed his directions and it gave her great pain. She consulted Dr. Bird in November, 1882, and he examined her. In April, 1883, she was seriously ill and was attended by Dr. Bird. Dr. Hicks was twice summoned. An operation was done in October, 1883, and she afterwards improved. She did not know the nature of her own or husband's illness.

Lord Colin urged her to dismiss Rose Baer, who, he said, gossiped about him in the kitchen. She (witness) objected because she thought Rose a good maid. Lord Colin insisted, and she gave Rose a month's notice. She asked O'Neill what Rose had been saying. O'Neill replied: "She said the Duke of Marlborough visited your room at Leigh Court." It was untrue that she (witness) said to O'Neill: "It is a damned lie." Rose denied what she was accused of, cried, and said she was a wicked girl. Witness told Rose that as she had lied so wickedly she (witness) would withdraw the advertisement for a situation for her and would refuse to give her a certificate of character. She dismissed Rose forthwith. She never told the servants how to announce visitors.

She never had the Duke of Marlborough at supper. Sir Philip Miles occupied a room next to her's at Leigh Court. The room on the other side was empty, being kept for her husband. She did not know what room the Duke of Marlborough occupied. She never was at Purfleet. On the Saturday night on which she was accused of having been there with the Duke of Marlborough she went to the theatre with a lady friend. On the Sunday following she took tea with Lady Miles and dined with her mother, Mrs. Blood.

Referring to her visit to Paris in May, 1884, she said she was on her way to Italy. The meeting with the Duke of Marlborough was purely accidental. She was once taken ill at a concert and was in great pain. She drove to Dr. Bird's house and remained until the doctor prepared some medicine for her, when she returned home, arriving there at 11 o'clock. It was untrue that she leaned her head upon Dr. Bird's shoulder while driving home. She gave an absolute denial to the evidence of Rose Baer, Mrs. Duffy, O'Neill and other witnesses, and declared she had never committed adultery with the Duke of Marlborough or any other man. The case was then adjourned.

A Narrow Escape.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—The train over the Wisconsin Central Railroad which should have arrived at 12.50 yesterday afternoon did not come in until 6 o'clock. The passengers told of a wreck at 6.26 in the morning between Neenah and Oshkosh, in which several persons were injured, and at least two badly scorched and burned. The train left Minneapolis at 7.35 Wednesday evening, and when on the down grade near Neenah the rails on a curve spread beneath the train, throwing three or four cars from the track, which were capsized. Two of them caught fire, and it was with difficulty that some of the passengers were extricated in time to save their lives. The railway officials were very reticent about the accident.

The Weir Case.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The case of Dr. Weir, now under arrest here for causing the death of Mabel Clark by criminal assault, is a peculiar one. Neither rape nor manslaughter is extraditable, and there seems to be serious question as to the possibility of making out even a prima facie case of murder. There is a feeling quite general through Michigan that the Lenox County officials have been very negligent in letting Dr. Weir get away, and in failing to grab the train right.

HE IS SUMMONED TO ROME.

HENRY GEORGE'S RIGHT-HAND MAN MUST CALL A HALT.

Father McGlynn Charged With Espousing Heretical Controversy to the Teaching of the Catholic Church.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Rev. Edward McGlynn, D.D., the eloquent and popular pastor of St. Stephen's Catholic Church, has been summoned to proceed at once to Rome and account for his course in the recent labor canvass in this city. In September last Archbishop Corrigan received a letter from the propaganda at Rome complaining of Dr. McGlynn's course, another letter followed and at last a letter arrived which the Pope himself had ordered to be written. It stated that the doctrines which Dr. McGlynn was espousing were contrary to the teachings of the Catholic Church. These letters were shown to Dr. McGlynn and part of them to Henry George. At length the Archbishop prohibited Dr. McGlynn from taking any further part in Henry George's canvass. Nevertheless Dr. McGlynn persisted, and at the great George mass-meeting in Chickering Hall he spoke for an hour in his most eloquent and impressive manner, eulogizing Mr. George as the greatest man of the country, fit not only for Mayor, but for President. During the rest of the campaign Dr. McGlynn was active, and on election day he rode to all the polling places in a carriage with Mr. George, Mr. Powderly and Rev. Dr. Kramer. Following these events came the publication of Archbishop Corrigan's pastoral letter disapproving Henry George's theories. Last Friday the Archbishop received a cable despatch from the Vatican summoning Dr. McGlynn to Rome and ordering him to set out at once. It is not known what course Dr. McGlynn will take, but it is considered quite possible that he will withdraw from the church and become one of the leaders in the labor movement. It is a week since he received the summons and he has not made any sign of complying with its demand. As such a summons is considered imperative and immediate the delay is thought to be significant. The news has caused a sensation in both Catholic and Protestant circles. Dr. McGlynn's popularity is probably more general than that of any clergyman of his creed, and it cannot be doubted that his support of George has been of incalculable value to the labor movement. Dr. McGlynn is 49 years old, a native of New York and a graduate of the College of the Propaganda at Rome. A considerable property which he possessed when he entered the priesthood has melted away through his constant giving to the poor. He has always been noted for liberal views. He refused to join the movement against the Public School system, he was loyal to the Land League when it was frowned upon by the Catholic clergy of this country and he has always lent his voice to movements toward extensions of popular liberty. Both Dr. McGlynn and Henry George decline to discuss the matter in any way. Archbishop Corrigan is in New Haven. To a telegram of inquiry he replied confirming the fact of the summons to Rome.

Lida Smith's Mistake.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Dec. 10.—Lida Smith, a beautiful young lady, living at Boone, was married last week to Burt Richmond of Papillion, the affair having been arranged by mail through a "marriage broker." When the groom arrived the first ardor of meeting was chilled by the fact that he was disfigured by a staring glass eye. Miss Smith was willing, however, to overlook that defect, and they were married and went to Papillion. The morning after their arrival the bride modestly requested to be shown over Richmond's fine stock-farm, but she was informed that he did not possess any, and earned an honest livelihood as porter of the hotel at which they stopped. As she had paid the broker a handsome sum for furnishing her with a rich husband, she was highly indignant, and immediately departed for home.

A Nest of Counterfeiters.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—A special from Cairo, Ill., says: Wednesday night officer Dupuyster of Ballard county, Ky., accompanied by a posse of citizens, broke into a nest of counterfeiters and arrested six of the gang, four men and two women. The gang went to Ballard county from Alton, Ill., a month ago, settling at Fort Jefferson in two old shanties. Several moulds and a large quantity of counterfeited nickles were found, and the prisoners had their pockets full of the stuff. They gave the names of Charles and John Tolten, Thomas Thompson, Lewis Rickets and Mrs. Thompson. The sixth was a young girl 12 years of age.

Cable Car Accident.

CINCINNATI, Dec. 10.—An exciting street-car accident, with a marvellous escape for a dozen passengers, occurred last night on the Walnut Hills Cable Line. A car ascending Gilbert Avenue Hill stopped near the summit to let off a passenger. When it attempted to start both the brake and the grip refused to work, and the car ran backwards with frightful velocity a quarter of a mile to a curve, where it left the track and plunged down an embankment. All on board except a baby were more or less bruised and cut, but very strangely, no bones were broken or other serious injuries sustained.

Abandoned at Sea.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The bark Cremona, bound from Africa for Boston, with a cargo of palm oil and gum, was struck by a hurricane in the Gulf stream on the 7th inst. and had her side smashed in by an immense wave. Her rudder was also broken and she had to be abandoned. The crew were picked up by a pilot boat and brought to New York. The wrecked bark lay in the track sailed by a large number of vessels, and her captain ordered her to be set on fire. The Cremona was owned by N. B. Mansfield, of this city.

Betrayed by Her Brother-in-law.

COBOURG, Dec. 10.—Eliza Cassan, 20 years of age, and of respectable parentage, came to a sad ending on Wednesday. Previous to her death she stated she had been nursing her sister, who is married and living on Gerrard-street in Toronto, and while there her brother-in-law effected her ruin. About two months ago she came to Cobourg to live as a domestic at one of the hotels, which she shortly left, to go to service in a private house. Finally, she lived at a house in University-avenue, where she became a mother, and two days afterwards died. Her remains were removed to Campbellford, where her relatives reside.

Duel in New Jersey.

TRENTON, N.J., Dec. 10.—It is rumored that a druggist and a sporting man of this city fought a duel with pistols yesterday morning opposite this city over the affections of a young woman, and that one of the duelists was wounded in the right shoulder and the other in the left shoulder.

A Forger Sentenced.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Harding E. Nott, who forged a check for $9985 upon the First National Bank, and pretended to be the son of a New Jersey clergyman, was sentenced yesterday to eight years' imprisonment.

Hosting Convicted.

DUBLIN, Dec. 10.—Arthur Moreton, alias Rev. Theodore Keating, was convicted to-day of stealing and sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment at hard labor.

Hanlan's Challenge to Beach.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Hanlan has deposited £100 forfeit for his race with Beach in June next. He stipulates that the race shall be according to the same articles and over the same course as his race with Laycock. Hanlan will sail for Australia from America on receipt of a message from Beach confirming his acceptance of his challenge.

THE CAUSE OF THE REBELLION.

Will the most prejudiced Conservative partizan have the audacity to say that the rebellion in the Northwest would have been probable or even possible if the acts of the Dominion government had not goaded the half-breeds into resistance of their oppression in order to maintain their rights? They had long been shamefully illtreated and all their petitions for redress were ignored. These facts are and were so patent that the Conservative organ of the Government in its issue of July 8th 1885, contained these words and sentiments. The Mail of that date said:—

"Had they (the half-breeds) had votes, like white men, or if, like the Indians, they had been numerous enough to command respect and overawe red tape without doubt the wheels of the office would have revolved for them; but being only Half-breeds, they were put off with an eternal promise, until patience ceased to be a virtue.

"We repeat again that the departmental system under which such callous and cruel neglect of the rights of a portion of the community was possible, was wrong, and should be censured."

Thus the organ of the Dominion government fixes the blame for the rebellion, upon the government, whose "callous and cruel neglect of the rights" of the half-breeds had exasperated them to the point, where "patience ceased to be a virtue." The rebellion was precipitated by something more overt than "callous and cruel neglect." On May 4th 1883 the Prince Albert Colonization Company a pet of the Government, applied for a grant of land which included the parish of St. Louis de Langevin, along the Saskatchewan, the focal point of the insurrection, and on August 4th 1883 the Order-in-Council, making the grant was passed. Next year the company asked the Government to evict the settlers and give them possession, but the Minister refused, saying that the company's title was good and it could do its own eviction. Threatened with the loss of their lands and homes, is it any wonder that the simple half-breeds determined on armed resistance? The Government is clearly responsible for provoking the rebellion, and now they seek to be acquitted because they have removed the ostensible ringleader, who could never have kindled the fires of insurrection if the Government had not prepared the pile and placed the lighted torch in his hands. The Dominion Government cannot escape responsibility for the cause and consequences of the recent rebellion, dodge and disguise the issue as they may.

THE "MAIL" CONDEMNS THE "MAIL."

Not long since, the Toronto Mail, the organ of the Conservative party, was bitten and became badly infected with the "No Popery" rabies. It has been raving and foaming ever since like a mad dog. Before it was thus seized, it did view things in a half-honest light, but now there is nothing which the Mowat Government has done but tends to wrecking Protestantism. To expose the sham nature of the Mail's incendiary howl it is now raising, it is only necessary to compare the ribald rot it is now indulging in with what it said before its present delirium supervened. In the editorial columns of the Mail of December 24th 1884, we find a cordial endorsation of the "Scripture Readings for Schools" adopted by Hon. Mr. Ross, Minister of Education. The Mail of that date says: "The Minister of Education is to be congratulated upon having adopted for use in the Common Schools a series of readings from the Old and New Testaments, together with a brief form of prayer. The objections to the introduction of the Bible in the schools raised by many laymen, and by not a few ministers, were undoubtedly of great weight. To have placed the sacred book in the hands of a teacher, perhaps little expert in Biblical exposition, and to have permitted him to draw from doubtful and disputed passages the meaning most in consonance with his own religious beliefs, would certainly have led to endless strife. But the extracts adopted in this compilation are such as Christians of every denomination have ever agreed to accept as the plain word of God. * * * * Mr. Kerr has done his work out of love, and done it well, avoiding not only those parts upon which the sects have split, but also all those upon which it would be easy to start a raging controversy. * * * * The work has been prepared with the greatest care, and cannot fail to commend itself to parents. Those who object to religious training in schools have simply to write to the master of the school requesting him to omit it in the case of their children. But we venture to think that the Department has succeeded so well in preparing this religious curriculum that few children will be withdrawn from it, and that to the vast majority it will afford spiritual nourishment of transcendent benefit to them through life."

Ladies' and Children's Hosiery and Gloves all sizes and various qualities. J. ERSKINE.

THE average family consumes four tons of coal during the winter, and the extra cost, caused by the Dominion Government tax, at 50 cents per ton, the tariff, amounts to $2.00. This seems a trifling amount, but it would buy a whole set of the new school readers, which the local Conservative candidate and his political associates denounce as a grinding monopoly, and leave a balance of 65 cents for sundries. That is, the tax on one winter's coal will more than buy enough school readers to last a child its entire school life. The tax on coal is held to be all right and the price of school books all wrong. The parent, in buying school books, gets value received, but the parent who pays the coal tax simply pays out money which does not add an ounce to a ton of coal, but goes into the Dominion Treasury to be devoted, at the rate of $500,000 a year, to import immigrants to cackee Canadian workmen out of their places. Something like burning the poor man's candle at both ends.

REFERRING to the Scripture Readings, the Montreal Witness says:—"Whatever be the merits of the abstract question (of the Bible in the Schools) the present book seems to have been evolved out of a generally felt necessity and to have taken its place in the schools on account of its universally recognised adaptation to the purpose in hand."

High Taxation—Nicholls' Hospital.

To the Editor of the Daily Examiner:

MR. EDITOR,—Please publish the following in your daily paper:—

To the Ratepayers of Peterborough,—

In the midst of the indignation which at present exists over the extravagant expenditure of your hard earned money by a spendthrift council, remember that the only remedy against such an evil lies within the reach of each one of you, viz.: In the elections for 1887, and by putting men in the council who look upon the financial interests of the town as being identical with their own. There are men around our council board who pay little or no taxes, who own little or no real estate, and who don't care the snap of their finger whether our taxes are 10 or 25 mills on the dollar. Men who think more about seeing their names figure in the council report than they do about the interests of the men who send them there. I believe our council meetings are looked upon more as occasions of fun and amusement than those of down right earnest business meetings. $57,000 of our money is spent at these jocular gatherings annually, but when that $57,000 is to be paid by us ratepayers at the close of the year with an addition of 5 per cent. (a great part of which, by the way, is an injustice to the poor man) then I say we fail to see where the fun comes in. Many of our councillors are not men of property. What do they care how much our town is burdened with taxes. Take the Nicholls Hospital for instance (to which I will refer again). The amount demanded by the trustees of this institution from the town for this year was $5.000, equal to the interest on $100,000, at 5 per cent. They received $3,000 which sum raised our taxes 1 mill. Next year probably they will demand $10,000, and receive $8,000, which will only raise our taxes 2½ or 3 mills. Pooh! that's nothing to many of our councillors. It's only a matter $8 or $10 a year to them whether our taxes are 15½ or 19½ mills on the dollar. They will willingly pay the difference for the honor and the sake of being a councillor. The city of Toronto was nearly ruined by this class of men. Men were elected to transact the business of the city who had little or no property and who were running the city head and ears into debt. And what did the property owners and ratepayers do? Just what we property owners and ratepayers must do. They elected men to the council of sterling principle, property owners who went there to protect their own interests and estates as well as those of their fellow citizens from the iron grip of high taxation. How did they go about the work? The property owners united every man who owned a house or lot put shoulder to shoulder, selected their men from among themselves and placed them in the council. The result was emancipation from high taxation. Ratepayers you will have to do the same and now is the time for action. Nominate and elect men whom you can trust to spend your own money, men who suffer with you when taxes are high. TAX PAYER.

Free Trade.

The reduction of internal revenue and the taking off of revenue stamps from Proprietary Medicines, no doubt has largely benefitted the consumers, as well as relieving the burden of home manufacturers. Especially is this the case with Green's August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup, as the reduction of thirty six cents per dozen has been added to increase the size of the bottles containing these remedies, thereby giving one-fifth more medicine in the 75 cent size. The August Flower for Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, and the German Syrup for Cough and Lung troubles have, perhaps, the largest sale of any medicines in the world. The advantage of increased size of the bottles will be greatly appreciated by the sick and afflicted, in every town and village in civilized countries. Sample bottles for 10c. remain in the same size. eodw41

On account of my Extremely Low Prices, some people are very skeptical, and designing dealers will tell them that My Goods are Shoddy, etc. Well, be this as it may, I only ask the public to praise me as they prove me, and in the face of this, I boldly make the assertion, that My Stock for Superiority in Texture and Make, surpasses anything in the County of Peterborough, and is only equalled by one Store in Toronto, and surpassed by none in Canada. I defy any man to contradict this, and prove the assertion, if they do, I will forfeit $1,000. Remember, by One Price and Square Dealing to all, I will ascend the Hill of Fame, and as I do, I assure those who help me, that I never wish to meet them coming down. BY WILKIE COLLINS.

XXV.

No second letter arrived; but a telegram was received from the lawyer toward the end of the week.

"Expect me to-morrow on business which requires personal consultation."

That was the message. In taking the long journey to Cumberland Mrs. Linley's legal adviser sacrificed two days of his precious time in London. Something serious must assuredly have happened.

In the meantime, who was the lawyer?

He was Mr. Sarrazin of Lincoln's Inn Fields.

Was he an Englishman or a Frenchman?

He was a curious mixture of both. His ancestors had been among the persecuted French people who found a refuge in England when the priest-ridden tyrant, Louis XIV., revoked the edict of Nantes. A British subject by birth, and a thoroughly competent and trustworthy man, Mr. Sarrazin labored under one investigation: he firmly believed that his original French nature had been completely eradicated, under the influence of our insular climate and our insular customs. No matter how often the strain of the lively French blood might assert itself, at inconvenient times and under regrettable circumstances, he never recognized this foreign side of his character. His excellent spirits, his quick sympathies, his bright mutability of mind—all those qualities, in short, which were most mischievously ready to raise distrust in the minds of English clients, before their sentiments changed for the better under the light of later experience—were attributed by Mr. Sarrazin to the exhilarating influence of his happy domestic circumstances and his successful professional career. His essentially English wife; his essentially English children; his whiskers, his politics, his umbrella, his pew at church, his plum-pudding, his Times newspaper, all answered for him (he was accustomed to say) as an inbred member of the glorious nation that rejoices in hunting the fox and believes in innumerable pills.

This excellent man arrived at the cottage, desperately fatigued after his long journey, but in perfect possession of his incomparable temper, nevertheless.

He offered a proof of this happy state of mind on sitting down to his supper. An epicure, if ever there was one yet, he found the solid part of the refreshments offered to him to consist of a chop. The old French blood curdled at the sight of it—but the true-born Englishman heroically devoted himself to the national meal. At the same time the French vivacity discovered a kindred soul in Kitty; Mr. Sarrazin became her intimate friend in five minutes. He listened to her and talked to her as if the child had been his client, and fishing from the pier the business which had brought him from London. To Mrs. Presty's disgust he turned up a corner of the table-cloth when he had finished his chop, and began to conjure so deftly with the spoons and forks that poor little Kitty (often dull, now, under the changed domestic circumstances of her life) clapped her hands with pleasure, and became the joyous child of the happy old times once more. Mrs. Linley, flattered in her maternal love and her maternal pride, never thought of recalling this extraordinary lawyer to the business that was waiting to be discussed. But Mrs. Presty looked at the clock and discovered that her grandchild ought to have been in bed half an hour ago.

"Time to say good-night," the grandmother suggested.

The grandchild failed to see the subject of bed in the same light. "Oh, not yet," she pleaded; "I want to speak to Mr.——" Having only heard the visitor's name once, and not finding her memory in good working order after the conjuring, Kitty hesitated. "Isn't your name something like Saracen?" she asked.

"Very like!" cried the genial lawyer. "Try my other name, my dear. I'm Samuel as well as Sarrazin."

"Ah, that'll do," said Kitty. "Grandmamma, before I go to bed I've something to ask Samuel."

Grandmamma persisted in deferring the question until the next morning. Samuel administered consolation before he said good-night. "I'll get up early," he whispered, "and we'll go on the pier before breakfast and fish."

Kitty expressed her gratitude in her own outspoken way. "Oh, dear, how nice it would be, Samuel, if you lived with us!" Mrs. Linley laughed for the first time, poor soul, since the catastrophe which had broken up her home. Mrs. Presty set a proper example. She moved her chair so that she faced the lawyer, and said: "Now, Mr. Sarrazin?"

He acknowledged that he understood what this meant by a very unprofessional choice of words. "We are in a mess," he began, "and the sooner we are out of it the better."

"Only let me keep Kitty," Mrs. Linley declared, "and I'll do whatever you think right."

"Stick to that, dear madam, when you have heard what I have to tell you, and I shall not have taken my journey in vain. In the first place, may I look at the letter which I had the honor of forwarding some days since?"

Mrs. Presty gave him Herbert Linley's letter. He read it with the closest attention, and tapped the breast pocket of his coat when he had done.

"If I didn't know what I have got here," he remarked, "I should have said: 'Another person dictated this letter, and the name of the person is Miss Westerfield.'"

"Just my idea!" Mrs. Presty exclaimed. "There can't be a doubt of it."

"Oh, but there is very great doubt of it, ma'am, and you will say so, too, when you know what your severe son-in-law threatens to do." He turned to Mrs. Linley. "After having seen that pretty little friend of mine who has just gone to bed (how much nicer it would be for all of us if we could go to bed, too!) I think I know how you answered your husband's letter. But I ought perhaps to see how you expressed yourself. Have you got a copy?"

"It was too short, Mr. Sarrazin, to make a copy necessary."

"Do you mean you can remember it?"

"I can repeat it word for word. This was my reply: 'I refuse, positively, to part with my child.'"

"No more than that?"

"No more."

Mr. Sarrazin looked at his client with undisguised admiration. "The only time in all my long experience," he said, "in which I have found a lady's letter explained expressing itself strongly in few words. What a lawyer you'd make, Mrs. Linley, when the rights of women invade my profession!"

He got his [illegible] and replaced a [illegible]

Watching him anxiously, the ladies saw his bright face become overclouded with anxiety. "I am the wretched bearer of bad news," he resumed, "and if I fidget in my chair that is the reason for it. Let us get to the point—and let us get off it again as soon as possible. Here is a letter, written to me by Mr. Linley's lawyer. If you will take my advice you will let me say what the substance of it is, and then put it back in my pocket. I doubt if a woman has influenced these cruel instructions, Mrs. Presty; and, therefore, I doubt if a woman influenced the letter which has led the way to them. Did I not say just now that I was coming to the point? And here I am wandering farther and farther away from it. A lawyer is human; there is the only excuse. Now, Mrs. Linley, in two words! Your husband is determined to have little Miss Kitty; and the law, when he applies to it, is his obedient humble servant."

"Do you mean that the law takes my child away from me?"

"I am ashamed, madam, to think that I live by the law; but that, I must own, is exactly what it is capable of doing in the present case. Compose yourself, I beg and pray. A time will come when women will remind men that the mother bears the child and feeds the child, and will insist that the mother's right is the best right of the two. In the meanwhile——"

"In the meanwhile, Mr. Sarrazin, I won't submit to the law."

"Quite right, Catherine!" cried Mrs. Presty. "Exactly what I should do in your place."

Mr. Sarrazin listened patiently. "I am all attention, good ladies," he said, with the gentlest resignation. "Let me hear how you mean to do it."

The good ladies looked at each other. They discovered that it is one thing to set an abuse at defiance in words, and another thing to apply the remedy in deeds. The kind-hearted lawyer helped them with a suggestion. "Perhaps you think of making your escape with the child, and taking refuge abroad?"

Mrs. Linley eagerly accepted the hint. "The first train to-morrow morning starts at half-past 7," she said. "We might catch some foreign steamer that sails from the east coast of Scotland."

Mrs. Presty, keeping a wary eye on Mr. Sarrazin, was not quite so ready as her daughter in rushing at conclusions. "I am afraid," she acknowledged, "our worthy friend sees some objection. What is it?"

"I don't presume to offer a positive opinion, ma'am; but I think Mr. Linley and his lawyer have their suspicions. Plainly speaking, I am afraid spies are set to watch us already."

"Impossible!"

"You shall hear. I travel second-class; one saves money, and one finds people to talk to—and at what sacrifice? Only a hard cushion to sit on! In the same carriage with me there was a very conversible person—a smart young man with flaming red hair. When we took the omnibus at your station here all the passengers got out in the town except two. I was one exception and the smart young man was the other. When I stopped at your gate the omnibus went on a few yards, and set my fellow-traveler at the village inn. My profession makes me sly. I waited a little before I rang your bell; and, when I could do it without being seen, I crossed the road and had a look at the inn. There is a moon to-night; I was very careful. The young man didn't see me. But I saw a head of flaming hair and a pair of amiable blue eyes over the blind of a window, and it happened to be that one window of the inn which commands a full view of your gate. Mere suspicion, you will say! I can't deny it, and yet I have my reasons for suspecting. Before I left London one of my clerks followed me in a great hurry to the terminus, and caught me as I was opening the carriage door. 'We have just made a discovery,' he said; "you and Mrs. Linley are to be reckoned up.' 'Reckoned up' is, if you please, detective English for being watched. My clerk might have repeated a false report, of course. And my fellow-traveler might have come all the way from London to look out of the window of an inn in a Cumberland village. What do you think yourselves?"

It seemed to be easier to dispute the law than to dispute Mr. Sarrazin's conclusions.

which is Scrofulous Disease of the Lungs, is promptly and certainly arrested and cured by this God-given remedy, if taken before the last stages of the disease are reached. From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all

LOCAL NEWS.

A Novel Invention.

A representative of the EXAMINER had the pleasure of seeing a novel specimen of the scientific craft of Peterborough's well known genius, Mr. H. W. Cox, in the shape of a new system of boiler for hot water or steam heating purposes, which is on exhibition for a short time at Messrs. Breese & Bain's showrooms, Crystal Block. Although quite a novelty, this invention is based upon fundamental principles, and is an acquisition of no ordinary merit. Mr. Cox's system, as compared with that of others, is quite revolutionary—in fact, the whole structure involves features which are purely novel. The several important advantages possessed by this invention is all-sufficient proof of its intrinsic value as a superior heater, and therefore will be a guarantee of profit to its possessor. The heating surface consists of a series of steel plate chambers, all of which are in actual contact with the fire. Among the advantages claimed for the Canadian system lies, first of all, the crowning one—economy of fuel—which is supported by the following causes: (1) Proximity of heating surface with the fire; (2) quicker transit of heat by reason of lightness of plates; (3) by reason of each chamber receiving its legitimate share of heat, due to peculiar arrangement of flues, an equal distribution of heat being impossible under any other system; (4) by more complete absorption of heat than under ordinary circumstances; (5.) by rapid circulation due to direct communication of every chamber with supply and return columns respectively. Next in importance comes preservation. The inventor has paid particular attention to this too well known difficulty as regards corrosion while out of use, and meets the exigency by providing proper access to the entire heating surface in order that it might be oiled in the spring, likewise with a view to facilitating the cleaning. A recent demonstration places its merits beyond question. Although the one constructed is of great capacity it occupies less space than an ordinary cook stove, being extremely compact, and likewise neat in appearance. The grate is a novelty of itself, and devised by same inventor, who claims for it the merits of freedom of operation, and effective agitation. The furnace is provided with a magazine or feeder, by which the fire is automatically replenished. Since the countless myriads of those stalwart monarchs of our once luxuriant forests have fallen, at the hands of the burly settler, and since the abundance of fuel, at a nominal cost, is now among the things of the past, a measure that is destined to economize fuel and otherwise conduce to comfort is a boon to the commonwealth, and can be referred to only as a laudable enterprise.

A Peterborough Man Lost.

Information was received by Justice Ludvigsen this week, says the Rock Springs (Wyoming) Independent, that a man named Wm. Martin has been lost in the mountains near Luman's ranch, since the 9th of last month. Martin and a man by the name of Wm. Laingard have been hunting and prospecting along the Sweetwater valley during the past summer, and about the first of the month started for Rock Springs in search of work for the winter. They were on horseback and had a pack horse to carry their outfit. They camped at the stone cabin near Luman's ranch, and on the 9th, Martin started out on foot with a Winchester, twenty-five rounds of cartridge and a knife, to try and bring in some game, as provisions were running low. He did not return and his mate started out to hunt him up, but could find no trace of the lost hunter. He then obtained help from Luman's ranch and renewed the search, but up to the present time the missing man has not been found. He has now been lost sixteen days and there is little doubt but what he has perished during the storms and cold weather that has prevailed during nearly the whole time. Martin was a Canadian, his home being in Peterborough, Ontario.

Orange Blossoms.

On Wednesday, Dec. 8th, at 6 p.m. a very interesting ceremony took place at the residence of Alex. McGregor, Esq., 4th concession, Smith. Mr. Thomas H., son of Wm. Graham, Esq., was united in holy wedlock with Miss Maggie H., daughter of Alex. McGregor, Esq., who gave the bride away. Rev. J. C. Wilson, uncle of the bride, officiated, assisted by Rev. A. E. De St. Dalmas. The bride was very prettily dressed in golden brown satin, with flowing veil and orange blossoms, and looked charming. After numerous congratulations the company repaired to the dining hall, and partook of a sumptuous repast. The evening passed pleasantly, with social conversation, interspersed with music, vocal and instrumental. About 11.30 p.m. the bridal party left for their new home, carrying with them the best wishes of their friends. The presents were numerous and handsome.—[Com.

The Municipal Elections.

A considerable element of liveliness promises to be imported into municipal election contests this year. Some new candidates have announced themselves, while rumour, more or less correctly informed, supplies a liberal batch of "non nominee." In No. 1 Ward it is said that, in addition to Mr. J. L. Hughes, who, it is understood, has announced himself, the names are mentioned of Messrs. Lewis Spry—Reid, Clement, Gordon, etc. In No. 2 Ward Mr. James Stenson is out as a candidate. In No. 3 Ward Mr. John Douglass is understood to be again in the field. In No. 4 Ward there is a large array of candidates mentioned, including Messrs. Frank Mason, Henry Dense, H. J. Stabler, Thos. Rutherford, Wm. Langford. It goes without saying that the present councillors in all the wards will offer themselves for re-election. With the promise of so abundant crop of candidates, the electors will have no reason to complain that a deep interest is not taken in municipal matters, and if they are true to themselves, they can make the council of 1887 one which will represent their wishes and one which will work for their interests. If we have a careless, extravagant and perfunctory council, the electors who choose them are responsible. It is for the electors to decide whether they shall have their affairs wisely and prudently conducted or otherwise.

Mr. Tovell came in for a portion of the good things in having a handsome lukestand given to him. Mr. Tovell replied on behalf of Mrs. Tovell; Mr. Flavelle also spoke a few words. "Blest be the tie that binds," was sung, and the happy group left for their homes.

The Week of Prayer.

The Subjects Appointed For Each Day.

The week of prayer is from the 2nd to the 9th of January; and the following subjects will be specially brought forward for prayer exhortation on the respective days:

SUNDAY, Jan. 2.—Sermons—"O Thou that hearest prayer, unto Thee shall all flesh come."

MONDAY, Jan. 3.—Praise—For rich spiritual blessings; for the long suffering grace of God; for new openings for the spread of the Gospel in many lands; for the preservation of peace among the nations of Europe.

TUESDAY, Jan. 4.—Humiliation—For personal sins, family sins, and national sins; for the spread of unbelief, and of atheism, in various quarters; for the large amount of intemperance, licentiousness, and all immorality; for unseemly divisions and lack of love among those who are brethern in Christ.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 5.—Prayer for the Church—That the people of God may know their high calling and responsibility; that they may be filled with the Spirit, bring forth the fruit of the Spirit, and labor aggressively for the conversion of souls; that grace may be given to all pastors, teachers and preachers.

THURSDAY, Jan. 6.—Prayer for families—That family love may be sanctified—husbands and wives walking together as fellow-heirs of the grace of life, and training their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. That the young may be early drawn to Christ and kept from the evil that is in the world; for the afflicted; for the better observance of the Lord's Day, and the more extensive study of the Word of God.

FRIDAY, Jan. 7.—Prayer for missions—That the Church of Christ may recognize the glory of the commission to "preach the Gospel to every creature," and may feel it a privilege to make sacrifices that it may be fulfilled. That far greater zeal for the divine glory and far more pity for the perishing may be imparted by the Holy Ghost to all the people of God.

SATURDAY, Jan. 8.—Prayer for nations—For the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the nations. For rulers and all in authority; for just and equal laws; for righteous administration; for peace between nations; the removal of international and class antipathies and jealousies. For the abolition of slavery, the opium trade, and all immoral traffic. For the protection of women; for the blessing of God to rest upon all efforts to remove the curse of intemperance; for the cessation of persecution for conscience sake, and of all oppression. For God's ancient people Israel.

SUNDAY, Jan. 9.—Sermons—"Thy Kingdom Come."

Hon. Messrs. Blake and Laurier Accorded a Grand Reception.

TORONTO, Dec. 10.—The Pavilion of the Horticultural gardens capable of containing 5000 persons was crowded last night to listen to addresses on political questions. Hon. Mr. Laurier delivered a great speech, successfully repelling aspersions cast upon his loyalty by his slanderers and convicting the Government of responsibility for the recent rebellion. Mr. Blake also delivered a stirring address. The speakers were accorded an enthusiastic reception.

The Toronto World, (Conservative) speaking of the nature of the audience, says:—"No politician or statesman that ever addressed a public meeting in Toronto has been favored with a more genteel audience than gathered in the Pavilion Music hall last night to listen to Hon. MARVELLOUS CHEAP OVERCOATS!

A recent advantageous purchase made at a time when moderate weather influenced manufacturers to make unusual reductions for the sake of ready cash, now enables me to offer OVERCOATS at prices in many instances actually less than the cost of materials. And as the prices come within reach of all, what can be more serviceable than a good warm Overcoat for a Christmas or New Years present?

LOTS OF OTHER USEFUL HOLIDAY PRESENTS, such as Handsome Coats Furnishings, Linen Shirts, Woollen Underwear of every Grade, Ties, Collars, Cuffs, Gloves, Silk Handkerchiefs, Braces, Studs, Cuff Buttons, &c. Remember no reserve from now until the end of the year. We mean business.

EXPLANATORY!

Or, a Few Facts for This Week.

An Explicit Fact which we wish the public to understand, and that is, that we are selling a pure All Wool Grey Flannel at 18c. per yard.

An Excitable Fact that we are selling Heavy Tweed Effects for Dresses at 8c. per yard which astonish every lady that has seen them.

An Eventful Fact to be remembered is our Ulster and Mantle Cloths and the prices which we are selling them at.

A Fact of Integrity and that is we keep faith with the public in every article we advertised.

A Fact to be Remembered and that is we don't sell or propose to sell goods at cost, nor do we sell you the best All Wool Flannels at 18c. per yard, we sell you the goods as we advertise them. It would never do to sell Flannels that cost 30c. per yard at 18c.

BLACK SILK.—We have the best Black Gros Grain Silk at $1.00 per yard in Canada, and every lady is welcome to compare it with our 75c. silk which is 10c per yard lighter.

THE TRADES FEDERATION.

A Constitution Adopted and Officers Elected—The Next Meeting.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 11.—The Federated Trades met this morning and adjourned sine die, after resolving to enter the new Federated Trades of North America, whose organization will be completed to-day. In the Trades Conference the cigarmakers' and baker labels were adopted and the action of the Boss Brewers Convention at Buffalo in regard to blacklisting union men, and the New York Tribune's treatment of union printers, were denounced. Local trades unions were urged not to appropriate money except for duly authorized strikes.

At the afternoon session of the new Trades Federation a resolution was adopted that while they favored eight hours for a day's work and believed it would be ultimately adopted, it was first necessary to secure nine hours in all branches now working ten hours, and in those trades working more hours to reduce still further. The Conference Committee that met the Knights of Labor Committee submitted a written report purporting to contain what was said and done at Friday's session. It said there had been no agreement, that the Knights of Labor Committee had refused to consider the Trades Union trade and recommended that the Executive Council of the newly organized federation issue an address to the public on the subject of the differences between the organizations. The constitution adopted forms a new federation on a much similar basis to the Knights of Labor, placing the power of the Executive Council, consisting of the five officers elected, who are as follows: Samuel Gompers of New York, President; George Harris of Pennsylvania, First Vice-President; J. W. Smith of Springfield, Ill., Second Vice-President; P. J. McGuire of Philadelphia, Secretary, and E. Edmunston of Washington, Treasurer.

The president's salary was fixed at $1000 and traveling expenses. The new federation adjourned at 6 p.m. to meet at Baltimore on the second Tuesday of December, 1887.

A ROMANTIC AFFAIR.

A Young Man Who Wants to Marry an Indian Girl Seeks Advice.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—A rather novel request was received to-day at the Interior Department from a young man living in Nebraska who wants to marry the daughter of Standing Bear, a Sioux chief. He says who he is and encloses a photograph of the girl, who is very nice looking and who was educated at Carlisle. The young man, however, wishes to go and live on the reservation with his prospective wife and her relations, and for this reason it was necessary to obtain the permission of the Interior Department. White men are not allowed to stay on an Indian reservation unless they have authority from the government to do so, and this young man was obliged to take the government into his confidence. The Secretary of the Interior considered the matter from its practical rather than its sentimental side and concluded that while he could not prevent the young man marrying the girl he could prevent him from going to live with the old folks, and if he was anxious to marry the young woman as he professed to be, he might scratch around and provide her with a home. Secretary Lamar will write a letter to the ambitious lover and while not discouraging the ardor of his love, will suggest the practical view of the situation, which seems to have escaped him. Until there is some change in the present plans of the young man, the paternal benediction of the Interior Department will be withheld.

TRAFFIC ON THE LAKES.

The Season Just Closed Has Been a Remarkably Successful One.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—The season of lake navigation now at an end has been a remarkable one. Its chief claim to distinction is that lake carriers have made money. Last year comparatively few vessels on the lakes made enough to pay their actual running expenses, while this year it is estimated that the average earnings of the lake fleet will show a net profit of 20 per cent. on the capital invested. This showing has so enhanced the value of vessel property that standard tonnage is held at a much higher price than was asked at the beginning of the season, and recent sales have been made at an advance of from 10 to 15 per cent. over insurance valuations.

During the year fifty-seven vessels, aggregating 17,070 registered tons, have passed out of existence, involving a financial loss of $956,000. The list of partial losses amount to $385,000, and as many minor mishaps are not recorded it is safe to estimate that not less than $1,350,000 worth of property has been destroyed on the lakes. The loss of life foots up 126 persons, including those who accidentally fell overboard. Much of the vessel property was not insured. Such a careful computation of the losses sustained by the hull pool places the amount at $400,000. This is not so high an estimate as some that have been made, but it is probably large enough to wipe out the premiums earned on lake hulls by pool companies. Probably the most striking feature of the summary of losses is that more than one-half of the vessels that were totally destroyed belonged to the standard grade.

A YOUNG FRENCHMAN'S FEAT.

He Walks Across Niagara River in a Pair of Big Shoes of His Own Invention.

NIAGARA FALLS, Dec. 11.—Alphonso King, a young Frenchman, recently accepted a bet of $2000 that he could not walk across the Niagara River, a distance of 100 feet, in a pair of shoes of his own invention. This forenoon, accompanied by a few friends, he went down to the ferry landing and prepared for the trip.

The shoes used are shaped like a fish and are 32 inches long by 8 inches wide. They are provided on the bottom with paddles, which are made so as to make a smooth surface when the foot is pushed forward. These pass in a like wont along to their King by the wayside. King moved along at first by a crab of the way, when he got out a few feet he began to move forward in the fish style. He reached the Canada shore in 7 minutes and 20 seconds, the best time he could be made practicable in ordinary waters.

LADY COLIN'S STORY.

CREATES A STRONG PREPOSSESSION IN HER FAVOR.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The atmosphere in the Divorce Court has become a little clearer. The Attorney-General's opening in behalf of the Duke of Marlborough showed a stronger and more confident line of defence than the public had suspected. His argument that the Duke had offered marriage with Lady Aylesford disposed of one of the ugliest prejudices against that poor. The counsel for Capt. Shaw, Sir Wm. Butler and Dr. Bird had an easy task. The general opinion is that there is no real case against any one of these three. Lady Colin's appearance in the witness box certainly creates a strong preposession in her favor. Her testimony is given clearly and simply. Her denial of the charges against her are direct, unequivocal and unhesitating. Her manner is that of a witness telling the truth, and if she has to admit any fact that seems damaging she admits it frankly. Lady Colin's remarkable power of rapid and picturesque expression proves to be of much advantage to her, for she makes the jury see things as she saw them. Her examination and cross-examination are likely to last over Monday. The Pall Mall Gazette adds much to the general hilarity by daily exhortings to its contemporaries against indecency. The rebukes would certainly come well from some cleaner mouth. Nearly all the papers except the Times still publish abominable reports.

When the court opened to-day Lady Campbell resumed her testimony. She denied having ever spoken to the nurse, Mrs. Duffy, about the methods persons adopted to prevent maternity. Witness said she refused to continue relations with Lord Colin because of the physical and moral suffering it entailed upon her. She told Lord Colin if he ever attempted to compel a continuance of the relations he would find her dead on the following morning. Witness added that she told Lord Colin further that she preferred to live apart from him under the same roof to avoid scandal, but declared that if there was to be a separation it must be open and public. She would not permit Lord Colin's family to give any version of the affair that suited them. Witness was never accused by her husband of any impropriety until the family meeting in 1883.

On cross-examination she said the book written by her was a child's book. It was illustrated by Kate Greenaway and eight editions of it had been printed. Witness began writing for the Saturday Review in 1883. She wrote three articles every week. Witness really meant that she would commit suicide when she said she would be found dead next morning if Lord Colin ever attempted to compel her to occupy the same apartment with him. She admitted having gone into society once while suffering, and that she wrote in her diary, "enjoyed myself hugely." She made up her household expense book mostly on Saturdays. (At this point one of the plaintiff's household expense books was produced. It showed that no entries were made on Saturday, Aug. 12, but that they were made on Monday, Aug. 14.)

Witness said the Duke of Marlborough still visited her father, mother and brother. She denied the statement made by one of her servants, that being notified of the arrival of a guest while she was in the drawing room with Gen. Butler, she went to the door and said to the maid "not at home." It was Lord Colin himself who selected Dr. Bird to attend witness.

The judge decided that Mr. Finlay, defendant's counsel, was entitled to see the copies of Lady Colin's diaries, but that some of the entries ought not to be published. One of the entries read described somebody's evening party as a "ghastly affair," and another entry pronounced another evening party as "deadly dull."

MEDICAL MEN MYSTIFIED

By Two Strange Cases That Have Developed in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—About two weeks ago Harry Gibson, a hotel bell-boy, was taken to the insane department of the county jail suffering from a malady which seemed at times to resemble hydrophobia. It cannot be ascertained that young Gibson was ever bitten by a dog either rabid or otherwise, yet he snapped his teeth and growled at people, frothed at the mouth, and in every way gave evidence of suffering from rabies. It was at first supposed his malady was brought on from a serious injury he received from falling and striking his head on an iron staircase. A new and mysterious phase of the case has developed and is worrying the physicians. Before Gibson's removal to the jail he was cared for at the hotel and a porter named John Helland detailed to watch him. He would argue with his attendant in a most rational manner, saying there was no necessity for his being watched, but the moment the attendant turned his back Gibson would leap upon him and endeavor to bite him.

After Gibson's removal Helland was relieved from the duty of caring for the patient. He went to his room and spent the next forenoon in sleep. When he went to work he complained to his fellow porters of feeling ill, but thought nothing serious of it. The day following, however, he was attacked with the same symptoms manifested by young Gibson, and became violently mad and unmanageable. He frothed at the mouth and acted like a person having hydrophobia, though at time he was perfectly rational. He declares he was not bitten by Gibson, and had not been bitten by a dog. The attacks recur at regular intervals each day. The cases will be thoroughly investigated.

COLLAPSE OF A ST. LOUIS BUILDING.

The Ruins Take Fire and Two Men are Burned to Death.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 11.—The upper floor of Shapleigh & Cottrell's hardware establishment fell with a crash this afternoon, under the heavy weight of agricultural implements. It carried the second floor with it, and soon the building was in a blaze, fire having communicated from overturned stoves. In a short time the roof of an adjoining building fell, soon followed by the toppling of a side wall.

There were fifty employes in the building at the time of the crash, and it was feared that some of them had been injured, but all have been accounted for but two, and they, it is thought, have escaped. The loss will approximate $800,000, with $300,000 insurance.

Up to a late hour to-night Arthur W. Palmer, one of the clerks in the store, and John Mahan, one of the porters, had not been heard from nor had they reached their respective homes. It is therefore believed that their dead bodies are in the ruins. The search has not yet been commenced, the ruins being too hot, but water is being poured upon them with plug streams and to-morrow a thorough search will be commenced. One of the employes, named Furlong, had a leg badly crushed, but nobody else received injuries worthy of mention.

THE POLICY OF DISCORD.

In pursuance of a policy of misrepresentation and appeal to prejudice and passion, it is made to appear that Mr. Blezard, of East Peterborough, is disloyal and an apologist for rebellion. In the last session of the Ontario Legislature the Speech from the Throne contained a paragraph congratulating the country on the suppression of the rebellion, and praising the volunteers for their bravery and patriotic spirit. In order to make political capital for the Dominion Government, Mr. Meredith moved an amendment to the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, to which Mr. Sol. White moved a partizan amendment, the effect of whose adoption would have been an endorsation of the evil policy of the Dominion Government in the North-West, whose evil consequences provoked the rebellion. Mr. Blezard and other supporters of the Government very properly voted against this amendment, because he and they refused to be a party to whitewashing the Dominion Government and condemning their misrule of the North-West that led to such disastrous consequences. If the Ontario Legislature could have been tricked into acquitting the Dominion Government of the charges of misgovernment of the North-West, for which they have yet to answer to the people, this act would have been paraded throughout the length and breadth of the land, to show that the people did not disapprove of that misgovernment. The amendment referred to was only a trick to secure a snap verdict in favor of the deeply guilty Dominion Government. The irritation against Mr. Blezard arises from the fact that he refused to lend himself to the perpetration of a partizan trick, for the purpose of clearing the Dominion Government from guilt. Mr. Meredith aspires to be the ruler of Ontario, but his actions and his declared intentions show that he would rule this Province as the lieutenant of Sir John Macdonald. In all Sir John's assaults on the rights and interests of this Province, Mr. Meredith and his Provincial followers have gone hand and glove with him. In the Boundary matter Mr. Meredith and his followers played traitor to the interests of Ontario, and had no word of condemnation for the Dominion Government, even when it went so far as to send down from Winnipeg a detachment of volunteers to shoot down Ontario officials who were holding the territory of this Province. And, to crown all, the members of the Ontario Legislature are called on to acquit the Dominion Government for their odious and oppressive misgovernment of the Northwest, and because they refused to do so, they are vilified and abused by the partizan traitors to the Province of Ontario.

THE Brockville Times, dreadfully addicted to Toryism, has the modesty to assert that "the policy of Sir John A. Macdonald, as leader of the Conservative party, has been one that has fitted into every groove, for the laboring man, mechanic, and everybody else." It adds that if the workingmen don't get high wages and constant employment, it is their own fault. If the N. P. doesn't give them a job, let them take to the woods and clear up a farm. The Times hints that there are too many mechanics anyway, and that some of them had better be employed grubbing stumps or breaking prairie sods. It is on this principle, no doubt, that the Conservative organs can defend an expenditure of half a million a year by the Dominion Government to bring in immigrants to drive Canadian mechanics to the woods.

FROM the year 1867 to 1885 the expenditure by Ontario on public buildings for the benefit of the people has amounted to $4,924,201. From 1867 to 1871 there were spent $1,213,773, or an average of $303,443 per year. During the fourteen years of the Mowat Administration the total expenditure on public buildings was $3,710,428, or an average per year of $207,459. The greater part of this expenditure was incurred on buildings whose maintenance involves an expenditure that goes directly to relieve the people from the burden of local taxation.

Ingratitude and Selfishness.

SERMON BY LAYMAN.

(Written for The Examiner.)

There is no baser quality in human nature than ingratitude and selfishness. It overshadows and consumes a man's whole life. It deprives him of honour and friendship. It shuts up his heart to every noble impulse. It loses him the esteem of others. His soul is dwarfed and dried up within him. He seeks for nothing and he works for nothing but himself. No matter how he gets wealth, if he can get it he is satisfied, although others suffer. This base quality belongs not only to the moneyed man and the miser, but it prevades domestic life. It turns the son against the father. It sacrifices every filial affection. It destroys every filial duty. And it often leaves the poor old father and mother victims of the son's selfishness, and turns them out helpless and alone upon the highway, dependent upon others for that comfort and support which was theirs by right in their own happy home. It is bad enough to witness the oppressions of the stranger, but sad indeed is the sight of the son plotting and scheming to coax or force away from his aged parents that for which they have worked so hard, and which they fain had hoped would be the stay of their after life when they could work no more. Upright and honest themselves they certainly had a right to look for gratitude and faith and trust in those who were so near and whose welfare they had so much at heart. But when the son has gained his end and is safe in the possession of all, and his aged parents are no longer able to call the old home their own, then comes the changed and human nature gives one more witness of its baseness and depravity. For the sake of gaining all and enjoying all, his father and mother are rudely put to the door and told to be gone, or if they are allowed to remain, it is to be in bondage and oppression and unhappiness and misery. All that is left them now is present sorrow and the recollection of the past, when they worked and toiled to make a home for themselves and leave something for those who came after. But their lives were then peaceful and happy, their sleep was undisturbed by care or trouble and their days were passed in pleasantness and peace. Such is life. And such is human nature. Domestic ingratitude and selfishness are the worst of all. They have not one single redeeming feature. They are an outrage upon civilization and nature. Christianity blushes at the shame of a child taking advantage of and robbing his own father and mother. And God will assuredly avenge the sin, and the great day of judgment will witness the awful punishment which will follow after. I could, if I had space, relate many instances of such conduct. How the aged parents gave up all to their son and how the son and his wife ill-treated and abused them, and either turned them out upon the highway or led them lives of want and misery in their own happy home. And I could relate at least two instances in which the old father and the owner of a fine farm and many horses and cattle, had to beg his way from door to door, while his son and wife lived in the old homestead in affluence and independence. And I could tell of another son who dragged his poor, aged father away and tried to get him into a poor house, that father who had given all to him on the faith of a promise which was never kept.

What! no! can it be they've driven their fa thers, hel less and old
Oh, God! may their crime be forgiven, to perish out here in the cold.
Oh, Heaven! I am saddened and weary, see the tears how they course down my cheeks,
Oh, this world is lonely and weary, and my heart for relief vainly seeks,
For I'm old and I'm helpless and feeble, and the days of my youth have gone by,
When over the hills to the poor-house I wandered alone there to die.

Ah, me! on that dear old step yonder, I've sat with my bab s on my knee,
No father was happier or fonder than I with my little ones three.
The boys both so rosy and chubby, and Tillie with prattle so sweet,
God knows how their father has loved them, but they've driven him out in the street.

It's long years since my Mary was taken, my faithful and affectionate wife,
Since then I'm forlorn and forsaken, and the light has died out of my life
The boys grew up to manhood, I gave them the farm, save and more,
I gave them the house they were born in, and now I'm turned out from its door.

Oh, children, loved children, yet hear me, I've journeyed along on life's stage,
With hope that you all would be with me, to comfort and cheer my old age,
My life blood I'd gladly have given to shield and protect you, but hark!
Though my heart breaks, I'll say it, you've driven me out here to die in the dark.

But perhaps they'll live happier without me, farewell, dear old home, farewell,
Each pathway and tree here about me, some memory precious can tell,
Well, the flowers will bloom as bright as ever, and the birds sing as sweet as morn,
When over the hills to the poor house the old man, next spring, shall be borne.
For I'm old, and I'm helpless and feeble, and the days of my youth have gone by,
When over the hills to the poor house I wandered alone, there to die.

But there are other ways of showing ingratitude and selfishness. Turn which way you will, you will see evidences of it on every hand; so much so that it is safe to say the world is full of it, and many people at length become so disgusted with the return which is made to their acts of kindness, that they almost resolve to give up all attempts to help others, and so leave them to their fate. Take ten cases of kindness and charity, and out of all these, I don't believe you will find more than two of them who exhibit or feel one particle of gratitude, or who, in their hearts, thank the giver for what he has done. Indeed, so selfish are some people, that if you cease to give, you are worse than if you had never given at all. It is a pleasure to help the needy, but that pleasure is all destroyed when you get a bad return for your kindness. People who give freely see enough of ingratitude to make them feel as if they would never give again. Nevertheless it is the duty of those who can do so to help others in need. It is not only a civil, but it is a religious duty, and it is always better, if you are deceived, to be on the safe side and run all risks, rather than refuse the deserving and grateful few. Let us remember that the people are not all bad in this world. There are many good, trustworthy and deserving persons, whose good qualities serve to redeem the whole of mankind from the charge of faithlessness and deceit, and whose characters shine with all the more brilliancy by comparison with those around them. And, moreover, many of those who do show ingratitude for favors bestowed upon them, do it not so much from inherent badness as from thoughtlessness and folly. They feel their obligations, but from a feeling of weakness and false pride, do not give thanks as fully and as truly as they might do, acknowledging all the while the value of the services rendered them, only wishing that some day they may have it in their power to perform greater services in return. We frequently read of wayfarers and wanderers being taken into houses and treated hospitably and kindly, and who repaid their hosts with the blackest ingratitude and baseness. And we have heard of others who, under the plea of poverty and want, have gained an entrance into the household, the better to rob and murder. And, if it were necessary, instances innumerable might be given of good intentions being abused, and of kindness and charity being taken advantage of, and thus left unacknowledged and forgotten. But we have also heard of the reverse of all this ingratitude. Of persons who have acted nobly and manfully, who, in some instances, have made a double return to their friends and sometimes rescued them from heavy misfortunes and losses. The following fact will but illustrate my meaning:—A man, through others, lost so heavily that he saw no other alternative but to close up his business and give up all and with his family go out upon the world to begin life again. Before doing so, however, he thought he would apply to an old acquaintance for relief. When he did so the latter said your father once helped me out of a similar trouble, and without his kindness I should have been ruined. I can now repay the son for what the father did for me, and whatever money you require is at your service, and you can repay me when you can do so without inconvenience. And thus that debt of gratitude was satisfied, and the giver felt as much happiness over it as did the receiver, who went home with a light heart and made the hearts of his wife and children glad also. The feeling of love and gratitude in some animals, especially the horse and dog, exists to as great an extent as with the best of mankind. The dog is well said to be man's truest friend. He never deserts a kind master and he has been known to lie down and die upon his grave. Even the lion and the elephant are grateful for kindness shown them, and their eyes brighten and they look pleased as their kind keeper waits upon them. Gratitude is a noble thing, and it often times repays a free giver, and encourages him to further acts of kindness. It need not be demonstrative. It shows itself in other ways. And when it exists none will doubt its sincerity.

R. W. MUNCASTER.

The Evil Genius.

A DOMESTIC STORY.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

[SUPPOSED TO CONTAIN THE ORIGINAL MATTER TO TAKE my child with me," Mrs. Linley persisted, "who has any right to prevent me?"

Mr. Sarrazin reluctantly reminded her that the father had a right. "No person, not even the mother, can take the child out of the father's custody," he said, "except with the father's consent. His authority is the supreme authority—unless it happens that the law has deprived him of his privilege, and has expressly confided the child to the mother's care. Ha!" cried Mr. Sarrazin, twisting round in his chair and fixing his keen eyes on Mrs. Presty, "look at your good mother; she sees what I am coming to."

"I see something more than you think," Mrs. Presty answered. "If I know anything of my daughter's nature, you will find yourself before long on delicate ground."

"What do you mean, mamma?"

Mrs. Presty had lived in the past age when persons occasionally used metaphor as an aid to the expression of their ideas. Being called upon to explain herself she did it in metaphor to her own entire satisfaction.

"Our learned friend here reminds me, my dear Catherine, of a traveler exploring a strange town. He takes a turning in the confident expectation that it will reward him by leading to some satisfactory result—and he finds himself in a blind ally, or, as the French put it (I speak French fluently) in a cool de sack. Do I make my meaning clear, Mr. Sarrazin?"

"Not the least in the world, ma'am."

"How very extraordinary! Perhaps I have been misled by my own vivid imagination. Let me endeavor to express myself plainly—let me say that my fancy looks prophetically at what you are going to do, and sincerely wishes you well out of it. Pray go on."

"And pray speak more plainly than my mother has spoken," Mrs. Linley added. "As I understand what you said just now, there is a law, after all, that will protect me in the possession of my little girl. I don't care what it costs; I want that law."

"May I ask first," Mr. Sarrazin stipulated, "whether you are positively resolved not to give away to your husband in this matter of Kitty?"

"Positively."

"One more question, if you please, on a matter of fact. I have heard that you were married in Scotland. Is that true?"

"Quite true."

Mr. Sarrazin exhibited himself once more in a highly unprofessional aspect. He clapped his hands and cried "Bravo!" as if he had been in a theater.

Mrs. Linley caught the infection of the lawyer's excitement. "How dull I am!" she exclaimed. "There is a thing they call 'incompatibility of temper'—and married people sign a paper at the lawyer's and promise never to trouble each other again as long as they both live. And they're readier to do it in Scotland than in England. That's what you mean—isn't it?"

Mr. Sarrazin found it necessary to reassume his professional character.

"No, indeed, madam," he said, "I should be unworthy of your confidence if I proposed nothing better than that. You can only secure the sole possession of little Kitty by getting the help of a judge——"

"Get it at once," Mrs. Linley interposed.

"And you can only prevail on the judge to listen to you," Mr. Sarrazin proceeded, "in one way. Summon your courage, madam. Apply for a divorce."

There was a sudden silence. Mrs. Linley rose, trembling, as if she saw—not good Mr. Sarrazin—but the devil himself tempting her. "Do your hear that?" she said to her mother.

Mrs. Presty only bowed.

"Think of the dreadful exposure!"

Mrs. Presty bowed again.

The lawyer had his opportunity now. "Well, Mrs. Linley," he asked, "what do you say?"

"No—never!" She made that positive reply and disposed beforehand of everything that might have been urged, in the way of remonstrance and persuasion, by leaving the room. The two persons who remained, sitting opposite to each other took opposite views.

"Mr. Sarrazin, she won't do it."

"Mrs. Presty, she will."

CHAPTER XXVI.

Punctual to his fishing appointment with Kitty, Mr. Sarrazin was out in the early morning, waiting on the pier.

Not a breath of wind was stirring; the lazy mist lay asleep on the farther shore of the lake. Here and there only the dim tops of the hills rose like shadows cast by the earth on the faint gray of the sky. Nearer at hand, the waters of the lake showed a gloomy surface; no birds flew over the colorless calm; no passing insects tempted the fish to rise. From time to time a last left leaf on the wooded shore dropped noiselessly and died. No vehicles passed as yet on the lonely road; no voices were audible from the village; slow and straight, wreaths of smoke stole their way out of the chimneys and lost their vapor in the vapory sky. The one sound that disturbed the sullen repose of the morning was the tramp of the lawyer's footsteps as he paced up and down the pier. He thought of London and its ceaseless traffic, its roaring high tide of life in action, and he said to himself, with the strong conviction of a town-bred man: "How miserable this is!"

A voice from the garden cheered him just as he reached the end of the pier for the fiftieth time, and looked with fifty-fold intensity of dislike at the dreary lake.
